CITY AND COUNTY COMMISSION IS NAMED TO CURB DELINQUENCY

19 Appointed to Board to Draft and Direct Program for the Prevention of Youthful Crimes.

Appointment of a Metropolitan St. Louis Youth Commission to prepare and direct a program for the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency was announced yesterday by Mayor Raymond R. Tucker and County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews.

Establishment of such a commission was urged last March in a report made at the Mayor's request by the Social Planning Council. The original recommendation covered only the city and was for a commission of 18 members appointed by the Mayor, but this was expanded to include St. Louis county.

The commission appointed yesterday contains 19 members. Mayor Tucker and Supervisor Matthews jointly chose Mrs. Arthur Stockstrom of Kirkwood, member of the Social Planning Council and chairman of the St. Louis County Welfare Advisory Board, as chairman of the new commission. Each then appointed nine members to the commission.

Task of Commission.

The commission will be asked to develop studies and reseach programs designed to determine the nature of delinquency and its causes, and to list the existing services and facilities designed to prevent delinquency or to treat delinquent children.

It will co-operate with existing agencies and endeavor to assist them in attaining more efficient and effective performance, the announcement said. Whether a full-time staff will be appointed will be determined by the commission after its studies and after recommendations have been made by it to the Mayor and the County Supervisor.

St. Louis Members.

Commission members from St. Louis are:

Gilbert Weiss, an attorney, 3735 Utah place, acting supervisor, Court of Domestic Relations; Edwin B. Meissner Sr., 6244 Forsyth boulevard, former police commissioner who made a preliminary report on juvenile problems for the Mayor;

G. D. Brantley, 4001 Cook avenue, principal, Sumner High School; William A. Webb, 6266 Nottingham avenue, executive secretary, Central Trades and Labor Union; Oscar A. Ehrhardt, 5966 Wanda avenue, executive secretary, CIO Industrial Union Council;

James W. Symington, 310 North Skinker boulevard, an attorney; Lt. Adolph C. Jacobsmeyer, 3108 North Taylor avenue, commander, juvenile division, police department;

Daniel J. Sullivan, 4113 Koeln street, administrator, Board of Children's Guardians, and Dr. Helen E. Nash, 4125 Margaretta avenue, member of the board of the Family and Children's Service and of the Nursery Foundation.

County Members.

County members are:

Arthur B. Shepley Jr., 20 Overhill drive, Clayton, member, Social Planning Council; the Rev. Patrick J. Molloy, Kinlock Park, active in child welfare work in the county; Mrs. Irvin Bettman Jr., 12 Brazilian court, Clayton, Social Planning Council;

Maurice Mendle, 748 Cella road, Ladue; Jack Keith, 9 Forest Glen lane, Kirkwood, director, St. Louis Council, Boy Scouts; the Rev. O. H. Fisher, 136 West Felton street, Lemay, pastor, Longwood Baptist Church, a member, St. Louis County Child Welfare Board;

Ralph L. Smith, chief probation officer, St. Louis county; Albert DuBois, superintendent of police, St. Louis county, and Miss Mary Schulte, 7715 Stanford avenue, University City, social worker, Washington University.

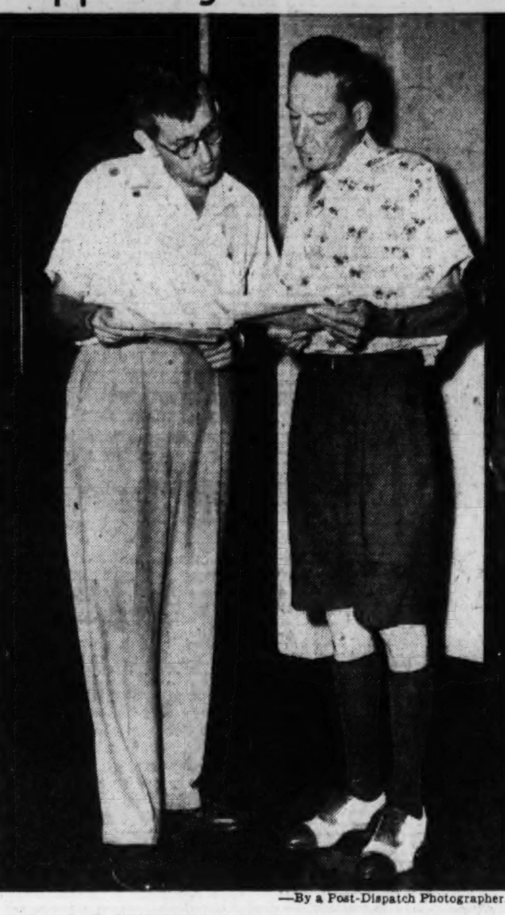
Appealing Office Attire



—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

JASPER R. VETTORI (right), first associate prosecuting attorney, who wore Bermuda shorts and a printed sports shirt to the office yesterday, conferring with SIDNEY FABER, assistant prosecuting attorney.

BERMUDA SHORTS WORN TO WORK BY PROSECUTOR'S AID

First Associate Prosecuting Attorney Jasper R. Vettori wore Bermuda shorts and a sport shirt to the office yesterday thereby conspicously giving his stamp of approval to Mayor Raymond R. Tucker's campaign for cooler summer uniforms for traffic patrolmen.

With the air of a man whose knees have been bare most of his life, Vettori jauntily wore the brown shorts, a colorful green, white and brown shirt, open at the neck, knee-length brown stockings and brown and white shoes.

"It is very hot weather," said Vettori by way of explanation. "This outfit is comfortable at home, so I thought I'd wear it to the office. Furthermore, since the Mayor suggested a modified summer uniform for traffic officers and the police department wanted some public official to break the ice by wearing shorts to work, I decided to help.

"I'd be delighted to wear this attire in the courtroom."

COLD FRONT HALTS IN IOWA, MORE HEAT FORECAST

St. Louisans were promised relief from a 13-day heat wave this weekend but a cold front stalled in southern Iowa, Weatherman Harry F. Wahlgren reported sorrowfully last night. And the new forecast: More hot weather.

Thundershowers, however, brought temporary relief yesterday to Webster Groves, where Wahlgren lives. Temperatures dropped from 92 at 6 p.m. to 72 by 7:40 p.m. Rainfall, accompanied by strong winds with gusts of 25 to 30 miles an hour, totaled .2 of an inch there. Heavy showers also were reported in the O'Fallon park area and Kirkwood.

Strong winds blew down four trees in scattered areas of Webster Groves. A 30-foot oak tree crashed through a large window in the first floor of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Serth, 633 Lockwood court. The tree knocked a hole in the roof and drove a branch through a bedroom floor, causing considerable damage.

An electric transformer in the 500 block of Garden avenue, Webster Groves, caught fire during the storm and disrupted service briefly in an area near the Old Orchard business district.

BOY, 13, MISSING SINCE THURSDAY, IS FOUND HANGED

Body of Gary Hartzke of Kirkwood Discovered Suspended From Tree by Jumping Rope.

The body of 13-year-old Gary Hartzke, who had been missing from his Kirkwood home since Thursday morning, was found yesterday suspended by a rope from a tree on the rear of a lot in the 900 block of North Kirkwood road, Kirkwood.

Kirkwood police were trying to trace the ownership of the rope, a multi-colored skipping rope, since the boy had no sisters who might have possessed such a rope. They also were questioning friends and acquaintances who might be able to throw some light on the tragedy.

Sgt. J. Virgil Sutton of the Kirkwood police department, who found the body, said the rope by which the body was suspended from a tree limb was securely knotted around the boy's neck.

A small brick retaining wall around the base of the tree is one and one-half feet high and encircles the trunk at a distance of about two feet. The boy's feet were just brushing the ground.

No evidence of any scuffling was found in the vicinity and there were no visible marks of violence on the body, which was clad in the same tan shorts the boy was wearing when he left his home at 114 East Maple avenue about 10 o'clock Thursday.

Raymond Hartzke, the boy's father, said Gary was in good spirits, a fact confirmed by close friends of the boy, and that he knew of no recent incident that might have upset or disappointed him. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

The lot, about one and one-half blocks due south of the Hartzke home, had been visited by Sgt. Sutton Friday in his search for the missing boy. It was the officer's opinion, based on the condition of the body, that the boy was dead at that time and that Sutton had been within 10 or 12 feet of the body without seeing it. The elm tree from which it was suspended is

Satellites May Help Determine Why World Is Getting Warmer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (INS)—The Weather Bureau disclosed today it is joining in the attempt to send a man-made satellite above the earth in hope of finding out why the world is getting warmer.

Weather Bureau chief Francis W. Reichelderfer said some scientists suspect temperatures are going up because the sun may be giving out more heat than it did a generation or so ago.

He said in an interview:

"There are indications that the temperatures throughout the world are one or two or three degrees warmer than they were 10 or 20 years ago. At least we suspect that's true although we don't have complete records for all parts of the earth.

"Actually that doesn't mean that summers are becoming warmer—although this summer may change our minds about that.

"It means that winters are not as cold as they once were."

Reichelderfer said this was one of the reasons the Weather Bureau is "quite enthusiastic" about the daring plan to launch a satellite which will circle the earth at an altitude of 200 miles and a speed of 18,000 miles an hour.

He explained: "We don't really know whether this warming up is due to a change in output of radiation from the sun—whether the stove is getting hotter—or whether it is due to some change in the composition of the upper atmosphere through which the sun's rays must pass or both."

The weathermen believe that instruments aboard the unmanned space craft will send back information that can help unlock some of these mysteries. Reichelderfer said his bureau has been in on the secret planning for the project and "will certainly participate in the meteorological aspects."

DUBOIS EXPLAINS POLICE TRAINING IN COUNTY AFTER BECK'S CRITICISM

Force to Get Complete Program, Says Director—Reasons for Removing Riot Guns, 60 m.p.h. Top Speed.

A complete training program for members of the St. Louis county police department is being drawn up, Superintendent Albert E. DuBois said yesterday.

His statement followed assertions by former county police Lt. Roy E. Beck that training procedures are unsatisfactory and that there is "utter confusion" within the department. Beck contended training procedures reflect insufficient experience in police work.

Meanwhile, another resignation from the force was announced last night by Superintendent DuBois. He said Patrolman Lyle S. Lewis had written a letter saying he was quitting to obtain better working conditions and a higher salary. DuBois said he learned from Lewis that he had taken a job with a manufacturing plant which has a five-day week.

Lewis, a deputy sheriff for 22 months before joining the department July 1, became the ninth man to leave the new police department. He lives at 3308 South Gordon avenue, Overland.

Beck, who resigned Last Friday, said too much weight is being given to education as compared with experience in police work and too much emphasis placed on theory rather than practical considerations.

Practices Beck Assails.

As an example he assailed instructions to officers to drive no more than 60 miles an hour in the course of a chase despite the lack of enough cars to make a sector plan fully effective.

He also criticized removal of all riot guns from police cars and placing them in the department office, despite a possible need for them in an emergency. He said also that most officers objected to use of "spotters" to check their activities during hours on duty.

DuBois said both the 60-mile-an-hour speed limit for officers and removal of the riot guns from cars were temporary. The former is a safety precaution until police get more experience and training in high-speed pursuit, he said.

Explains Removal of Guns.

Removal of riot guns from cars was partly a safety measure because of the need for further training of police in handling them, and partly because some weapons had become rusted or otherwise neglected and need cleaning, he said.

He conceded that checks are made on the department's policemen when they are on duty, but said this is a common practice and is warranted. He said he is familiar with the problems of policemen in the field and rides various territories from time to time.

Beck was a deputy sheriff for eight years, and a Marine Corps military policeman in World War II. He was in charge of the department's field forces in the southern part of the country.

Says Rank Went to Inexperienced

Dissatisfaction with what he called the "inexperienced and unqualified" sergeants and lieutenants appointed to the force was expressed last night by Oliver H. Lederberger, one of the seven patrolmen who have resigned within the last three weeks.

"We expected that the experienced men would get at least temporary appointments to the positions of rank, but just the reverse was true," Ledergerber told the Post-Dispatch.

As an example of the "confusion and inefficiency" he said existed in the department, the former deputy sheriff said seven reports he had turned in one day were lost at headquarters. On another occasion he said he was forced to make three telephone calls to headquarters to get a towing record made out on a stolen automobile he had recovered.

He declared an order that only one officer be assigned to patrol cars resulted in danger to both the officer and any lawbreaker he might have to apprehend.

Ledergerber, who joined the sheriff's force in 1942, said he had resumed work as a building contractor. He lives at 306 Weiss avenue, Lemay.

HURRICANE PASSES PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Weather Bureau said late tonight that Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands no longer are in danger from hurricane Connie. The threat passed the islands an hour before midnight, the official report said.

The bureau bulletin said the eye of the hurricane, roaring west-northwest across the open Atlantic north of here, had passed about 100 miles north of San Juan. Hurricane warnings were ordered lowered.

The Weather Bureau said the only danger here might be flood conditions in the next 12 hours. As the storm passed, the Weather Bureau said, five inches of rain deluged this capital.

INDICATION U.S. MAY CONSIDER PULLING TROOPS OUT OF KOREA

One Reason Is 660,000-Man ROK Army—Forces Would Be Sent to Japan and Other Pacific Bases.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Top United States policy makers are expected to take a new look soon at the possibility of withdrawing American forces from South Korea. If this is decided upon, they would be pulled back to Japan and other forward bases in the Pacific.

Several recent developments have combined to strengthen speculation within the Defense and State Departments that withdrawal may prove possible in the months ahead. The issue is controversial, however, and is sure to be fully debated in the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the National Security Council when it is actively raised.

The developments bearing on the situation are these:

1. Increasing evidence — including the current American-Red Chinese talks at Geneva — that Red China is co-operating with Russia's policy of easing East-West tensions. The prospects of war in the Formosa area have declined steadily in recent months. The dangers of some new military aggression by the Reds in the Korean area are rated very low. The Far Eastern front from Indochina through Korea seems to be stabilizing.

Gen. Taylor's Position.

2. The introduction of a new personality into the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Maxwell Taylor, reportedly a vigorous advocate of redeployment of United States forces in the Korea-Japan area, replaced Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway recently. The idea of getting its troops out of Korea has long appealed to the Army command, though the Navy and Air Force have tended to favor retention of the bases forward of Japan.

Taylor may pursue the Army purpose, in changing world conditions, more actively than Ridgway felt able to do.

3. The growing strength and effectiveness of the Republic of Korea army. ROK forces total 20 divisions, with a 10-division reserve. This is a force of about 660,000 men and one of the four or five largest military forces in the world.

By contrast United States Army strength in Korea is said to be now under 100,000. Stationed there are the Seventh and Twenty-fourth Army Divisions, in under-strength condition. Marine and Air Force units are also assigned to the area.

U.S. Trains Koreans.

The United States has been training and supplying the South Korean force since the end of the Korean war two years ago. The present state of its development actually may be used as an argument both for and against the withdrawal of American forces.

On the one hand the existence of the strong Korean divisions can be said to provide South Korea with a high degree of security against future Communist attacks.

On the other hand some officials argue that it places a powerful weapon in the hands of South Korean President Syngman Rhee, whose basic conviction seems to be that he will never succeed in uniting his country except by force. The presence of American military units in South Korea is regarded by some well informed officials here as a restraining and stabilizing influence.

However, others point out that Rhee's army is dependent on the United States for its supplies, also that Rhee's frequent-

CONVICT 'ESCAPES' BY SITTING DOWN IN ANOTHER STATE

DOTHAN, Ala., Aug. 6 (AP)—A prisoner who escaped from a prison work gang by sitting under a shade tree is fighting extradition to Florida from his jail cell at Dothan.

John Lloyd Bedsole of Dothan says Florida authorities lost their jurisdiction over him when the prisoners crossed briefly over into Alabama.

Bedsole, serving a six-month sentence for drunken driving, said the guards worked the group of prisoners up to the Alabama line and called a rest period. They selected a shade tree which happened to be just across the state line.

When the rest period was up, Bedsole refused to budge. He told the guards they could not touch him.

The guards notified County Commissioner T. W. Patrick of Malone, Fla., who threatened to charge Bedsole with theft of his prison uniform if he did not return.

Bedsole said the only thing he had that belonged to Florida was his shoes. He tossed them across the state line to the county official. The guards did not take Bedsole back.

Gov. James E. Folsom has signed extradition papers at the request of Florida Gov. Leroy Collins.

FPC SECRECY EXPECTED TO MAKE HELL'S CANYON MAJOR CAMPAIGN ISSUE

DEMOCRATS SAY HEAD OF AGENCY MISLED CONGRESS ABOUT DECISION

Kefauver Says He Will Call Kuykendall Before Senate Group to Explain 'His Unusual Conduct.'

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—The Federal Power Commission's handling of the Hell's Canyon case has given the Democrats an opportunity to turn it into a major issue of the 1956 political campaign.

Secrecy surrounding the FPC decision and a strategic delay in making it public can be expected to overshadow the arguments over the relative merits of a single high federal dam or three small private dams in the Snake river canyon, between the states of Oregon and Washington.

The decision, which came after eight years of controversy, granted the Idaho Power Co. A license to build the three small dams. At the same time the FPC ruled that the Federal Government should not develop the water resources of the canyon, the deepest river gorge on the North American continent and one of the last remaining big natural power and water storage sites in the United States.

Charge of Deception.

Democrats immediately charged deception. They raised these principal points:

1. The FPC adopted its decision July 27, when the Democratic-controlled Congress still was in session, but withheld announcement of the action until last Thursday, the day after adjournment.

2. Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall of the FPC told investigating Congressmen the case was still pending when it actually had been decided the previous day.

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, announced tonight he would call Kuykendall before the anti-monopoly subcommittee to present "his rebuttal, if any, and an explanation of his unusual conduct."

3. Senator James E. Murray (Dem.), Montana, chairman of the Interior Committee, asked the commission July 28 to hold up any decision until Congress could complete action on legislation authorizing a high dam. Although the FPC already had decided the case, Kuykendall withheld any answer until last Thursday, when the decision finally was made public.

Appeal Expected.

Attacks on these grounds will be apart from an expected appeal of the decision. Opponents have 30 days in which to ask for a rehearing before the FPC. After that, they may appeal the case to the federal courts.

A notation indicating the delay in making public the decision appears on the cover of the official opinion and order. It says:

"Adopted: July 27, 1955."

"Issued: Aug. 4, 1955."

Kuykendall's testimony that the case was still pending was given at a hearing July 28 before a House subcommittee headed by Representative Joe L. Evins (Dem.), Tennessee. The group was inquiring into any pressures that might limit the independence of quasi-judicial agencies, including the FPC.

Chief Counsel Everette MacIntyre brought out that Kuykendall, before being named FPC chairman by President Eisenhower, was chairman of the Washington State Public Service Commission under Republican Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, an outspoken opponent of a federal Hell's Canyon project.

MacIntyre then asked: "What is the status of this Hell's Canyon proposal in issue at the FPC?"

'Before Commission Now.'

"The matter is before the commission now," Kuykendall replied. "The hearings are all concluded and the arguments have been held."

MacIntyre asked: "How recently have you been considering that matter at the FPC?"

Kuykendall replied: "We have had it under advisement since July 6, when the arguments were concluded."

Asked to name the date of the last meeting at which the commission considered the matter, Kuykendall said:

"I don't think it is proper for me to divulge what the commission is doing in considering any particular case which is before it any more than a court should divulge those things."

Evins ordered the question withdrawn.

EISENHOWER PLAYS 18 HOLES OF GOLF AT GETTYSBURG

GETTYSBURG, Aug. 6 (UP)—President Eisenhower began a five-day "rest" period today by playing 18 holes of golf in heat seven degrees hotter than that in Washington.

The Chief Executive managed to shorten his time in the sizzling sun somewhat by traveling the course in an electrically-driven cart. He played in a threesome with Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Nevinc, an old Army friend and farm neighbor here, and former State Senator John S. Rice, now a manufacturer.

He returned to his farm at noon, as the mercury climbed to 98, and signed 30 congressional bills, most of them private relief measures. The temperature in Washington at the time was 91.

Mr. Eisenhower flew here late yesterday in his new four-place Aerocommander plane. Mrs. Eisenhower, who dislikes flying, drove to the farm early yesterday. After his sojourn here, he will fly to his favorite vacation state, Colorado, for two months of work and play.

MOUNTAINS TOO HIGH, BIPLANE'S FLIGHT HALTED

An attempt to fly a 1929 Curtiss Fledgling biplane from St. Louis to New York for use in a motion picture ended, at least temporarily, yesterday after Joseph Hager, the pilot, reported he was unable to get the plane high enough to clear the mountains east of Pittsburgh.

Hager made two attempts to continue the trip from Pittsburgh, where he remained over night Friday. On the first try he returned after covering only four miles and encountering bad weather. Later in the day he took off again but turned back after failing by 50 feet to clear a mountain top.

In addition, he told his wife here by telephone, the engine overheated and an oil leak which had been repaired opened again. After he explained the situation to representatives of the motion picture company, they agreed he should leave the old plane at Greater Pittsburgh Airport and return to St. Louis by commercial airline.

Mrs. Hager said no decision had been made whether to repair the engine and change propellers in order to fly it the rest of the way or to remove the wings and ship it overland.

Emergency Landing Field.

NORWICH, Conn., Aug. 6 (UP)—Pilot Nelson Sprague, 20 years old, was just congratulating himself last night on making a safe emergency landing with his light plane where he had landed. He was right in the middle of a cemetery.

NAVY SECRETARY TO STUDY DENIAL OF COMMISSION

Promises Merchant Marine Cadet Whose Mother Was Red Will Get Justice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP)—Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas promised today to review personally the Navy's refusal to grant a reserve commission to Eugene Landy, 21 years old, on the ground his mother is a former Communist.

Thomas told reporters he learned of the case only today by reading the newspapers.

He said Landy, who was graduated as second highest ranking student yesterday from the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., will get "justice."

But as to what Thomas's decision will be, he said: "I have reached the age where I never make a decision until I have heard both sides."

The young midshipman today appealed the decision to the Bureau of Navy Personnel in Washington, D. C. He said in a telegram:

"It is respectfully requested that reconsideration be given Midshipman Eugene W. Landy's application for commission, Ensign, U.S.N.R.

"If there is any additional information about Mr. Landy or his background needed, please be advised that he is ready and willing to co-operate in any way the Navy determines best."

Receives Degree.

Landy, clad in his white cadet uniform, received his bachelor of science degree along with his 95 classmates.

But he was not permitted to join in the next stage of the ceremonies. He stood in line with his arms at his sides as his fellow graduates raised their right hands to take a mass oath of allegiance as reserve ensigns.

Nor did he join them in scaling his cap into the air.

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (Dem.), New York, has called the Navy ruling on Landy "unjust" and has asked for a full report.

Landy received a telegram from the office of Senator H. Alexander Smith (Rep.), New Jersey, advising the Navy would be glad to reconsider his application for a commission.

He expressed gratitude for "the help of Senator Smith, the 100 per cent support from the King of Tightwads---Invites Only People He Is Sure Can't Accept

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

LONDON, Aug. 6—The champion tightwad of the British Isles has been discovered. This socially prominent gentleman has worked out an elaborate system for inviting people to dinners, theaters and for weekends without ever spending a cent.

The bi-monthly socialite magazine, The Queen, discloses his secret.

He worked out an excellent spy system for discovering when people will have prior engagements. He waits until he knows they are going some place else, then he acts. He gets credit for extending frequent invitations and always is invited back. He is usually able to accept. He has been doing this for years.

Mayfair is alive with speculation over the identity of the man. It seems there are many suspected.

"Occasionally, of course," states the magazine, "the system would break down and he would actually be forced to entertain someone. But these lapses are very rare."

JOHNSON CALLS FOR ACTION BY CONGRESS ON 5 UNFINISHED BILLS

Democratic Senate Leader Includes Highway, School, Social Security and Farm Legislation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas singled out five pieces of "unfinished business" today—including school and highway construction—for congressional attention next year.

He included this list in a statement summarizing the activities of the 1955 session of Congress. As he has done before, he described the "crowning achievement" of the session, which adjourned Tuesday night, as the uniting of the country "behind a policy to protect our freedoms and preserve peace."

Johnson's list made no reference to tax legislation which can be expected to set off a partisan row in the 1956 election year. Moves to lower taxes are considered almost as inevitable as sunup.

No Exception.

The Democratic floor leader, who was sidelined by a heart attack a month ago, said no session of Congress adjourns without leaving some unfinished business and that the Democratic-controlled 1955 session was no exception. He listed:

1. The Administration-backed upper Colorado river project, passed by the Senate this year but still pending in the House.
2. Highway legislation, passed by the Senate this year, but killed in the House, where Johnson said "there is ample groundwork for another look next year."
3. The House-approved social security bill, to lower the age at which women and totally disabled persons are eligible for old-age insurance benefits, still pending in the Senate.
4. The House-approved farm price support bill, restoring rigid 90 per cent supports on basic crops, which is before the Senate Agriculture Committee.
5. School construction legislation, which failed to pass either house, but Johnson said the leadership is aware of the "pressing urgency of this problem" and hopes for action early next year.

President Eisenhower mentioned school and highway construction and the upper Colorado project at his new press conference Thursday when he indicated disappointment with the 1955 achievements of Congress in the domestic field.

Mr. Eisenhower said he considered those three issues and his health program, which was not mentioned by Johnson, as "absolutely vital." The core of the Administration's health program is a proposal, which has never caught fire in Congress, to reinsure private health insurance plans against extraordinary risks.

Special Session Chance.

The President suggested the possibility of a special session in the fall to work on some of the unfinished business. But he said he had not made up his mind to call one.

In his review of the 1955 session, Johnson said it showed "that national unity can be achieved in the field of foreign policy when you put national interest above partisan interest."

"The objectives of foreign policy should be to promote and preserve the security and integrity of the United States," he said. "From the very beginning of this Congress, the Democratic leadership made it clear that it would support the President in any effort to attain those objectives. That promise was fulfilled."

Johnson assigned "a major share of credit" for unity in foreign policy to chairman Walter F. George (Dem.), Georgia, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He said George spoke "with the authentic voice of America and had as much to do with shaping our policies as any other man."

"But the credit can be shared by many in varying degrees," Johnson said. "The unmistakable fact is that unity was established—by agreement and not by coercion — and the nation was strengthened against the trials that lie ahead."

His statement was accompanied by a nine-page catalogue listing 91 pieces of "major legislation" passed by the Senate this year, plus treaties ratified and the regular appropriations bills.

This summary said congressional cuts iin Administration requests for appropriations, together with climbing federal revenue, "should increase the liklihood of achieving a balanced budget."

By the Associated Press

Mentions Gains.

Johnson said the accomplishments of Congress "put to rest the fears of those who had so little confidence in the American system they thought it would not work unless both the Congress and the executive were controlled by the same political party."

"Rancor and bitterness were reduced to a minimum and efforts were concentrated on resolving issues in the light of the national interest."

This provided something of an official answer to the charge by Joseph L. Rauh Jr., national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, that Democratic leaders had waved the banners of "teamwork" and bipartisanship" in accepting what he called "hopelessly inadequate" proposals by Mr. Eisenhower on domestic issues.

Previously, Senator Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, said of the A.D.A. charges that "it is unthoughtful and unjust to make any such blanket indictment of the congressional leaders and of President Eisenhower."

Senators James Murray (Dem.) Montana, and Clinton Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, said in a separate statement they intend to drive for congressional approval in the next session of five major water and power projects. They listed these as the upper Colorado, Ventura in California, the high Hell's Canyon dam in Idaho-Oregon, the Washita in Oklahoma and the Fryingpan-Arkansas in Colorado.

At Churchill's request, the bust will be placed in a public garden in Malta.

First Volume of Harry Truman's Memoirs to Be Issued on Nov. 2

Post-Dispatch to Use Portions in Advance Beginning Sept. 25--'Right on Dot--After Extension,' He Quips.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 6 (INS) — Former President Harry S. Truman and senior editor Timothy Seldes of Doubleday & Co. announced today the first of two volumes of the "Memoirs by Harry S. Truman" will be published Nov. 2 under the title, "Year of Decisions." Under terms of the contract agreement, Truman will receive no royalties from the book sales. Portions of the book will appear before the publication date in Life magazine, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the New York Times. (Publication in the Post-Dispatch will begin Sept. 25.)

Seldes told reporters who gathered in the former President's book-lined office in the Kansas City Federal Reserve building that the manuscript was ready "right on the dot."

Truman, in a jovial mood, interjected: "Right on the dot—after an extension."

Recalls Illness Last Year.

He explained that the publication date had to be advanced three months after he was stricken by a serious illness in June, 1954. He apparently has completely recovered from last summer's operation.

"I can eat most anything now," he declared.

Seldes said "Year of Decisions" will be 608 pages and run to 320,000 words.

Truman's only personal appearance in connection with the first volume will be a publication day party at the Hotel Muehlbach here.

The former President said he would send a complimentary copy of the book to Sir Winston Churchill, but, glancing at six volumes of Churchill's biography along one wall of his office, he added: "It will in no way repay him for what he has sent me."

Asked what period the first volume would cover, Truman replied jokingly: "From 1884 to 1945." He explained that 1884 was the date of his birth. He said the second volume, scheduled for publication next February, would cover the period from 1946 to 1953.

Truman sidestepped a number of questions about the contents of his memoirs, but said they "have enough controversial matter that I will be kept busy" after the books are published.

"When the truth is told," he mused, "it will be very interesting."

Discusses Other Topics.

After the book announcement, Truman offered to answer questions on other subjects.

Did he plan to "campaign" after his memoirs were out of the way? Truman answered: "I will be ready to work for the Democratic party again, as I always have been."

He declined to comment on the Geneva conference, saying he did not have "all the facts." He said he believes "prospects for peace have been improving since the end of the wars," and added: "I believe peace will finally be achieved in every part of the world, in the long run. I'm an optimist, of course."

Truman said he did not know whether he would be a delegate to the 1956 Democratic national convention.

"That's up to the people of Missouri," he grinned.

He also said he has no immediate plans for a vacation or trip because "work is piled up a mile high on my desk."

GERMAN ATTACKED BY BEAST, IT'S A MOUSE WITH RABIES

BRUNSWICK, Germany, Aug. 6—A Harz mountain business man was attacked in his home near here recently by a savage little beast. He killed the animal and turned the body over to the veterinary section of Brunswick's local government. It was an ordinary mouse—with rabies.

Rabies plagues most of the regions that border on the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany. Domestic animals are protected, for the most part, by injections, but new cases are discovered regularly among wild animals.

OFFICIAL DECRIES TRADE EMPHASIS AT ATOM MEETING

GENEVA, Aug. 6 (AP)—A United States official sought today to de-emphasize "trade fair" aspects of the atoms-for-peace conference which opens here Monday.

Dr. George L. Weil, technical director for the American delegation to the United Nations meeting, told a news conference:

"We are here to sell an idea—peaceful uses of atomic energy—not Geiger counters."

Weil, an official of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, went on to say the trade exhibition sponsored by private business at Geneva's mammoth exposition palace "is not the main idea. We're not here competing for business."

Some scientists have been irked by the publicity given the "trade fair," as it is called. There have been numerous news stories about it and published statements that British firms plan an all-out effort to capture a major share of the world's booming atomic industrial business. The industrial exhibit is being sponsored by 140 private firms from eight countries, including 28 from the United States.

COMBS, CHANDLER LEADS SEESAW IN KENTUCKY VOTING

Returns From 535 of 4063 Precincts Give Edge to Ex-Baseball Commissioner.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 6 (AP)—Former Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, striving for a political comeback, and Bert T. Combs, a mountaineer judge, were locked in a close battle tonight for Kentucky's Democratic Governor nomination.

Returns from 535 of the state's 4063 precients gave:

Chandler 41,915; Combs 40,746.

Chandler had taken an early lead, only to see it wiped out by Combs as returns came in from Louisville. The former judge of Kentucky's highest court had strong regular organization backing in the metropolis. Nearly one half of the Third District (Louisville and Jefferson county) precincts were yet to be reported. The former baseball commissioner then regained a slight lead.

Chandler ran well, as expected, in northern Kentucky opposite Cincinnati, and in some rural areas. However, the tabulations included no report from the Seventh District of east Kentucky, Combs' home area.

A third candidate, Jesse N. R. Cecil, trailed badly.

In the race for the Republican governor's nomination, returns from 124 precincts gave: Former United States Attorney Edwin R. Denney 1727 to 463 for James L. Clay, an attorney.

Denney was indorsed by John Sherman Cooper, ambassador to India and former Republican United States Senator from Kentucky.

Today's voting climaxed one of the hottest Democratic primaries in the state's turbulent political history.

Chandler, former United States Senator and Governor, sought to come back politically at 57. Combs, 43, had strong backing from the regular state Democratic organization.

Chandler bucked United States Senators Earle C. Clements and Alben W. Barkley and the state administration. They are supporting Combs. Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby is ineligible to succeed himself.

Chandler has indicated that, if elected, he would have an opponent face Clements when the Senator, now acting majority leader, comes up for renomination next year.

Chandler has accused Clements, Governor from 1947-50, of attempting to run the Governor's office from Washington.

Clements countered by saying Chandler based his campaign on falsehoods. The Senator said Kentucky's future would be dark should Chandler win.

Barkley says Chandler deserted him at the 1952 national convention when the former Vice President was a candidate for the presidential nomination. Barkley returned to the Senate last year.

Hula Dancing Stowaway Speeds Things Up on Canadian Destroyer

Skipper Hurrying to Port With Hawaiian Girl — 'It's Atomic Age,' Mother Says.

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

JOCELYN JOAN PILAPIL

LONG BEACH, Calif., Aug. 6 (UP)—The commander of a Canadian destroyer steered his ship full speed ahead for this port today, eager to be rid of a high-spirited, 16-year-old Hawaiian girl stowaway who sneaked aboard at Pearl Harbor, possibly disguised as a sailor.

The girl, believed to have run away from home to join either the WACs or the women Marines, was discovered aboard the destroyer Athabaskan after it had reached the "point of no return" on its Pacific voyage.

That is, according to the messages from Comdr. E. E. Richardson, the vessel was so far asea when Jocelyn Pilapil was found that he figured he could make it to Long Beach faster than Hawaii.

When Richardson learned he had one too many crew members—and a little hula dancer at that—he began sending out messages. He radioed the United States Navy, the FBI, the Coast Guard and the Canadian consulate.

Jocelyn's mother, Mrs. Gloria Pilapil, was one of the last to learn of the girl's exploit, but she was more philosophical than angry.

"Strange things happen these days," the mother said at her Hilo home. "I guess it's the fast atomic age—everything happens so quickly.

"She always wanted to join a service — either the women Marines or the WACs — but never the Canadian navy. I really didn't have any idea she had gone so far—imagine, Long Beach and the Canadian Navy.

"Jocelyn may have disguised herself as a sailor. She has short hair—you know that new fad—and I wouldn't put it past her if she did."

Mrs. Pilapil said it would not be up to her to reprimand Jocelyn when she come home.

"I'm leaving it up to the police," she said. "However, I'll stand by and help her all I can as her mother. I hope she'll get out of this all right and won't want to traipse around."

The FBI had stronger and less tolerant views on Jocelyn's unusual behavior. Agents said she will be arrested when she reaches port on a charge of illegally taking passage aboard a ship.

The FBI said it entered the case because the girl was an American stowaway in American waters.

SAVED FROM PLANE IN LAKE, WOMAN, 70, WOULD FLY AGAIN

NAPLES, Me., Aug. 6 (AP)—A 70-year-old grandmother rescued from a sinking plane in Sebago Lake yesterday, described flying as "thrilling" today and said she is looking forward to her next trip.

While clinging to her pilot-grandson's plane, Mrs. Tena Day confided she couldn't swim but quipped, "At least I'm getting a bath and a good shampoo."

The craft flipped over when struck by the 60-mile-an-hour wind of a sudden storm after it was landed by James Build.

Mrs. Day suffered only bruised knees when she was dragged aboard a rescue boat.

15,000 DISABLED GET BOOST IN SOCIAL SECURITY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—More than 15,000 retired Americans received increased social security benefit payments this week.

Social Security Commissioner Charles I. Schottland said the increases average about $11 on monthly checks. They were made because of a new disability freeze provision in the social security law.

Under the law, permanently disabled workers do not have to deduct the years they were unable to work from their benefits when they reach 65 years of age.

The new provision became effective last month. But Schottland said his agency has been accepting freeze applications since last January so that increases could show up on social security checks immediately.

KERR FOR USING CROPS TO CRACK IRON CURTAIN

U.S. Surplus Could Reduce World Tension if Properly Handled, He Asserts.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Senator Kerr (Dem.) of Oklahoma today urged President Eisenhower "to use our vast farm surpluses as a weapon to crack the Iron Curtain."

"We have something that Soviet Russia and Red China urgently need," Kerr said in an interview. "If these stocks of food, feed and fiber are handled properly they can end international tensions and make for peace."

Other Senators, including Stennis (Dem.), Mississippi, and Russell (Dem.), Georgia, and Young (Rep.), North Dakota, have suggested that United States farm surpluses might be sold or traded to Iron Curtain countries if the Communist world demonstrates it is sincere about ending the cold war and expanding peaceful trade.

Benson To Go to Europe.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said yesterday he will go to western Europe this fall at the suggestion of President Eisenhower to discuss marketing problems and surplus disposal.

Spokesmen for farm organizations, including the National Grange and the Farm Bureau Federation, also have been urging sales to Russia and satellites. Officials have said they are weighing the idea.

Kerr, who has been blasting Benson's farm policies, said:

"I would not be averse to Benson doing something worthwhile. He's been the symbol of futility for a long time.

"With a third of Red China now suffering from famine and with much of Russia threatened with it, our surpluses and our capacity to produce food may mean the difference between avoiding war and winning the peace."

Basis for Peace.

Stennis, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said he favors trade with Russia and other Communist nations "as a basis for better understanding and more peaceful relations."

But Senator Kefauver (Dem.), Tennesssee, expressed doubts about resuming trade with Communist areas "until we make certain that the new Soviet attitude is more than a gesture."

He said he was willing to see the United States "take the first step toward peaceful relations" but it should be wary pending clarification of the situation.

FOUR PRISONERS FACE CHARGES OF ATTEMPTED BREAK FROM JAIL

Inmate Whose Escape Was Frustrated Names Three Others Involved in Plans to Cut Way Out.

Warrants charging attempted jail break will be sought by police against Raymond Schermerhorn and three other City Jail prisoners, all ex-convicts, who he said "forced" him to cut openings in a roof ventilator so they could escape.

Jail Warden Peter Nicholas frustrated the nearly-complete plans Friday after he investigated a tip that "something unusual" was going on on the sixth floor.

Thursday night he found openings cut in the sheet metal ventilator both above and below the roof. The ventilator leads from a small fumigating room on the sixth floor. Friday morning Nicholas watched through a small opening in a wall of the sixth-floor chapel and saw Schermerhorn hide a chisel under a pile of clothing which he had been repairing.

Admits Escape Plans.

Nicholas recovered the chisel after Schermerhorn was in his cell and later in the day the prisoner, confronted with the evidence, readily admitted he had been working on the ventilator about five weeks. He said he planned to climb to the roof through the ventilator and lower himself by a 75-foot heavy duty electric cord.

He said he began cutting the ventilator after being threatened by three fellow prisoners. After the job was under way, Schermerhorn continued, he decided to escape by himself and had planned to go over the wall last night.

The men Schermerhorn named denied knowing anything about his plans and pointed out that the normally had no way to get to the sixth floor except when attending chapel on Sundays. Schermerhorn is awaiting trial for burglary.

Liquor Taken Into Jail.

Nicholas said that in another investigation, following a tip that liquor was being taken into the jail, six empty half-pint gin bottles were found atop another ventilator on the sixth floor.

The warden said further investigation revealed that Melvin Cain, a trusty in charge of the jail commissary, had been buying the gin from a candy firm driver who makes deliveries to the commissary. There was no evidence that Cain, who is serving a year for larceny, disposed of the liquor to any other prisoner, Nicholas said.

Police said the candy driver would be charged with sale of liquor without a license, the only applicable charge.

Meanwhile, police continued their search for four young Workhouse prisoners, Thomas D. Carver, Robert Lee Bridges, Ralph Leroy Voegtlin and Allen A. Andrews, who escaped Friday by sawing a window bar.

COUNTY LIBRARY TAX RATE CUT DUE TO REASSESSMENT

A reduction in St. Louis county's library tax rate from 25 to 18½ cents on each $100 assessed valuation was announced yesterday by Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., chairman of the library board.

The lower rate, which includes 11.1 cents for maintenance and operation and 7.4 cents for a building fund, was put into effect for this year because of increased assessments ordered by the State Tax Commission. It is expected to produce about the same revenue as was expected from the old rate and assessment.

In the county, the library tax is imposed in all areas that do not have their own municipal libraries.

Richmond Heights yesterday cut its city tax rate from $1.04 to 73 cents because of the increased assessments.

BODY OF MAN FOUND IN RIVER

The body of an unidentified Negro was found in the Mississippi river near the foot of Rutger street yesterday. Police said it had been in the river for several days. The man was about 55 years old.

Dave Beck Builds Union Treasury to 38 Million, Amasses Personal Fortune at the Same Time

Teamsters' Head Worth Nearly a Million, Has Made It in Real Estate Speculation.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 6—The AFL Teamsters union, which has attained a degree of opulence seldom realized by a labor union, has built up holdings reaching the amazing total of $38,000,000 and has lavishly recognized the financial acumen of Dave Beck, its president.

Now Beck, a former laundry wagon driver with a personal fortune of close to a million dollars, lives rent-free in a palatial lakefront home here. He built it five years ago, then the union purchased it recently for $163,215 turning it back to him for his lifetime use.

The $50,000-a-year Teamsters' president also is empowered by the union to travel in this country and abroad at his discretion and to take periodic rests with the union footing the bills. His wife may accompany him, at union expense, together with such secretarial staffs as he may require.

How Fund Was Raised.

A factor in the achievement of the $38,000,000 union backlog is Beck's policy of selling government bonds and reinvesting in higher-yield government-backed securities. Primary source of the union's wealth is the 40 cents per capita on monthly dues of 1,300,000 members ranging from $3 to $4.

Finances of the International do not include funds in the treasuries of 1000 locals all over the country, 51 joint councils, and other regional organizations embraced in what amounts to an expanding union empire. Some of the locals are rich in their own right.

Beck is the second president to receive generous gifts from the union. The Teamsters bought a Spanish-style Miami Beach home for his predecessor, 80-year-old Daniel J. Tobin. When Florida summers got too warm for Tobin the union presented him with an additional house at Marshfield, Mass., in the Cape Cod resort area.

A conservative union estimate of the cost of the two residences was between $130,000 and $150,000, plus improvements.

As president emeritus of the Teamsters, Tobin gets $50,000 annually for life. He is provided with a Cadillac, servants and maintenance costs of his establishments, purchased in 1943 and 1950.

Tobin, who became president emeritus in 1952 when Beck was elected president, still serves with Beck on the powerful AFL executive council.

$5,000,000 Headquarters.

The union, under Beck's direction, recently completed a $5,000,000 marble headquarters building in Washington, D. C., overlooking the Capitol with offices so opulent as to make most corporation suites appear shabby.

Beck's offices there include conference rooms and sleeping accommodations. He has a private garage and elevator. The union also maintains for him and other International officers apartments in a fashionable apartment house.

Occupying a 250-foot frontage on Lake Washington, the Beck property here includes a ranch-style house, a 50x20-foot outdoor heated swimming pool, a bathhouse and two two-car garages. A brook, with an artificial waterfall, flood-lit at night, runs along a landscaped lawn.

The closely-cut grass of the lawn is set off by blooming flower beds, tended by a Japanese gardener. The union picks up the tab for the gardener as well as maintenance and entertainment costs. Beck, who does not drink or smoke, entertains lavishly.

The house proper contains three bedrooms, each with private bath, a living room, dining room, study and kitchen. In the basement is a rathskeller, a private motion picture theater, and an office. The union is to build more offices over the garage, supplementing Beck's office at a downtown teamsters' building here. He drives between his home and office in a Cadillac, furnished by the union.

Started as Organizer.

Beck, who started with the International as a $6000 organizer in 1926, by appointment of Tobin, has grown wealthy through shrewd real estate speculations here, including part ownership of a big apartment house.

He holds a liquor distributorship and has made money in auto financing and other enterprises. During a tour of some of his holdings, he told the writer he had made $78,000 in real estate deals in the last two months, adding that he owed the banks $350,000 on current projects.

The 61-year-old Beck disclosed that he would retire after another five-year term in office, continuing to draw his $50,000 salary and to occupy his home here.

By the time he retires, in 1962, subject to re-election at the 1957 convention, Beck believes he will have guided the teamsters union to such a commanding position in the nation's distribution system that it could cope with industry on equal economic terms. He said he regarded the label "Teamsters" as outmoded, since "we are moving into everything and we are going to keep right on going, welding a chain with no weak links."

'A Business Proposition.'

"This whole union business is a business proposition to me," Beck said, "and my job is to get better wages, hours and working conditions for the members of the union. That's what I'm paid for. It's strictly business.

"I see nothing incompatible about my position in the union and what I do on the outside. My wealth is my own business.

"The International can get a man for one-fourth what they pay me. But it would be a poor investment. I've made $12,000,000 for the union in the two and a half years since I took office—and that includes the investment in the Washington building.

"That building represents two things to me. It is a beautiful structure in which to transact business—and it will remain a standing monument to the Teamsters union. That is a much more practical monument than that statue the AFL erected to Sam Gompers.

"I run the union. It is a national business. My conception of a labor union is strictly business. I'm selling the labor of individual members for the best price and conditions. I am aware of human equations, but business principles remain.

"Besides our improved financial position, wages of the members have come up 30, 40, even 100 per cent. I'm getting up some statistics on that. We are operating as a national body, through conferences and divisions, for the first time. The organization is about perfected.

'Just Another Transaction.'

"I handle the union's finances. I've done the same financial job for the union as I've done for myself and the results show it. From my standpoint, that house transaction was purely business, a bagatelle—what the hell is it to the Teamster's union? Small change, comparatively speaking. It's just another real estate transaction to me."

Beck pointed out that the union bought his residential property at a price fixed by a firm of independent appraisers. Before the house was completed, he said, an insurance company had placed a $100,000 loan valuation on it. The property is assessed at $20,500. Assessments here usually run about a fifth of actual value.

Travels by Plane.

Although Beck "commutes" all over the country by plane, he gets home as much as he can. An intercommunication system has been established between his home, in which he lives with his invalid wife, and the home of a relative. His 87-year-old mother lives in an adjoining house, which Beck built for her.

"My house is more than just a house," Beck said, "it's also a sort of headquarters. Because of the time difference between here and the East, my telephone is ringing constantly from 5 o'clock in the morning on. We are going to put offices over the garage and I have authority to build an office building, at my discretion. I work 18 hours a day as it is."

While much of his work is devoted to high finance, Beck has other problems, including a plague of indictments of Teamsters officials in St. Louis and other metropolitan areas.

Recently, Spruille Braden, chairman of the New York City Anti-Crime Commission, declared Teamsters were involved with gangster and racketeer elements there and pointed out that Beck was co-operating with the International Longshoremen's Association, which was kicked out of the AFL for racketeering nearly two years ago at the federation's St. Louis convention.

Possible Rival Involved.

James R. Hoffa of Detroit, a union vice-president, also was involved in the New York situation. Hoffa, who possesses a union political power which could threaten Beck's position, has independent means and his activities have been criticized by the Kefauver committee.

Until now, Beck, who conferred recently with Hoffa, has kept mum about the Braden report.

"If Braden has the dope he should prosecute," Beck said, "but I will not be a party to a double standard of prosecution, or hide behind a screen of generalities. You cannot push out labor people as a special class."

As to Hoffa, Beck pointed out merely that he was an elective official and that the Teamsters' International consisted of autonomous unions.

Beck tried to get a charter for the longshoremen from the AFL but was sharply rapped by George Meany, president of the federation. He told this writer that he was making "working agreements" with them, adding, "if there is anything wrong, why aren't they prosecuted?"

$900,000 in 3 Months.

Improvement of the Teamsters' financial position—it has made $900,000 in the last three months—has been due primarily to selling relatively low interest Government bonds and reinvesting in Government-secured mortgages, mostly in the Seattle and Detroit areas, which pay about 4 per cent.

The union took in $6,566,000 last year, mostly in dues. Structure of the union may be likened in some respects to a system of feudal baronies, although Beck is trying to streamline them into a sort of conveyor belt.

Beck, who observed he had "graduated with the movement from skull cracking days," wants to speculate for the union in "gilt-edged" common stocks. He said he could "interpret the constitution" but preferred to abide by a constitutional provision against stock purchases until the 1957 convention. Conventions are held now every five years.

Beck, a leading citizen here, is a former chairman of the board of regents of the University of Washington, although he is largely self-educated. On occasion he has occupied the pulpit by invitation of several churches and headed a campaign for an Episcopal Cathedral, besides backing charitable drives and various civic projects.

He became an exalted ruler of the Seattle Elks and is known as a joiner. Respected by business interests, he's more at home at bankers' conventions than rank and file union meetings.

"I have no use for Communism or time for Socialism," Beck remarked. "I live for free enterprise in my personal life just as I advocate it in my business life."

Dead on arrival at St. Louis County Hospital was a man in whose pockets were found the papers of Leon Reed, 29 years old, 2707 St. Vincent avenue.

Six of the eight injured were in serious condition at the hospital last night. They were:

Miss Donna Jean Edwards, 5422 Pernod avenue, chest injuries; Miss Jane Leiendecker, 5233 Tholozan avenue, facial cuts; Mrs. Genevieve Modjinski, 5016 Pernod, head injuries.

Mrs. Charles A. Shroeder, 5018 Pernod, facial cuts; Miss Mary Jane Stelinovic, 5052 Tholozan, head and facial cuts; Charles Picek, 74 years old, Lawton, Okla., neck injuries.

Police said Reed was alone in his machine when it was struck by the automobile driven by Miss Stelinovic. All the others hurt were in her machine except Picek, a passenger in the third vehicle, driven by his son-in-law, Army Col. Stanley Sawicki, who was unhurt. Col. Sawicki's car struck Miss Stelinovic's, police said.

Charles Dalton, 7 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Dalton, 3914 North Eleventh street, died yesterday at City Hospital of injuries suffered when he was hit Friday by a truck in the 3900 block of North Eleventh street, near his home.

The truck was driven by Karl M. Nattier, Patoka, Ill. Nattier told police the Dalton boy ran out from behind a bus traveling in the opposite direction on Eleventh street.

David Wittacker, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin R. Wittacker, 914 Winton street, Kinloch, was killed yesterday when he was struck by an automobile in the driveway of a neighbor, John A. Talbert.

Talbert, 916 Winton, told police he heard a thud when he began to drive the machine out of the driveway. He said he found the child beneath the car when he stopped. Talbert said the Wittacker child had been playing with his children shortly before the accident.

A 1-year-old infant from St. Louis county and a man from Kansas City were killed yesterday in a collision of an automobile and a station wagon on Highway 36 on the western edge of Monroe City, Mo., 85 miles northwest of St. Louis. Eight other persons, including the baby's parents, were injured.

Killed

MARY TERESA QUINN

The child was Mary Teresa Quinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Quinn of Hazelwood, and the man was identified as David Miller, driver of the automobile.

The injured include Mr. and Mrs. Quinn, five other Quinn children, Willis Jr., 14; Donald, 10; Arthur, 6; Elizabeth, 3, and Gerald, 2, and Mrs. Carolyn Miller, wife of the dead man. All were taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Hannibal, Mo.

State troopers reported that the Miller automobile was attempting to pass a tractor-trailer going east, swerved sideways as the brakes were applied and collided with the Quinn station wagon approaching from the other direction. The truck then smashed into the wreckage of the Miller automobile.

Mrs. Quinn's father, Victor Riedy, 8410 Reilly street, said the Quinns were en route to visit relatives in the Monroe City area.

Donald Lee Forrester of Leadwood, Mo., was killed and Charles B. Halbrook of Imperial, Mo., injured seriously when automobiles driven by the two men collided head-on on U. S. Highway 61, north of Festus, Mo., early yesterday.

Witnesses told the State Highway Patrol that Forrester's machine had passed four other automobiles at speeds of 80 to 90 miles an hour just prior to the crash. His southbound car had swerved into a northbound traffic lane before colliding with Halbrook's machine, the patrol was informed.

Forrester was 22 years old. Halbrook, whose left arm was severed near the shoulder, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Kirkwood.

Constantine Anagnostopoulos, 4125 Upton court, and his 2½-year-old son, Paul, suffered skull fractures yesterday in a three-car collision on U.S. Highway 66 at Towanda, Ill., about 10 miles north of Bloomington. Mrs. Anagnostopoulos suffered knee and facial injuries.

WOMAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH, MAN IS SOUGHT

Shotgun Discovered Hidden in Pantry—Landlady Says Pair Quarreled Violently.

A woman known as Mrs. Jennie King was found shot to death yesterday in the bedroom of her small apartment at 704A (rear) Summit avenue, East St. Louis. Police began looking for a man who lived in the apartment.

Dr. C. C. Kane, St. Clair county coroner, said Mrs. King had been killed by a shot from a single-barrel, .410-gauge shotgun fired at close range, the charge striking her above the right eye. She had been dead about 24 hours when found, Dr. Kane said.

The shotgun was discovered hidden in clothing in a kitchen pantry. It had been dismantled. In the bedroom where Mrs. King's body was found was a partly-packed suitcase, indicating the woman may have been preparing to leave.

Mrs. Fred Robertson, owner of the property, told police Mrs. King had violent quarrels with a man, who beat her severely on occasion. They moved into the apartment about two months ago, Mrs. Robertson said.

The man sought by police has been working as a meatcutter for a packing plant at National Stock Yards. Mrs. King, 35 years old, was employed as a cook in a St. Louis restaurant.

OWNER OF EAST SIDE TAVERN DIES OF WOUND, WOMAN HELD

Benny Thomas, 1800A Market street, East St. Louis, died yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, of a gunshot wound in the chest. Thomas, a Negro, was the proprietor of a tavern at 1800 Market street.

Police arrested Inez Owens, a Negro, who also lives at the Market address after the shooting early Friday. Police quoted her as saying she shot Thomas when he grabbed her by the neck.

Cowboys and Indians Give Russian Visitors a Taste of the Old West

To Andrei Shevchenko
FOR OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENT IN ENGLISH

—International News Photo.

Beaming visitor from Russia, ANDREI SHEVCHENKO displays special plaque presented to him by Chancellor Clifford M. Harding of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln last week. Shevchenko, counselor to the Russian Ministry of Agriculture, has asquired working knowledge of such matters as "gud eefning" and "hokay" on his tour of American farms and has charmed a number of audiences in the Midwest with his "speeches' in English.

Farm Delegates Attend Powwow of 2000 Red Men, See Brave Who Fought Custer.

SHERIDAN, Wyo., Aug. 6—(UP)—Three visiting Russians, wearing western-style leather thong "bolo" ties, caught some of the flavor of the Old West today as they mingled with calf-branding cowboys and 2000 Indians.

The rope-twirling cowboys caught the eye of Petr Badmindra, and he insisted on trying his hand at swinging a lariat. He declined, however, to try to rope a calf.

The Russians flew here to see a powwow of 2000 Indians from the United States, Canada and Mexico.

They paused to talk with 97-year-old Dewey Beard, believed to be the last surviving Sioux brave of the Battle of the Little Big Horn—better known as "Custer's Last Stand."

The three Russians were up at dawn this morning as they wound up an overnight visit to the huge, 173,000-acre Keeline ranch near Gillette, Wyo.

After packing away a hearty breakfast of hot cakes, bacon and eggs—washed down with hot coffee—they were given a demonstration of calf roping and branding.

The leader of the delegation, Yuri Golabash, said he hoped the friendship shown here would lead to a "good life for everybody in the world."

"It would be good for America and Russia," he said, "to exchange ideas as they are doing in this program and to live in the world together."

He added, "We know that none of the hospitality here is forced and feel it is very sincere. Hospitality cannot be falsified . . . you can see it."

The ranch reception seemed pleasant but it was in direct contrast to the inhospitable attitude expressed by Joseph J. Keeline, owner of the huge ranch, who was in Denver for a trap-shooting contest.

Keeline told reporters the visit of the Russians to his ranch was not his idea and added that he was "not sorry I wasn't there to greet them."

After watching ranch operations this morning, the Russians flew here to witness the annual All-American Indian Days celebration.

They watched the Indians demonstrate their prowess at spear throwing and bow and arrow competition. There was also the Indian sport of hide racing, in which an Indian rides on his stomach on a piece of hide dragged by a horse.

Americans in Russia Finding Some Fault With Farm Methods.

STALINGRAD, U.S.S.R., Aug. 6 (AP)—members of the visiting farm delegation from the United States have begun to discard politeness and speak out on what they consider are some of the faults of Soviet agriculture.

Until now they have been reluctant to criticize because of the hospitality they have been shown.

Apparently they have seen plenty of evidence of Soviet backwardness. Even reports by Tass, the official news agency, have begun to mention some of the Americans' critical comments.

Soviet Agriculture, official newspaper of the Ministry of Agriculture, reported yesterday that the American delegation visited the Stalin farm in the Rostov-on-Don region and was told by the farm chairman, "We have an amateur theatrical circle, football team, movies, etc."

But, the report said, Charles Hearst of Cedar Falls, Ia., came back with a question about what happens on the collective farm when the machine tractor stations fall down on their quota of work.

"In cases like that we simply don't accept their work," the farm chairman replied.

But Hearst's question, "Who gets fined, who gets fired?" went unanswered.

Asa Clark of Pullman, Wash., found wheat being cleaned on a threshing floor and asked why this was not done with combines.

Clark commented that the Soviet Union was wasting much human labor and should improve its machines.

John Steddon of Granger, Ia., also commented that the Russians had a long way to go in farm mechanization.

WITNESSES TELL OF PARTS FALLING FROM AIRLINER

Investigating Teams Gathering Bits of Wreckage in Study of Crash Fatal to 30.

By CARL R. BALDWIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo., Aug. 6—Civil Aeronautics Board officials, investigating the flaming crash here of an American Airlines twin-engine Convair in which all 30 persons aboard lost their lives, late today were checking reports that parts of the burning engine and wing started dropping from the plane several minutes before it fell in a wooded ravine.

Backtracking over the course the crippled plane followed in approaching Forney Airport on the reservation here, investigators questioned farmers and others who reportedly saw parts of the plane fall to the ground before its wing ripped off and it cartwheeled into an Ozark hillside just a half mile from the post's airstrip.

Fred G. Powell, investigator in charge of the CAB office in Chicago, who is directing the inquiry, said the three investigating teams have gathered bits of the wrecked and fire-scarred plane for study. Every piece is being photographed in an effort to determine the cause of the crash and fire.

Inquiry May Take Two Weeks.

CAB officials indicated the inquiry may take two weeks.

Dr. Kenneth L. Stratton, assistant medical director for the airline, said today that the crash was one of the worst the company has ever had. This is the first time, he said, that all the bodies have not been identified within 24 hours at most. The plane crashed at 1:34 p.m. Thursday and up to late yesterday 21 of the 30 dead had been identified.

This grim task continued tonight at Hedges undertaking establishment at Crocker, Mo. Because the bodies were burned beyond recognition, identification had to be made through dental records.

Those that have been sent to their homes are the bodies of Donald D. Carr-Harris, Trenton, N.J.; Tilson J. Farough, Royal Oak, Mich.; Miss Karen Franks, Milwaukee; the Rev. George L. Krock, former St. Louisan and Maryknoll missionary, Maryknoll, N.Y., and Robert Zellens, Chicago.

Other Bodies Claimed.

The family of Stanley Holderby of Aurora, Mo., claimed his body late yesterday and had it sent for burial to Clever, Mo., about 10 miles east of his home town. Donald F. Ballard of San Bernardino, Calif., brother of stewardess Thelma Ruth Ballard of Tulsa, Okla., arranged to have her body sent to her parents' home in Salisbury, N.C. Ballard was en route to Salisbury on his vacation when he heard of the plane crash and his sister's death.

The body of the plane's first officer, William Gates of Tulsa, Okla., and Herman Schmyser of Detroit were sent by air cargo plane to their home cities. Others that have been sent home are those of V. D. Maupin of Springfield, Mo.; Mrs. Loa Rohleder of Garden City, Mich.; Capt. Hugh C. Barron, pilot of the plane, of Tulsa; Samuel Hopson of Galena, Kan.; Navy Lt. Kurt D. Richards, Springfield, Mo., formerly of St. Louis; Mrs. Louis P. Humann of Independence, Kan., and Mrs. Josephine McReynolds of Greenfield, Mo.

Graveside funeral services for Lt. Richards will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Our Redeemer Cemetery, 8551 Brinker avenue, Affton. Surviving is his wife, a 16-month-old daughter, and his mother, Mrs. Richard Dambach, 5032 Christy boulevard, St. Louis.

Lt. Richards, 34 years old, boarded the airliner at Springfield, where his wife and daughter were staying with her parents. He was en route to Chicago for a final phase of training after which he was to have taken a post in Washington, D.C. under a Navy atomic energy program.

ARMY COURT-MARTIAL BOARD CONSIDERS WOMAN'S FATE

SENDAI, Japan, Sunday, Aug. 7 (UP)—An Army court-martial board deliberated the fate today of 26-year-old Romola Abidin, on trail for the June 17 killing of her warrant officer husband.

The court convened in an extraordinary Sunday morning session. After brief instructions by the law officer, the board retired to ponder a verdict which could mean a death sentence for the Bayside, N.Y., mother of three.

Both sides summed up late yesterday, the Army prosecutor arguing there was no evidence to substantiate Mrs. Abidin's claim she shot her husband, Robert, to protect her son from violence.

HELL'S CANYON MAY BE MAJOR CAMPAIGN ISSUE

letter to Kuykendall, noted that extensive hearings had been held on bills authorizing a federal high Hell's Canyon dam.

"After hearing many indorsements, subcommittees of both House and Senate Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs, by formalized vote, positively acted to authorize the high dam," Murray wrote. "With this favorable indorsement (and no negative action), the authorization proposal now pends before the continuing Eighty-fourth Congress for disposal after its recess."

Murray said it had been established beyond challenge that Congress wished to retain jurisdiction over the Hell's Canyon development. He asked the FPC to hold in abeyance final action on the Idaho Power Co.'s application.

Kuykendall's Reply.

Although the FPC already had made its decision, Kuykendall waited until last Thursday to reply. That was the day the FPC disclosed its decision. Kuykendall wrote to Murray:

"If a license for the Snake river projects is issued, the Idaho Power Co. would be required to proceed with construction within a specific time. If the applications are denied, additional power supply must be obtained from some other source—most likely from a higher cost steam-electric plant. Since construction of an additional power source would require a period of about two years, it is imperative that the commission's decision be known as soon as practicable, in order to assure consumers in the area of an adequate power supply.

"The commission has given serious consideration to your request to delay its decision in this matter. However, the commission feels that it is under a duty in the proper administration of the Federal Power Act to render decisions as expeditiously as is practicable, and under the circumstances in this case the commission does not believe it would be justified in delaying final action."

Started in 1947.

The Hell's Canyon controversy began June 24, 1947, when the Idaho Power Co. applied for a preliminary FPC permit to build a low dam at the Oxbow site on the Snake river. Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman intervened, asking that the permit be denied. Government agencies already were considering a high dam downstream at the Hell's Canyon site, which would submerge the Oxbow site.

After a series of postponements, the FPC and other agencies began exhaustive studies of various plans for developing the Hell's Canyon reach of the Snake river.

In the spring of 1953, the Post-Dispatch investigated the rival proposals and described them in detail.

Any new investigation of the FPC's handling of the case is expected to go back to a sequence of events that took place in May 1953.

On May 5, 1953, Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay suddenly withdrew the department's objections to Idaho Power's Oxbow application. He said the department had decided in favor of Idaho Power's plan for three low dams.

On May 6, Idaho Power's stockholders met at Augusta, Me., and approved the plan for three low dams.

On May 10, the FPC received Idaho Power's application for a permit to build three low dams.

Some Democrats hope to find that this chronology points to an improperly close co-operation between the FPC and the private power company.

Examiner's Recommendations.

In deciding to grant a license for the three private dams, the FPC went three times as far as had its hearing examiner, William J. Costello. He had recommended last May 6 that the FPC approve only Idaho Power's proposal to build Brownlee dam and reject the company's applications for the other two projects, Oxbow and the small Hell's Canyon dam. Brownlee is the farthest upstream of the three sites.

Costello had concluded that "the high dam would be indicated as the proper choice" if the decision were based simply on a comparison of the two plans. He had reasoned, however, that a decision in favor of a high federal dam would be "completely useless action" because the likelihood of congressional authorization "is so remote."

Senator Murray, in his letter to Kuykendall, contended that the Eighty-fourth Congress had shown a readiness to go through with authorization for a high federal dam. He wrote:

"Without belaboring the novelty of Federal Power Commission actions based on an examiner's pre-determinations of what the Congress will or will not do, it is appropriate to inform you the clairvoyant talents of the examiner have not been substantiated."

The FPC decision made no reference to Costello's premise that Congress was not likely to authorize a high dam.

Must Start Within Year.

In approving the three dams, the agency specified that construction must start within one year on the Brownlee dam, four years on the Oxbow dam and six years on the low Hell's Canyon dam. It also stated that "the three proposed power developments should be considered as a single project."

Thus the FPC avoided conflict with the Federal Power Act, which states that a licensee shall start construction of "the project works" not less than two years after issuance of the license. This period may be extended for no more than two additional years.

This interpretation, which the FPC said conformed with its past practice, preempts the other two sites although Idaho Power must start only the Brownlee dam until nearly four years have elapsed.

Kuykendall referred to the three low dams as "the Snake river projects," in his letter to Murray.

The FPC brushed aside the argument that lower cost of power from a federal project would aid industrial development of the region. The agency argued that the Federal Power Act does not require "that we recommend federal development for the sole purpose of making power available at costs lower than would be possible if the same water resources were developed by a private entity under a license."

Such a consideration, the FPC went on, would rule out almost all private development of major power projects, since private power companies must pay taxes and higher interest rates than the Government.

Costello's report had indicated that electricity would cost only 2.7 mills per kilowatt hour under the federal high-dam plan, as compared to 6.69 mills under the private three-dam plan.

The agency concluded that the private three-dam proposal "is best adapted to a comprehensive plan for development," as required by the Federal Power Act.

As for power production, the FPC concluded that "the power features of the one-dam plan have no clear economic advantage over those of the three-dam plan."

No Irrigation Under Either.

Either plan, the opinion continued, would provide for flood control resources, but neither would supply water for irrigation of lands.

The two plans would provide flood control, navigation and re-creation about equally, the agency found. It said neither plan would supply water for irrigation, since the high federal dam could affect irrigation only through a subsidy paid out of power revenues.

"We have indicated the extent to which these public purposes would be served under either plan," the agency said. "However, under existing law, these public purposes will be realized without expense to the United States to the extent that the projects are constructed by a non-federal agency."

The commission staff has estimated that construction of the three Idaho Power Co. dams would cost about $175,766,000. Construction costs of the federal dam were put at about $356,810,000.

Annual cost of the power output from the three dams would be $27,921,000, with estimated annual value to the market of $36,066,000, the FPC said.

Thirty Senators joined as sponsors of the high-dam bill, introduced by Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon, early in the Eighty-fourth Congress. These included Senators Thomas C. Hennings Jr. and Stuart Symington of Missouri, both Democrats.

Kefauver Urges Inquiry in Sale of Bonneville Power.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, said today he believed congressional investigators should take a look at the Eisenhower Administration's policies in connection with the Bonneville Power Administration.

Critics have accused the Administration of favoring private companies in disposing of Bonneville power. Administration officials say their policies are fair to all.

Kefauver told a reporter another fertile field for investigation would be the decision by the Federal Power Commission Thursday approving a privately-financed hydro-electric project in the Hell's canyon dam area. He accused the Administration of deceiving Congress in handling this case.

Kefauver said in a statement that the FPC handling of the Hell's canyon was "another flagrant example of this Administration's policy of deception."

Kefauver heads a task force of the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee which has been making a study of the Dixon-Yates power contract. But he said he did not know whether this group would be able to make the Bonneville and Hell's canyon investigations, or whether any other committee would do so.

The Bonneville Power Administration markets electricity from several big federal dams in the Pacific Northwest.

Some Democratic members and public power advocates from the region have complained that the Eisenhower Administration's Bonneville policies have been too favorable to private utilities. Officials reply that their policies are in the national interest.

newspapers, the cadets, and the people in town who have given their wholehearted co-operation."

Landy, who intends to sail tomorrow as a seaman on a Texas-bound oil tanker, expressed confidence the Navy would reconsider his case.

An Academy spokesman described Landy as "one of the brightest students we ever had" and said "there has never been any question of Landy's loyalty here."

But a Navy spokesman, while not questioning Landy's loyalty, said the young man was "extremely close to his mother and she has been a Communist."

Landy describes himself as "quite conservative" politically. He said he had taken "several loyalty oaths" since entering the Academy.

His mother, Mrs. Deborah Landy, 54, of Bradley Beach, N.J., a garment worker, attended the graduation ceremony. The son smilingly kissed her afterward.

She said she had been a Communist from about 1937 to 1947 when she quit the party at her son's urging. He would have been about 13 or 14 years old at the time.

"He reformed me and yet he is suffering for it," she said. Her husband died when Landy was a baby.

Young Landy intends to enter Yale University on a scholarship this fall to study admiralty law.

At his graduation yesterday he won an award from the Daughters of the American Revolution for his achievements in naval science and a medal for proficiency in naval architecture. He played on the Academy football and tennis teams.

on the rear of the lot, which is used to park new automobiles of the Rauscher Chevrolet Co., 1000 North Kirkwood road.

Sgt. Sutton said the lower part of the tree is obscured by parked automobiles and a small trailer parked next to it. Employes of the automobile company had checked the trunks of the automobiles Friday during the search and prospective automobile buyers had been on the lot at various times.

The police officer returned for another look at the lot yesterday after recalling that he had frequently seen other children playing on it.

Gary, eldest of four sons of Mr. and Mrs. Hartzke, told his mother he was going out Thursday morning but would return shortly because he was expecting a friend to telephone him about going swimming. The friend, who did not call, later came to the home asking for Gary.

At least 75 persons took up the search Friday after the boy failed to return Thursday night. Searchers included 12 Kirkwood police officers, 10 Kirkwood auxiliary policemen, 30 Boy Scouts and Explorer Scouts, Glendale auxiliary police and friends and neighbors. One party was dragging a small pond in the 800 block of North Wood road, Kirkwood, when the search ended.

BOSTON'S POLIO EPIDEMIC SHOWS SIGNS OF SLACKENING

BOSTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—Boston's polio epidemic showed signs of leveling off today with 11 new cases reported, but the shortage of nurses to care for acute cases was serious.

"The picture looks bright," said Dr. Frederick F. Maloof, assistant city health commissioner. He said today's 11 cases were "quite a drop" from 26 cases reported yesterday.

There have been a total of 24 deaths in Massachusetts, nine of them in Boston.

The city now has a total of 312 cases out of 758 for the entire state. The case load at this time last year was fewer than 100.

For all New England the total passed the 1000 mark, but outside Massachusetts there were no sharp increases over last year and nothing approaching an epidemic. New England had about 220 cases at this time last year.

Airman's Wife, Husband No. 2 Seek Lawyer's Aid in Tangle

Pair Requests Privacy as They Await Arrival of Freed P.O.W., Whom Woman Married First.

NEVADA CITY, Calif., Aug. 6 (UP)—Mrs. Una Schmidt, who married another man thinking her prisoner-of-war husband dead, and her second husband, Alford Fine, have asked an attorney to help them in their marital tangle, it was disclosed today.

Attorney Harold A. Berliner would not disclose whether the 20-year-old woman would stick by her logger husband or return to Airman Daniel C. Schmidt, just released after imprisonment by the Chinese Communists.

"This is a problem that concerns three adult people and only these people can work it out," Berliner said. "It's no one's business but their own."

Pair Wants Privacy.

Mrs. Schmidt and Fine said they hoped all inquiries would be directed to Berliner "in order that our private lives may become private again."

The meeting between the couple and Berliner was uncovered by a staff reporter of the Sacramento Bee. The reporter, Al Trivelpiece, talked to the couple after their meeting with Berliner in return for his promise not to disclose their hiding place in the Sierra Nevada.

"The boy is the problem," Fine told the Bee. "He calls me 'Daddy' and I'm the only one he has known." The boy is Daniel Walter, the 2-year-old son of Schmidt and Una.

Fine indicated he wouldn't give up his wife without a fight. "When you love a woman, you stick to her," Fine said.

Allotment Issue.

As to allotments she continued to receive as the wife of the young airman, Mrs. Schmidt said: "I have discussed the matter with Mr. Berliner. I am certain I have done nothing improper or illegal."

Capt. Aubrey Rogers of the Air Force finance center at Denver had said earlier the center's legal department was considering the "legal aspects of Mrs. Schmidt's allotment." Rogers said the case was unprecedented in Air Force history.

Fine and Mrs. Schmidt confirmed they still plan to meet Schmidt when he arrives in the United States. They said they would arrange their own transportation to the meeting place.

Meantime, Schmidt was in Tokyo. An Air Force spokesman there said "He is still all for the girl and doesn't want to give her up." He added Schmidt was anxious to see his son.

Left Logging Camp.

Mrs. Schmidt and Fine vanished from the Soda Springs (Calif.) logging camp early Thursday, two days after the story of their marriage was made public.

She married Schmidt, a childhood sweetheart, in their home town of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, five weeks before he went overseas. She was notified in January 1953 that his plane had been shot down over Korea.

"I received no further information about the fate of my husband and I believed he was dead," Mrs. Schmidt said.

She said she married Fine in September 1954 only to learn in November that her husband was still alive.

RED HUNTERS GET POWER TO SEE TAX DATA

Eisenhower Issues Order for House Group —Source of Communists' Money Sought.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—The House Committee on Un-American Activities has been armed with authority to examine income tax returns in a drive to uncover "secret angels" of the United States Communist party.

An executive order issued by President Eisenhower yesterday granted the authority which was requested by Chairman Francis E. Walter (Dem.), Pennsylvania, two months ago. The committee has not had such powers since the days of the old Dies committee.

Committee sources told the United Press the authority would be used to determine where and how the Communist front organizations get their funds. In some cases, they said, financial "angels" of the front groups have no visible means of support.

The committee does not plan to use the powers in any one inquiry. The informant said it will "greatly facilitate the work of the committee" in its continuing effort to root out subversives.

This source cited the case of the Civil Rights Congress, whose officials went to jail for contempt of Congress rather than surrender financial records. The committee could have obtained the financial data with its new powers.

Committee aids said the authority would have been useful in the current investigation into the group organized to seek "justice" for executed atomic spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. Thus far big contributions to the Rosenberg committee have not been disclosed.

At the conclusion of hearings last night, Walter said he would ask Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., to list the Rosenberg committee as subversive. Four Federal Bureau of Investigation undercover agents testified that Communists were "very active" in fund-raising and propaganda drives in behalf of the Rosenbergs.

Walter said testimony of all 21 witnesses called prove the Communists exploited the Rosenberg trial in an attempt to discredit the United States and raise funds for their own use.

It is understood that the Rosenberg group filed tax returns with the Internal Revenue Service but, with Government permission, destroyed its records after the service had finished with them.

A committee source said that prior to 1947 many organizations, now determined to be Red fronts, were tax-exempt. Now, however, they must file returns.

ERWIN'S WITNESS TELLS OF THREATS BY CHINESE REDS

FORT LEWIS, Wash., Aug. 6 (AP)—A Marine officer and former prisoner of war in Korea testified today that the Chinese Reds "laid it on the line" that he would either sign their documents or never see his family again.

Lt. Col. John N. McLaughlin of Savannah, Ga., first defense witness to appear at the Army court-martial of Lt. Jefferson D. Erwin, was interned at the same camp No. 5 at Pyoctong with Erwin.

Erwin, a career soldier from Blanchard, Okla., is charged with aiding the enemy and making disloyal statements while a prisoner of war.

McLaughlin said every prisoner in the camp was under mental duress because of threats made by their captors.

"Conditions in the camp and the number of deaths indicated that the Chinese were determined to accomplish their ends," he testified. "Despite their indoctrination program, that prison camp was the best school of anti-Communism we could have attended."

McLaughlin said he didn't believe Erwin and others who voiced Communist line statements at various meetings prisoners actually believed wha they were saying.

FAMILY HERE 50 YEARS TO HOLD REUNION TODAY

Members of the family of the late Charles Saussele Sr., St. Louis baker, will hold a reunion dinner today to mark the fiftieth anniversary of their coming to the United States from the province of Swabia in Germany.

More than 60 persons are expected to sit down to a meal of sausage, German potato salad and beer at the home of Charles Saussele Jr., 2617A Minnesota avenue.

The elder Sausselle came to this country in 1904 to work as a baker at the World's Fair here. After winning a prize for baking and opening a shop here, he brought his wife, six children, his brother, William, and his wife, to this country. They arrived in St. Louis in August 1905.

JAMES A. CAPRA

NIGHT SWIMMING PARTY COSTS LIFE OF LAW STUDENT

James A. Capra's Girl Companion Describes Death Crossing Meramec at 3:30 a.m.

James Anthony Capra, 10146 Lookaway drive, drowned early yesterday when attempting to swim across the Meramec river at Long Beach near Kirkwood. He was 26 years old and a law student as Washington University.

Capra had gone to the river about 3:30 a.m. with Earl J. Thuet, 3108 Rolla place; Miss Patricia Ruth Hancock, 3266 Frisco avenue, and Miss Rosalie Allison, 1117 Motard avenue.

Miss Allison, 18 years old, told the Post-Dispatch she, Thuet and Capra decided to swim to the opposite bank while Miss Hancock remained at Long Beach.

"I had almost reached the opposite bank when I saw Jim going up and down in the water with his arms outstretched," she said. "It was dark and I just thought he was kidding.

"I looked over my shoulder and said, 'Come on, Jim.' It wasn't until a little later that I realized he had disappeared."

Capra was known as a good swimmer. Thuet attempted unsuccessfully to find him after his disappearance. The body was recovered at 10:40 a.m. in 25 feet of water.

A Korean war veteran, Capra lived with his mother, Mrs. Charles Kruckemeyer, and his stepfather. His father, August Capra, lives at 3804 Shenandoah avenue.

Mrs. Louise Sheppard, 2913 Lucas avenue, and Harvey Miles, 2928A Delmar boulevard, drowned in the Mississippi river near the foot of Franklin avenue early yesterday, police reported.

Mrs. Sheppard and Miles, Negroes, had gone to the levee with another couple to cool off on their way home from a party, John Shelton, 2844 (rear) Lucas, one of the group, said. Mrs. Sheppard decided to dangle her feet in the water.

She walked out onto a track used to launch boats and fell into deep water. Miles went to her assistance and both were swept out into the current, where they sank. The bodies were not recovered.

Capra was awarded the Bronze Star medal for meritorious service as a first lieutenant with the Army in Korea in 1953.

Funeral services will be at 9 a.m. Tuesday at St. Matthews Church, Sarah street and Kennerly avenue. Burial will be in Memorial Park cemetery.

11 FREED FLYERS CALL RELATIVES ON FREE CIRCUITS

TOKYO, Sunday, Aug. 7 (AP)—The 11 United States flyers freed by Red China from 32 months of imprisonment today began placing their first trans-Pacific telephone calls to loved ones over free circuits provided by the Red Cross.

Last night they had a party. Today they were to hold their first newspaper, radio and television conference. Some planned to go to worship services.

Most of all, the 11 are looking forward to departure by plane either late Tuesday or Wednesday for a reunion with relatives and loved ones at Travis Air Force base, north of San Francisco.

Last night's party was one reuniting the flyers with Air Force and other friends in the Tokyo area.

The Air Force yesterday started them through rigorous medical and dental examinations, a process expected to require three days. Despite long months of captivity they were described as "all completely okay physically" by an Air Force medical source.

ST. CLAIR COUNTY BOARD TO BUY 200 VOTE MACHINES

The St. Clair county Board of Supervisors yesterday voted to purchase 200 voting machines for use in the county outside the city limits of East. St. Louis. The machines, costing $303,000, will be paid for out of bond issue funds previously approved for this purpose.

The mechanical voting devices, which are expected to be ready for use in the primary election next April, will be bought from the Automatic Voting Machine Corp., Jamestown, N.Y. They will be the same type as have been in use in East St. Louis since 1950.

GENERAL CAUTIONS AGAINST HYSTERIA OVER COMMUNISM

Maj. Gen. Lunsford E. Oliver, U.S.A. (Retired), who commanded the Fifth Armored Division in the Normandy invasion and throughout the campaign in Europe in World War II, told former members of the division here last night that "in recent years we have become somewhat hysterical in regard to Communism here in America."

"We must see to it that we do not lose our American liberties in insidious ways," Gen. Oliver said. He addressed a banquet at Hotel Jefferson which concluded a three-day convention of 150 veterans of the division.

"There has been a tendency in America for a man to lose his job and his reputation in his community if he expresses himself at variance with the ideas of the majority," he said. "There has been a tendency to accuse such a man of being a Communist, a subversive, and a fellow-traveler."

Progress, Gen. Oliver said, takes place only "when a man thinks a little differently from the way the majority does." Hysteria in the United States "has died down somewhat in the last two or three years, but there's still a little too much of it," he added.

ST. LOUIS MARINE RESERVE BATTALION DUE TO RETURN

Members of St. Louis's Third Infantry Battalion, Organized Marine Corps Reserve, were scheduled to return to the city today following two weeks of field training at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Through a rigid training schedule, the reservists completed in two weeks what is usually taught in eight weeks of Marine Corps recruit training.

During the first week of training, the men devoted their attention to preliminary study of the Marine's basic weapon, the M-1 rifle, and viewed demonstrations of other weapons used by the corps. The last week was devoted to practical experience on the rifle range.

2 CLUES GIVE NEW HOPE IN HUNT FOR MISSING WOMAN

Purse of Wealthy Kansas City Auto Dealer's Wife Found—Screams Heard.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 6 (AP)—Two new reports tonight gave police some hope of solving the disappearance of Mrs. Wilma Allen, wife of a wealthy automobile dealer.

A purse, similar to the one Mrs. Allen carried, was found in adjoining Johnson County, Kan., and the family identified it as hers.

In addition, a resident of rural Wyandotte county, just west of Kansas City, Kan., told officers he heard a woman screaming in a car near his home Thursday night between 9 and 10 o'clock.

His place is north of the area where the purse was found beside U. S. Highway 69.

Mrs. Allen, 34 years old, last was seen at a south side shopping center in Kansas City, Mo., about 1 p.m. Thursday. Her blood-spattered car and clothing were found near the Union Railroad station at 2:10 a.m. Friday.

Mrs. Allen, mother of two young sons, is the wife of William R. Allen, president of the Allen Chevrolet Co.

Saw Two Autos.

A. R. Crain, 73, told Lt. James Larkin of the Wyandotte sheriff's patrol that he and his wife heard a woman screaming Thursday night near their home in a wooded area.

Crain said he went to the door and saw two cars in front of his house. He heard a woman sobbing in the first car, Crain said, then more screaming which dwindled away as if the woman were being choked.

Crain said the first car was a dark color with a white top. Mrs. Allen's convertible was dark blue with a white top. Crain said the cars moved away to the north.

All of Mrs. Allen's clothing except her silk hose and a pink scarf were in the trunk of the car. The blue straw purse was missing until it was found tonight.

Lt. Larkin planned to ask for volunteers to make a thorough search tomorrow. He said a woman who lives near Crain also related that she heard a woman screaming about the same time, with the screaming muffled as though by a gag.

Husband Holds Little Hope.

By the United Press.

Mrs. Allen's distraught husband told police at his north Kansas City automobile agency that he had all but given up hope of seeing his wife alive again.

Allen said he did not believe she was the victim of a kidnap-for-ransom plot "but if I could get her back alive I hope that's what it is."

"More than one person must be involved," Allen said, "because she would have put up a real fight against one.

"She was a reserved sort of woman, but if a stranger tried to force entry into her car I'm sure she would have screamed and put up a severe struggle.

"Unless she was knocked out with a first blow," he said, "there should be a lot of scratches on the man or men who abducted her."

Police Watching Allen Home.

Chief of Detectives Eugene Pond assigned every available man to the search, but he was not optomistic.

"We don't know what we'll find—or even what we're looking for," he said.

City police were joined by the sheriff's patrol, state highway police, and law enforcement officers in the surrounding area.

Detectives kept a close watch on the Allen home on the theory that the abductor might try to communicate with Allen. They also were stationed at the parking lot where the car was found.

"TOO TIRED" TOO OFTEN?

Perhaps you are like so many people who think: "Vitamins? They're fine—for the other guy," without really understanding what a lack of vitamins can do to your body. For example, lack of the B-Complex vitamins thiamin and riboflavin (just two of Rybutol's many vital elements) can upset or unbalance your whole system. Actually you need a full day's supply of B Complex vitamins every day to be sure you have enough.

But here's good news: if this is what's the matter with you, we can promise Rybutol will help you, because penny for penny, ounce for ounce, Rybutol is the highest-potency B-Complex formula advertised anywhere. It is the largest-selling B-Complex formula of its kind in America. No matter what you have tried in the past, Rybutol may be your chance for a new lease on life.

UNIFIED WEST VITAL, PRESIDENT AGREES

Eisenhower Replies to Adenauer's Congratulatory Letter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—President Eisenhower has told Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany he agrees that "maintenance of Western unity" is vital to ultimate achievement of the West's peace objectives in future negotiations with Russia.

Adenauer had written the President July 25, congratulating him on the part he played in the Big Four talks at Geneva and declaring:

"The door is opened to future negotiations. The West can approach these negotiations with closed ranks."

The White House made public the exchange of letters today.

Replying on Aug. 1 Mr. Eisenhower said he was "fully aware that unity of peaceful purpose among the Western allies, which you, Mr. Chancellor, have done so much to establish."

The President added:

"We must now look forward to a period of arduous and continuing negotiation in the effort to achieve the aims of peace and justice for all men in an atmosphere which will permit the growth of freedom. As you know, I consider that the reunification of your country is of first importance in the process of establishing foundations for a lasting peace.

"I agree fully with your view that the maintenance of Western unity is vital to the ultimate achievement of these objectives and welcome your assurances of co-operation toward this end on the part of the German federal government."

OLD 138TH INFANTRY DINNER REUNION FRIDAY

More than 300 members of the old 138th Infantry regiment of World War I will meet for a dinner reunion Friday at the Anheuser-Busch Brewery, Seventh and Pestalozzi streets.

The regiment, which was largely recruited from St. Louis, saw active service in campaigns at St. Mihiel, Verdun, the Argonne Forest and the Vosges Mountains during World War I.

James H. Doherty, 6433 Murdoch avenue, has been elected field officer of the day and will preside over the reunion.

MAN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH ON U.S. 40 NEAR JONESBURG

JONESBURG, Mo., Aug. 6 (AP)—Albert P. Willis, 37 years old, of Detroit, was killed yesterday in a two-automobile crash on U.S. Highway 40 near Jonesburg.

Missouri highway patrolmen said Willis's automobile was attempting to pass a car driven by Mrs. Donna Gilliland, 51, of Troy, Mo., as she made a left turn from the highway when the crash occurred.

His car turned over. Mrs. Gilliland was not hurt.

DR. J. A. KEY DIES; ORTHOPEDIC SURGEON HERE

Suffers Heart Attack at Country Home Near Wesco—Was 65 Years Old.

Dr. J. Albert Key, noted orthopedic surgeon and former president of the American Orthopedic Association, died yesterday after suffering a heart attack at his country home at Wesco, Mo., near Steelville.

Dr. Key, who was 65 years old, had been under treatment for a heart ailment for several years. He was taken by ambulance to Barnes Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Dr. Key, who had offices at 4952 Maryland avenue and lived at 4924 Pershing avenue, was chief of orthopedic surgery of the Barnes Hospital group of hospitals and chairman of the division of orthopedics at the Washington University School of Medicine.

He also was associate professor of clinical orthopedic surgery at the medical school.

Colleagues said he was one of the first orthopedic surgeons of substantial importance in the country. He had written extensively in the field, which is concerned with treatment of diseases and injuries in the skeletal system.

Dr. Key was an original member of the Robert Jones Club, an organization of orthopedic surgeons formed after World War I and named after a Briton who was then the world's leading figure in the field.

Dr. Key received his degree in medicine at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, in 1918, and spent several years in training at hospitals in Boston, before establishing himself in St. Louis.

Surviving are his wife, and a son, Frank Key. Another son, John Albert Key Jr., an Army Air Force pilot in World War II, was reported missing in action in 1943.

The funeral will be from the Donnelly undertaking establishment, 3840 Lindell boulevard. The time has not yet been set.

NEW HAMPSHIRE GOVERNOR VETOES SWEEPSTAKES BILL

CONCORD, N.H., Aug. 6 (AP) — The State Legislature adjourned at 12:07 a.m. today after a 13-hour meeting in which it sustained Gov. Lane Dwinell's unexpected veto of a controversial bill that would have established the nation's only state-operated sweepstakes.

The Governor said the bill, designed to raise about $2,000,000 a year in state revenue, was "contrary to the best interests of this state."

The veto—first by the Republican Governor since he took office last January—followed protests by church leaders and others that the bill raised a moral issue "affecting the good name of the state, the cause of religion and the welfare of all our people."

NAMED TO BAR COMMITTEE

Appointment of Estill E. Ezell, 7912 Bonhomme avenue, Clayton, as chairman of the Federal Governmental Processes Committee of the St. Louis Bar Association was announced yesterday.

Other members of the committee are Richard L. Carp, John H. Cassidy Jr., Harry C. Elanton, Paul W. Lashly, George W. Perry, Frank E. Doyle, Wayne R. Howell, Lewis C. Green, Allen Goodloe, Joseph P. Logan, Joseph J. Gravely, George C. Dyer, R. T. Welch, Wilder Lucas and Bernard Greensfelder.

DOROTHY ZIEGLER TO DIRECT MUSIC FOR OPERA THEATER

Dorothy Ziegler, principal trombonist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will be acting musical director of Washington University's Opera Theater, Leigh Gerdine, head of the university's department of music, announced yesterday.

Miss Ziegler replaces Harold Blumenfeld, Opera Theater director, who is spending a year in Europe on leave of absence from the university.

Since the Opera Theater was organized three years ago, Miss Ziegler has served as coaching supervisor and associate director.

DEATH OF FRED J. BIER

Fred J. Bier, an assistant state's attorney in St. Clair county from 1932 to 1948, died of complications yesterday at his home at 808 Freeburg avenue, Belleville.

A graduate of St. Louis University School of Law, he was 46 years old. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Hazel Bier, and two adopted children, Ronald and Miss Jacqueline Bier.

3051 ALUMNI CONTRIBUTE $59,182 TO WASHINGTON U.

Donations totaling $59,182 were contributed to the 1955 Washington University Alumni Fund by 3051 almni, the university's Alumni Bulletin has reported. The figure is $4709 more than was donated last year.

The fund campaign was held from Feb. 23 to June 30, and was carried on locally and in 13 other cities by groups of alumni. More than 1000 graduates participated in the campaign, the report said.

RHEE PROMISES TO AVOID USING FORCE IN KOREA

Assures U.S. Generals He Didn't Mean to Be Threatening on Wresting Areas.

By ROBERT EUNSON

SEOUL (Sunday), Aug. 7 (AP)—President Syngman Rhee again has promised the United Nations Command that his South Korean soldiers will avoid any incidents which might provoke a rekindling of the flames of war in Korea.

"I did not mean to use force when I said (last Monday) we would take over places the Communists hold south of the Thirty-eighth Parallel," Rhee said in an interview today.

"Gen Leminitzer was here Thursday and I told him the same thing I am telling you. I do not say we will never use force, but for now we have no idea of using force."

Rush by Generals.

The U.N. commander-in-chief, Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, rushed heer from Tokyo to call on Rhee and find out what was behind his statement last week asserting the Communists would have to leave any ground, they hold south of the Thirty-eighth Parallel. The Reds occupy the city of Kaesong and the nearby Ongjin peninsula.

"Lemnitzer told me my declaration was threatening," said 80-year-old Rhee, his bronzed face crlinkling in a smile. "I told him I didn't mean for it to be threatening."

Rhee said Gen. Lemnitzer, Gen. Isaac D. White, United States Eighth Army commander, and William S. B. Lacy, United States ambassador to Korea told him he would be throwing a monkey wrench into the works.

"They are always telling me I will throw a money wrench into the works or rock the ship," Rhee said.

Lemnitzer asked Rhee if he did not plan to use force then what did he plan to do.

"I told him," Rhee said, "that we didn't plan to do anything but that I thought that it was up to the United Nations Command to go to the Communists in Kaesong and on the Angjin peninsula and tell them if they wanted to prove their desire for peace then they should get out of South Korea.

Dulles Perturbed.

Rhee told his visitors that while he was in Washington last year Secretary of State John Foster Dulles became perturbed on hearing that South Korea's provost marshal intended to ask Communist members of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission to leave the country. Rhee said Dulles promised "we will settle the matter peacefully."

Rhee then said that when Lemnitzer called on him last week the South Korean president noted "that was a year ago and the Communist members of the N.N.S.C. are still in South Korea spying."

Rhee objects to the Polish and Czechoslovakian members of the commission supervising the truce..

"Communists can't be neutrals," he snapped.

"We want them to get out."

INDICATION U.S. MAY CONSIDER LEAVING KOREA

ly expressed desire for action against the Reds is not necessarily supported fully by the people and all the military leaders of his war-torn country.

Tied in with the argument that American troops are a stabilizing influence is the fact that Communist members — Poles and Czechs—of the Korean truce supervision machinery are dependent on the United States military for protection. They are targets of suspicion and criticism in South Korea and it is a question whether they could function at all if American forces withdrew. Under the truce agreement they are supposed to be there and if they were molested the fact could quickly create new East-West troubles.

Chinese in North Korea.

Another argument advanced in some quarters against withdrawal is that the Chinese Communists are still believed to have several hundred thousand soldiers in North Korea. Their presence constitutes a kind of threat in spite of the more conciliatory attitude of the Chinese Communists. Regardless of Peiping's intent, the maintenance of its divisions in North Korea means that it still has the capacity to make trouble.

What appears to be lacking now, even in the view of advocates of early withdrawal, is a sound political base for action. Korea is a divided country under an armistice. The powers which halted the Communists' aggression are assumed to have some continuing responsibilities. The truce was made between the Reds and the United Nations command, and although the Reds have been accused of sweeping violations by introducing new weapons into North Korea, the provisions of the armistice still stand.

One way out of this situation would be to convert the armistice into some kind of peace settlement. There is little enthusiasm for this in the State Department, however. Any settlement which might now be possible, would simply freeze the present division of Korea. South Korea and the United States certainly have no intention of unifying the country on Communist terms, and there is no sign that the Reds would be prepared to release their hold on the territory they control.

FIRM ROBBED WHILE BOSS IS SHADOWING DETECTIVE

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 6 (AP) —A gunman held up a downtown finance company and escaped with $690 yesterday while the assistant manager trailed a "suspicious character" who in reality was a city detective.

The plainclothesman, Harry Mullikin, said he had looked through a front window of the Sterling Finance Co. "less than two minutes" before it was robbed. He had been assigned to watch for a man who took $251 Thursday from the Guaranty Finance Co.

The assistant manager, Ralph Green, said he noticed Mullikin "hanging around" and followed him. When Green returned to the firm a few minutes later, Mrs. Mildred Rains had news for him.

"We've been robbed," said Mrs. Rains, head cashier.

BERLIN'S NEW VITALITY MAKES IT FASCINATING CITY

Berlin has always been one of the world's "queen cities," with her wide streets, beautiful buildings, jewel-like lakes and parks, elegant shops and cosmopolitan atmosphere. Those who thought that war-torn Berlin would never again reach these heights might be surprised to know that today the city not only has all these attributes, but has an added vitality that makes it one of the most interesting cities in the world to visit.

Shining new buildings of glass and steel in the modern manner have risen like phoenixes along every boulevard; the parks are gay with flowers; smartly-dressed people frequent the well-stocked shops, the sidewalk cafes, the theatres and night clubs; capacity crowds enjoy the concerts, operas and art exhibitions.

FLORIDA

☑ Summer temperatures: seldom reach 90°, average 81.4°
☑ Beaches: 3,751 miles of beckoning shoreline
☑ Fish: over 600 species ☑ Accommodations: superb
☑ Prices: low ☑ Hayfever relief: spanking sea breezes provide pure, pollen-free air

World's whitest beaches

The beaches are an incredible snow-white, the Gulf waters are brilliantly blue along the 100-mile strip of northwest Florida that is aptly dubbed, "the miracle strip." Here you'll see great pine forests, the picturesque red snapper fishing fleet, and much of our nation's earliest heritage. Visit Pensacola's Fort San Carlos, first built by the Spanish in 1698. Fine lodgings, food and weather await you.

Fishing paradise

The Indian River region on Florida's east coast is polka-dotted with lovely resorts and laced with waterways. Bait up for sailfish, dolphin, channel bass, amberjack and other fighting denizens that abound in these Atlantic waters. Fish in the surf—and from boat, jetty, dock and bridges. A few of the many points of interest include: New Smyrna Beach, Melbourne, Vero Beach, Fort Pierce and Stuart.

Gay night life

Not far from the relaxing life at unspoiled beaches you'll find fine restaurants, theaters and night spots. Jacksonville, for instance, is but twenty minutes away from its broad beaches that front on the cool Atlantic. A short jaunt south is Daytona Beach astride a half-mile wide tidal river. Bask on the beach, swim in the refreshing surf, enjoy a breezy evening's stroll on its exciting boardwalk.

Cooled by air and sea

You'll be invigorated by dips in the ocean and pools as well as by the brisk breezes that habitually fan the Trade Winds Coast of Florida. Here at the Palm Beaches, Pompano Beach, Hollywood and down to Miami, newcomers to Florida are pleasantly surprised to find they not only have the blue Atlantic to play in, but the intracoastal waterway which provides excellent water skiing, boating and fishing. Prices for accommodations are now only a fraction of the winter-time cost.

Spectacular sights

Fish in central Florida, too, for giant bass in the myriad lakes of this rolling hill country. See botanical gardens where exotic tropical plants grow in profusion. Peer down through the crystal-clear water of spring-fed lakes at fabulous underwater gardens. Watch champion water skiers in action. Relax in modern motels and hotels where you can splash away your cares in pools and lakes.

Sports galore

Tennis, sailing, golf, horseback riding, shuffleboard, lawn bowling—all these and many more sports are popular pastimes in St. Petersburg. Come play at this and other beautiful West Coast resorts like Sarasota . . . where you'll marvel at masterpieces in the Ringling Museum of Art. Thanks to cooling breezes off the Gulf of Mexico, summer temperatures are always comfortable.

CALIFORNIA CELEBRATION TO HONOR PAUL BUNYAN

One of the West's more robust celebrations will be held in California's Redwood Empire town of Fort Bragg, on the coast of Mendocino county, from Sept. 3 through 5.

Scores of lumberjacks from California, Oregon and Washington will compete in logging events featured in the annual Return of Paul Bunyan shindig.

More than 10,000 persons are expected to attend the celebration built around the fabled Paul Bunyan, the giant woodsman whose feats rival those of Baron Munchausen in the matter of tall tales.

Bermuda Lighthouse.

Bermuda's first lighthouse, constructed on Gibbs Hill in 1844-46 was made of cast iron plates shipped over piece by piece from England. Sailors used to say of Bermuda, before the lighthouse, "If the Bermudas let you pass, beware of Hatteras."

Wisconsin's Door County An Ideal Vacation Spot

A trip into Wisconsin's Door county, the "thumb" that projects out into Lake Michigan to create Green Bay, is sure to be a memorable vacation.

The county has been aptly referred to as the New England of the Midwest. Liberally dotted along the shoreline on both the lake and the bay sides are picturesque fishing communities with stacks of buoys, reels of nets, seasoned fishing craft and the many other "props" that lend atmosphere to the section.

Frequently the meandering motorist comes upon clusters of buildings and waterfront scenes that might well have been plucked from Rockport or Gloucester, Mass., or some section of Maine's coastline.

With its thumblike configuration, a tourist can't just chance upon Door county; he gets there designedly — and wisely — when he heads north across the bridge at Sturgeon Bay that crosses a bay of the same name. The bay actually slices across the county, making the northern two-thirds of the county a large island. Highways 57 out of Green Bay and 42, which follows the lake front, join at the Sturgeon Bay bridge and then continue north, never more than about eight miles apart.

The highways rejoin at Sister Bay, where No. 57 ends. Highway 42 continues on to the tip, Gill's Rock, which is the terminus of a ferry line that carries passenger and cars across Death's Door, named Port des Mortes by the French explorers, a strait that give the county its name. The ferry goes to Washington Island, largest Icelandic settlement in the United States, and actually the northern tip of the county.

With 250 miles of shoreline, the county is ideal for fishing and yachting. Inasmuch as they are federal waters, no license is required for fishing outlying waters in Green Bay, Lake Michigan or connecting waters.

Small pleasure craft and luxurious big yachts are to be seen at Sturgeon Bay, Ephraim, Egg Harbor and the other ports. The scenic attractions make these favored waters for cruising.

Besides its fine old resort hotels that are well kept up, the county has modern cottages, cabins and motels. There are long stretches of fine beaches, miles of riding and hiking trails, four golf courses, tennis courts, nine county parks, three airports, two big state parks and seven lakes.

Old Indian trails wind through the woods of 1100-acre Potowatomi and 3400-acre Peninsula state parks. Outstandingly scenic sections were set apart for these parks. An observation tower atop Government Bluff in Potowatomi affords a fine view of the surrounding countryside, islands and waters of Sturgeon Bay. Two towers permit comparable views in Peninsula park, located on Green bay farther north. This park has what golfers describe as "one of Wisconsin's sportiest and most scenic 18-hole courses."

MORE ST. LOUISANS NOW VACATIONING IN JAMAICA

Summer after summer, more St. Louisans are vacationing on the tropical island of Jamaica. The reason is that returning travelers tell their friends that Jamaica is cooler than St. Louis or almost any other mainland city during August and September. The summer average is 78 degrees, and the mercury almost never goes above the 80s. Day after day the range is between 74 and 82 degrees at this season, and rain is rare.

But climate is only one of many attractions that Jamaica offers to St. Louisans. It's an accessible spot, and a visit there is inexpensive since summer hotel rates were lowered as usual on April 15. As much as 40 per cent has been slashed from winter rates by many Jamaica hotels, and these reductions will remain in effect until December.

This year Jamaica's 12-month Tercentenary festival includes cultural, historical and educational events along with international sports tournaments, athletic meets, brilliant military displays and entertainments. Programs in every month of 1955 celebrate the island's association with the British Commonwealth since 1655.

Nassau History.

Nassau history is rich with the trials of early world travelers and explorers, the exploits of pirates and blockade runners of the Civil War period.

PEACE GARDEN

The International Peace Garden is located at the approximate center of North America, on the boundaries of Canada and the United States, north of Dunseith, N.D., and about 15 miles south of Boissevain, Manitoba. The idea of a formal garden dedicated to peace between the two nations was conceived by Dr. Henry J. Moore of Islington, Ontario, in 1931. Construction work began the following year.

The Garden is composed of some 2200 acres, of which 888 are in the United States and 1312 in Canada. A good road winds through the woodland, skirting several attractive little lakes. A cairn built from stones gathered on both sides of the border is placed exactly astride the international boundary.

MARINE SIGHTSEEING IN AND NEAR MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla.—Few places in the world offer the tourist visitor the variety of marine experiences to be found in this tropical, year-round resort.

Here one can watch a deep sea diver at work on the ocean floor amid schools of colorful fish and a tropical sea garden;

Rent inboard motor boats and explore the islands and bits of uninhabited land in Biscayne Bay on one's own;

City of Miami

Numerous sight-seeing trips are available at Miami's city docks.

Visit jungles and Indian villages on sightseeing trips through rivers and canals;

Cruise past the palatial estates of the wealthy and famous on man-made islands;

Dance aboard a "floating night club" on moonlight cruises;

Enjoy all-day fishing expeditions into the Gulf Stream for as little as $3.50 a day;

And go sailing on a twin-hulled catamaran to the upper reaches of the Florida keys.

Headquarters for this marine sightseeing activity is the City Yacht Basin, adjacent to Bayfront Park and just a stone's throw from the busy Flagler street business district. Like a carnival midway, complete with barkers, a string of ticket booths lines the waterfront adjacent to the piers where the sightseeing boats are docked.

Visitors debating "which trip to take," might well wind up taking several, for each one is different. Cruise prices range from $1.70 to $2.

Passengers on glass-bottomed boat trips to the ocean reefs not only see a deep sea diver at work 40 to 70 feet below the surface in crystal clear waters, but also have an opportunity to purchase souvenirs which he collects from the ocean floor.

Those who rent a boat can chart their own course and go where they please, sightseeing, exploring or fishing to their heart's content.

The homes of such famous personalities as the late Damon Runyan, FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover, night club impresario Lew Walters, William D. Pauley and Albert Sabath, entertainers Harry Richman and Zazu Pitts, and the late Al Capone are seen on cruises around Biscayne Bay.

One cruise includes a visit to Villa Vizcaya, fabulous estate of the late farm machinery magnate James Deering, which now serves as the Dade County Art Museum.

Miami also is headquarters for ships offering ocean cruises to one of the nearby Caribbean islands such as Cuba, Nassau, Jamaica or the Dominican Republic.

LUCK AT MONTE CARLO

You may not be "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" but you can have a lot of fun in the ornate gambling palace known as the Monte Carlo Casino.

Here, in a setting of crystal chandeliers, marbled floors and mirrored walls, you may "faites vos jeux" with chemin de fer, roulette or vingt-et-un.

MT. RUSHMORE MEMORIAL POPULAR WITH TOURISTS

Known as America's "Shrine of Democracy," the Mount Rushmore National Memorial in the Black Hills of South Dakota is the fourteenth most popular of the 152 parks, monuments, memorials and historical sites administered by the National Park Service.

Mount Rushmore Memorial was started in 1927 and completed in 1941. The faces of Washington, Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt and Lincoln are 60 feet from hairline to chin and are proportioned to men 465 feet tall.

Probably one of the most photographed features in the country, Mount Rushmore has been visited by an estimated 12,00,000 persons since work began on the 6000-foot mountain.

Buried City.

One of the largest collections of Mound Builder's relics in the United States is located in the Ancient Buried City, near Wickliffe, Ky.

TRINIDAD CUSTOM

Visitors to Trinidad are often surprised to be the subject of humorously phrased calypsos when relaxing in local night clubs.

The native singers and musicians pick up biographical notes from the subject's companions and compose in ditty in a few minutes.

CAPITAL 'MESS' GROWS BIGGER, SAYS SYMINGTON

Senator Assails Pentagon Setup — Asserts G.O.P. Policies Favor 'Loafers.'

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—The Eisenhower Administration has created a bigger "mess in Washington" than any mess left by the Democrats, Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, said tonight.

The Pentagon contains "the biggest mess that I have ever seen in the 10 years that I have been in Washington," the former Air Force secretary added, in an interview on the radio program, "Capital Cloakroom."

However, Symington declined to comment on the case of Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott, who resigned under fire last week. Symington, a member of the Senate investigations subcommittee which had been inquiring into Talbott's partnership in a management engineering firm, said it would "ill behoove" him to comment on the matter until the subcommittee's report had been written.

The subcommittee closed the case last Thursday, after Symington's transcribed interview had been recorded. Chairman John L. McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, announced that Talbott's resignation had "satisfactorily resolved the matter," that the investigation was concluded and that there would be no formal report.

'Four' Armed Services.

Instead of true unification, the country now has four armed services, Symington said—the Army, Navy, Air Force "and the ever-growing department of defense," he went on:

"I prophesy to you, and I don't know when it will come, but when they really take that Pentagon building apart, from the standpoint of structure and function, you're going to see the analysis of the biggest mess that I have ever seen in the 10 years I have been in Washington."

Asserting that the Democratic party "has always stood for the little people," Symington expressed sympathy with farmers and workers, as against "loafers."

"I have a very interesting chart which shows that at the same time that parity has been going down steadily now for years, which means that the farmer has been getting less of the income, the stock market has been going up steadily," he said.

"In other words, those who loaf in this country today, but have a little money, the loafer is being very much benefitted by present policies; but the man who works hard, not only on the farm, but the worker, too, from the standpoint of what he can buy for his money, they are the ones that are getting it in the neck, as we Democrats see it."

Business Mergers.

Increasing concentration of wealth is leading the United States toward "socialistic government," Symington continued. He argued that business mergers lead to price fixing and ultimately Government control of private industry.

"I believe this Administration is moving towards big business and big farming to a point that is really beginning to hurt the free enterprise system," the Missouri Senator observed.

Asked whether the Administration was succeeding in getting more defense for less money, Symington termed that a policy of "strength through weakness."

"It has been carefully developed by the Secretary of Defense to a point now where it has been so completely knocked in the head as a policy that you find he doesn't make as many of those remarks as he used to."

Symington said the Russians have more intercontinental jet bombers than the United States, the greatest armies in the world and "many times more submarines than we have." He added:

"We are supreme on top of the sea, but they are supreme below the sea."

The Senator said the Administration was "unwilling or unable" to tell the American people the truth about the military situation. If it did, he contended, the people would demand an adequate military establishment.

$15,000 IN JEWELS STOLEN FROM ARLENE FRANCIS HOME

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6—Burglars entered the home of television performer Arlene Francis last night and took jewels valued at $15,000 and $800 in cash.

Police said a maid on the fourth floor of her private home heard a noise in the third-floor master bedrooms at 11 p.m. and, putting on the light, saw three men dash down the stairs. Police said they had jimmied the front door to gain entrance.

The maid and her husband, the houseman, were the only ones in the home. Miss Francis and her husband, Martin Gabel, a producer, were away. Their son, Peter, was at camp.

CHARGED WITH 5-CENT THEFT

A warrant charging Edwin Hoffmann, unemployed, 4600 block of Pope avenue, with stealing 5 cents from a news vendor's stand at Pope and West Florissant avenue was issued yesterday by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Sidney Faber.

The news vendor, Edward Palka, had reported to police that money was disappearing from his stand. Officers put a watch on it and Friday saw Hoffmann take the nickel. After his arrest he admitted the theft, police said.

Here's your road-map to Northland

Take the high road or the low road...
you'll be at Northland before you know it.

We're at the intersection of West Florissant and Lucas & Hunt Roads... just a short right (or left) turn from every road that intersects either of these major arteries. We're next door to Ferguson and Florissant, and the great northwest end of St. Louis. We're a hop-skip from the Airport neighborhood and Pasadena Hills. In short, we're just a few minutes from more than 125,000 homes... a half million people!

This is no accident. We studied the map to find the spot that would be most convenient to the greatest number of people... and our final choice is just that. In the future it will be even more convenient when the proposed road programs become a reality and the new super-highways are constructed.

And if your address is Illinois...
Cross over a bridge... and you're almost there.

From Alton and other cities to the north, the Lewis & Clark Bridge and Highway 67 lead you to Highway 66 where you make an easy right turn at the clover-leaf... spin along 66 a short distance to Florissant Avenue, make a left turn south directly into Northland. From Edwardsville and other cities to the east, the Chain of Rocks Bridge and Highway 66 take you to Florissant Avenue where you make a left turn and head straight for Northland.

The traffic signals are almost ready to turn "green" at Northland, into a new world of convenience... with you in the driver's seat!

APPLIANCE MERGER BY RCA, SEARS OK'D

Justice Department Approves Combination Involving 2 Other Firms.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—The Department of Justice has given its blessing to a proposed $130,000,000 merger involving some operations of Radio Corp. of America, Sears-Roebuck & Co. and two large appliance manufacturers, it was announced today.

Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes, chief of the department's anti-trust section, said an extensive study proved that the transaction will have no major impact on competitors in the markets involved.

The department has an anti-trust suit pending against RCA charging the huge concern with monopolizing the radio-television patent licensing business. But the current deal involves different fields and will work this way:

The Whirlpool Corp. of America, manufacturers of a home laundry equipment line, and the Seegar Co., manufacturers of refrigerators and freezers, will pool their assets. RCA and Sears then will acquire part of this new company, with RCA contributing its entire stove and air-conditioner lines.

Sears already owns stock in both Whirlpool and Seegar, but plans for the merger state that Sears and RCA together will have "less than 50 per cent" control in the firm.

Plans for the merger were made public recently by Whirlpool in a letter to stockholders. Whirlpool officials lated told the United Press that all parties to the agreement had sought Justice Department approval. Barnes was then asked about the anti-trust implications.

He said today that all aspects of the deal were considered. First, the department gave weight to the prospect that participation by Sears and RCA jointly "might develop into something like the duPont and General Motors combine in the white goods (appliance) line."

This was no serious cause for concern, he said.

"Further, we received assurances from RCA that it will not use its position to supply Sears with its radio, television or phonographs products."

He said that since Sears and RCA both have stove lines now, the department also took up the possibility that competition between the two would be eliminated.

KOREA TRUCK UPSETS, 10 SOLDIERS KILLED

10 Other G.I.s Injured When Vehicle Leaves Bridge and Catches Fire.

SEOUL, Aug. 6 (AP)—Ten United States soldiers of the Twenty-fourth Division were killed and 10 injured today when an Army truck taking them to an airport turned over in a ditch and burned. The truck driver escaped injury.

An Army source said two of the injured were reported in grave condition and four others seriously injured with burns, cuts and broken legs suffered in the fiery accident.

Names were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Bound for rest and recreation leave in Japan, the soldiers had piled their baggage into the big truck and were heading for Kimpo air base, 15 miles northwest of Seoul.

The truck plunged through the railing of a narrow bridge and turned over. It landed in a small stream and caught fire. Some of the soldiers, pinned down by the truck, apparently were burned to death.

Eight died at the scene of the accident. One died on the way to the hospital and another at the hospital.

23 SCHOLARSHIPS IN 'UPPER DIVISION'

New Program at Washington U. Assists Juniors and Seniors.

Scholarships have been awarded to 23 students who will attend Washington University as juniors or seniors next year, Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley announced yesterday.

Shepley said the awards are the first under a new system by which the school will give about 50 scholarships per year to students in the "upper division." Formerly only a small number were available, he said.

Applicants under the system may be graduates of two-year junior colleges or students transferring to Washington University from other accredited institutions after completing the first two years. Awards are made to them in the Junior College honor scholarship category.

Fifteen of the scholarships awarded yesterday are for full tuition and are valued at $1200, and eight for half tuition, valued at $600.

St. Louisans who were given scholarships were LeRoy Crouther Jr., 5224 Dewey avenue; David N. Dietzler, 2703A Ann avenue; Shirley A. Eismann, 801A Eichelberger street; John W. Gerber, 6450 Devonshire avenue; Lawrence Guenther, 4260 North Florissant avenue; Joan R. Jonas, 5610 Enright avenue; Marilyn C. Spencer, 1953 Alfred avenue; and Murdina D. Thomas, 2300 Miami street.

Other recipients included Joan H. DeVan, East St. Louis; Dale Anna, Earl Compton, Robert Gentach, Stanley Proctor Jr. and Robert Scharringhausen, all of Belleville; Janice Allen, Joplin, Mo.; Richard Fraser, Bonne Terre, Mo.; Joseph Harkey, Wadesboro, N. SESTRIC CITES 24 PCT. DROP IN FALSE ALARMS IN YEAR

A drop of 24 per cent in the number of false alarms in the fiscal year ended last April was reported yesterday by Director of Public Safety Joseph P. Sestric, who said that 1081 false alarms were turned in compared with 1477 in the previous year.

Despite the reduction, Sestric pointed out that almost one of every eight of the 8868 alarms received by the Fire Department in the year were false, a proportion he said is too high.

Eighty-eight arrests were made for turning in false alarms in the year. Sixty adults were tried in courts and 37 were convicted and fined a total of $2300. The cases of 24 juveniles arrested were turned over to juvenile authorities. Four others were dismissed with warnings.

PHILANTHROPIES OF ROCKEFELLERS SET AT 2½ BILLION

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP)—The philanthropic gifts of the Rockefeller family over the past century were estimated at $2,500,000,000 by the New York Times tonight.

The Times story said "even the Rockefellers and those associated with them have no more accurate idea of what has been spent or what is left, and they have always discouraged 'guesstimates'."

However, the Times said, financial sources familiar with the facts estimate that what has been expended in philanthropies and what is still left in the treasuries of the Rockefeller Foundation and other funds stands at between $2,500,000,000 and $3 billion dollars. The basis of this astronomical sum is a total of $1 billion given by John D. Rockefeller Sr. and his son, John Jr.

Most of this was in oil stocks, with which the elder Rockefeller founded his tremendous fortune. These have multiplied in value, the Times said, until the holdings are worth the Times' estimate of what the family has given "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world."

8000 35TH DIVISION GUARDSMEN PARADE

138th Infantry From Here Joins in Review at Camp McCoy.

By THEODORE P. WAGNER
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMP McCOY, Wis., Aug. 6—More than 8000 members of the Thirty-fifth Division, Missouri-Kansas National Guard, paraded today before state and military leaders in the annual division review, highlight of summer encampment.

In the reviewing stand were Gov. Fred Hall of Kansas; Lt. Gov. James T. Blair of Missouri; Maj. Gen. P. D. Ginder, former commander of the Tenth Infantry Division, now post commander here; Maj. Gen. John C. McLaughlin, of Sedalia, commander of the Thirty-fifth Division; Maj. Gen. Albert D. Shepard, Adjutant General of Missouri, and other civilian and military observers.

Khaki-clad troops, marching on a wide paved street, passed the reviewing stand. Campaign ribbons and shoulders patches of famous World War II divisions marked the veterans in the ranks. Keeping step with the old-timers were fresh-faced recruits, many participating in their first field training.

'St. Louis Blues' for 138th.

Battle streamers swung from the regimental colors of the three rifle regiments, the 137th of Kansas and the 138th and 140th from Missouri.

As the 138th Infantry, the St. Louis regiment, executed "Eyes right," the band swung into a march arrangement of "St. Louis Blues." The regiment, 1228 strong, was led by its commander, Col. Arthur G. Gough, 8615 Brookshire lane, University City. Lt. Col. Frank Raisher, 712 Kingsland avenue, University City, is regimental executive officer.

Following the marching ranks of infantrymen rolled the heavy equipment of the division artillery. Riders on the vehicles, from which heavy artillery pieces trailed, sat with arms folded at stiff attention. The artillerymen wore red neckerchiefs, in contrast to the blue worn by the infantry. Battery A, 182nd Field Artillery, of St. Louis, was in the artillery contingent.

Prior to the parade the Eisenhower trophy for the best company-size unit was awarded to Service Battery, 128th Field Artillery, Lexington, Mo. The McLaughlin trophy for the outstanding rifle company, went to Co. K, 137th Infantry, Arkansas City, Kan.

In their first week in camp the guardsmen spent long hours on the weapons range, firing rifles, machine guns, carbines and mortars. Artillerymen zeroed-in on distant targets spotted by plane. Provisional training companies were formed of new men, who are instructed in basic military subjects.

New High for Attendance.

The division has established a new high for camp attendance, 98 per cent of total strength. The 138th Infantry, with 98.7 per cent for the regiment, has eight companies with 100 per cent attendance here.

More than 60 visitors accompanied Gov. Hall for a two-day visit to camp. The group, traveling in five planes, included Carl L. Nicolay, city manager of Abilene; Paul F. Mitchum, mayor of Kansas City, Kan.; Lt. Gov. John McCuish; Attorney General Harold R. Fatzer, members of the State Legislature, newspaper publishers and editors and civic leaders.

The Missouri delegation was a minority group in contrast to Kansas, although Missouri furnishes a majority of the division troops.

The visitors witnessed a demonstration of the firepower of an infantry battalion Friday night. The demonstration, by the Kansas battalion, was designed to acquaint the 775 recruits in camp with the weapons they will use.

One disappointment of the encampment is the heat. The men from Missouri and Kansas expected to find the customary Wisconsin weather, cool and perhaps moist. While it has rained here, it has also been uncomfortably warm.

Except for complaining about the heat, the training has been highly successful by majority opinion. Late today and tomorrow, pleasure trips were arranged to the Wisconsin Dells and other vacation spots.

200 LANDING FIELDS LISTED IN NEW MISSOURI DIRECTORY

Copies of the 1955 directory of landing facilities in Missouri, listing 101 public airports and 99 personal-use fields, are being distributed to aircraft owners in the state by the aviation section of the Missouri Division of Resources and Development, it was announced yesterday.

The purpose of the directory is to provide a guide for pilots in the state, offering them descriptions and locations of both types of fields.

"The unique thing about the directory this year," Dale Fearn, chief of the aviation section said, "is the inclusion of personal use flight strips. They were included to assist the pilots in landing in areas not otherwise served by public airports as well as at times when weather may require precautionary landings."

DAME EDITH SITWELL, POET, AUTHOR, BECOMES CATHOLIC

LONDON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Dame Edith Sitwell, poet and author, announced today that she has been received into the Roman Catholic Church.

"I have taken this step," she said, "because I want the discipline, the fire and the authority of the church. I am hopelessly unworthy of it, but I hope to become worthy."

Last year she was made a Dame of the Order of the British Empire—equivalent to a knighthood.

Missouri Democrats Supported Eisenhower Foreign Program

Review of Session's Voting Discloses They Were Cool to His Domestic Measures, However.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—With only a few exceptions, Missouri's two Democratic Senators and nine Democratic Representatives gave President Eisenhower's foreign policy firm support on key votes in the first session of the Eighty-fourth Congress.

In the field of domestic legislation, however, the Missouri Democrats were generally cool to the Administration's program. They supported most of the counter-proposals sponsored by the Democratic majority, although Missourians in the House split several times on crucial domestic votes.

The state's two Republican Representatives — Thomas A. Curtis Jr. of Webster Groves and Dewey Short of Galena — continued to vote with the conservative wing of the G.O.P. on most foreign policy issues but supported the Eisenhower Administration on some important parts of its domestic program.

In Illinois, Senators Paul H. Douglas (Dem.), and Everett M. Dirksen (Rep.), were on opposite sides of the fence on most domestic legislation. Dirksen improved his record of support for the Administration. House members from southern Illinois generally voted along party lines, with some prominent exceptions.

A Post-Dispatch survey of 14 key votes in the House and 11 in the Senate showed that:

On four important House votes involving foreign affairs, Missouri Democrats supported the President almost solidly on two occasions, voted for one weakened Eisenhower proposal and supported a Democratic counter-move once.

On 10 important domestic issues in the House, Missouri Democrats voted almost solidly against the Administration five times and split four times, supporting Mr. Eisenhower firmly just once—on the question of raising congressional salaries.

On five key foreign policy issues in the Senate, Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, supported the Administration four times and voted against the President once, on Mr. Eisenhower's proposal for an atomic "peace ship."

Missouri's senior Senator, Thomas C. Hennings Jr., also a Democrat, voted with the Administration on three of the five foreign policy issues, was announced in favor of a fourth Eisenhower proposal and voted against the atomic ship.

On six domestic issues in the Senate, Hennings and Symington voted against the Administration five times, supporting Democratic counter-proposals instead. They voted for one measure indorsed by Mr. Eisenhower—increased congressional salaries.

Douglas of Illinois voted for four Eisenhower foreign policy proposals and against the atomic ship. Douglas was against the Administration on the six key domestic issues, including his vote against higher salaries for Senators and Representatives.

Dirksen supported Mr. Eisenhower on three foreign policy issues. He was absent when the Senate voted on the atomic ship and on the McCarthy resolution to restrict the President's actions at the Geneva conference. The resolution was decisively defeated. Domestically, Dirksen supported Mr. Eisenhower on five of the six important issues and was absent once.

Symington, a former Secretary of the Air Force and former chairman of the National Security Resources Board, continued his fight against reduced appropriations for national defense. He sponsored successful Senate amendments to increase funds for the Marine Corps by $46,000,000 and criticized Defense Department estimates of Soviet air strength.

Hennings Prestige Rises.

Hennings, who will come up for re-election next year, contiued to rise steadily in prestige in the Senate, as a younger member on whom Democratic leaders placed increased reliance. Late in the session, he was named acting assistant majority leader, or Democratic whip.

Hennings served as secretary of the Senate Democratic Conference, which names members of the important steering and policy committees. He was also a member of the policy committee.

Douglas, despite a severe attack of undulant fever which handicapped him throughout most of the session, sponsored the Senate version of the bill increasing the minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 an hour.

In his recorded votes, Dirksen, also up for re-election in 1956, came closer to the Eisenhower wing of the Republican party. Once identified as a supporter of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin, Dirksen was not on hand when McCarthy's restrictive Geneva resolution came up. It mustered only four votes.

St. Louis Flood Bill.

The St. Louis area's three House members, Representatives Frank M. Karsten and Mrs. Leonor K. Sullivan, Democrats, and Curtis, were active in obtaining approval of a bill authorizing a $130,987,000 flood protection program for the city. Hennings and Symington backed the bill in the Senate. It was passed by both houses and sent to President Eisenhower.

Mrs. Sullivan continued her activities in behalf of consumer interests, sponsoring a bill to set up a food stamp plan for distribution of surplus food to needy persons.

Karsten, named to the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee this session, was a leader in the Democratic fight to grant a $20-a-person income tax reduction. The measure passed narrowly in the House, then was beaten in the Senate.

Curtis, also a member of the Ways and Means Committee, sponsored bills relating to taxation of life insurance companies and tax averaging.

Melvin Price's Record.

Mr. Eisenhower's nomination of Allen Whitfield, Des Moines (Ia.) attorney, to the Atomic Energy Commission and the controversial Dixon-Yates power contract, negotiated at the President's direction, were opposed vigorously by Representative Melvin Price (Dem.), East St. Louis. Whitfield's name was withdrawn under fire, and the Dixon-Yates contract was canceled.

Price, a member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy and the House Armed Services Committee, also attacked Administration proposals to cut Army ground forces and the "go-slow" policy in aircraft procurement. He is now in Geneva attending the conference on peaceful use of atomic energy.

House votes on domestic issues on which Missouri Democrats almost unanimously supported Democratic proposals were the $20 tax cut, an 8.2 per cent pay increase for postal workers, high rigid farm price supports, increased social security benefits and the $1 minimum wage.

The Missouri Democrats divided to some extent on the Democratic highway bill, the measure exempting natural gas producers from federal regulation, the housing and military reserve bills and the bill increasing the pay of congressmen.

Foreign Issues.

On four principal foreign relations measures, Missouri Democrats gave President Eisenhower almost solid support on his reciprocal trade bill and the foreign aid authorization bill. The delegation swung behind the lower foreign aid appropriation and split on the issue of admission of Hawaii and Alaska as states.

Symington, Hennings, Douglas and Dirksen supported the foreign aid appropriation and extension of reciprocal trade, with Hennings absent but announced as favoring the latter measure. Symington, Hennings and Douglas voted against the McCarthy resolution and the atomic peace ship. All four senators opposed the defeated Lehman resolution to deny Mr. Eisenhower Senate backing for any action he might take toward the islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Hennings, Symington and Douglas supported the $20 tax cut, a higher postal pay increase than requested by Mr. Eisenhower, the Democratic highway and housing bills and the increased Marine Corps appropriation.

The two Missouri Republicans, Curtis and Short, supported the Eisenhower Administration by voting against Democratic proposals for a $20 tax cut and high farm price supports. Curtis and Short also voted for the natural gas exemption bill and the House amendment ending public housing.

However Curtis voted with the Democrats for a $1 minimum wage and was against the compromise military reserve bill. He opposed the Democratic-sponsored proposals for an 8.3 per cent postal pay raise, highway construction and social security improvements. Short broke ranks to support the Democratic postal pay and highway bills.

Both Curtis and Short were against the foreign aid authorization and appropriation bills. However, Curtis voted for Mr. Eisenhower's reciprocal trade program, while Short was paired against it. Curtis was against and Short for the motion to recommit (kill) the joint Hawaii-Alaska statehood bill.

The three southern Illinois Democratic Representatives generally supported the Administration's foreign program while opposing some major Republican domestic legislation. However, Representative Gray voted against both foreign aid bills.

ADMITS KILLINGS; HIS FATHER SERVED IN SCOTLAND YARD

LONDON, Aug. 6 (AP)—A quiet-spoken schoolmaster, son of the late chief of Scotland Yard's murder squad, was charged today with bludgeoning his wife and baby daughter to death. Police said he admitted the double killing.

The accused man is Frederick James Chapman, 32 years old. His father, Chief Detective Superintendent William Chapman, bossed all Britain's biggest murder hunts until his death two weeks ago.

Chapman stood impassive in the dock at a suburban magistrates' court as his father's closest friend, Detective Superintendent Philip Burney, testified on his arrest. Burney and the accused man walked together as chief mourners at the elder Chapman's cremation.

Burney told of finding the mutilated bodies of 30-year-old Mrs. Irene Grace Chapman and her year-old daughter Corinne in a bathroom at the Chapman's new house in Orpington, a prosperous suburb.

Neither Chapman nor the police gave any hint of a motive.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Government now has an acute need for civilian medical officers and expects to pay higher salaries than the prevailing entrance rates. The Defense Department alone needs 1000 civilian medical officers, the Civil Service Commission reports.

CATS CROWDED BUT ZOO BIRTH RATE STILL SOARS

All the cages at the Zoo's lion house are filled, but the birth rate there keeps right on climbing, Keeper Michael Kuszlak glumly reported yesterday.

A baby leopard born last Tuesday was the fifteenth new arrival among the big cats this year. No. 16, a tiger, is expected in a couple of weeks. That's the biggest increase the cats have ever had, and things are getting a bit crowded, although some of the young animals have been sold.

Kathryn, the mama leopard, has had four offspring now, at the modest pace of one a year for four years. Most mama leopards have litters of three or four.

20 KILLED AND 6 WOUNDED IN FRENCH-AFRICAN CLASHES

ALGIERS, Algeria, Aug. 6 (UP)—Twenty persons were killed and six wounded in clashes between French forces and North African natives, French authorities announced today.

Twelve khaki-clad soldiers of the rebel "Army of God" were killed just over the Tunisian border by the colonial infantry. One French soldier was killed and five wounded.

In another clash Thursday in Algiers, seven more rebels were killed and an officer of the Sixth Battalion of Alpine Chasseurs was wounded.

$6,000,000 HELIUM PLANT TO BE BUILT NEAR EXTELL, TEX.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Interior Department announced today that bids will be asked soon for construction of a $6,000,000 helium plant near Exell, Tex.

Under Secretary Clarence A. Davis said Exell, already the site of one of the helium plants of the Bureau of Mines, was chosen after consideration of a location near Keyes, Okla. Davis expressed hope another plant ultimately can be built near Keyes to take advantage of the helium-bearing natural gas available in that area.

The new plant is to have rated capacity of 100,000,000 cubic feet of helium a year. This is expected to increase the Government's production by about 50 per cent.

The Government is the only large-scale producer of helium, first used in 1917 to provide a nonflammable lifting gas for airships and balloons. The gas is also used in arc welding, in a furnace for production of the new metals titanium and zirconium, and for a number of medical purposes.

3000 MORE TELEPHONE USERS GET NEW DIALING SYSTEM

About 3000 telephone users in the Ladue-Creve Coeur area, with HEmpstead 2 and TRemont 2 numbers and also the new WYdown 3 numbers, will be able to dial virtually all subscribers in the St. Louis area starting today, R. A. Koch, local manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., announced yesterday.

The new direct distance dialing system, with equipment which distinguishes between local, interzone and long distance calls, first was introduced in this area in Mehlville earlier this year. Inauguration of the system in the Ladue-Creve Coeur area became possible with opening today of a $2,000,000 central office at Lindbergh boulevard and Ladue road.

Numbers with WYdown 1, 2 and 7 prefixes were to change to WYdown 3 at 2 a.m. today.

Bulganin, Preparing to Entertain West's Envoys, Scores Its Press

Says Newspapers Try to Make It Seem as If Soviet Rejected Eisenhower Arms Plan.

MOSCOW, Aug. 6 (AP) — There was a tinge of bittersweet in Soviet relations with the West today.

Western ambassadors were preparing to accept the invitation of Premier Bulganin to visit his country villa Sunday and bring the wives and kiddies for an afternoon luncheon, swimming and romping on the grass.

Meantime the Soviet press and Tass took up again a flurry over the Soviet attitude toward President Eisenhower's blueprint plan for arms inspection. The Premier was quoted as telling the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) that some foreign newspapers "are trying quite wrongly to make it seem as if the Soviet government was rejecting" Mr. Eisenhower's proposals, made July 21 at the Geneva Summit conference.

In the Supreme Soviet session at the Kremlin yesterday, translators appeared to understand Bulganin to say "the foreign press misunderstood" his references Thursday to the Eisenhower plan as a Soviet rejection.

The Soviet leaders also were apparently distressed to learn that Western reporters in the Kremlin galleries recorded the fact Parliament members laughed when Bulganin said both the United States and Soviet Russia "comprise vast areas on which, if it were desired, one could hide anything one wanted to." Aerial photography of military installations, as proposed by Mr. Eisenhower, "cannot provide the expected results," Bulganin said he told the United States in the Geneva talks.

Laughter is rare in the Kremlin. Mr. Eisenhower's quick comeback in a news conference in Washington Thursday—when he said he did not think the Soviet Union had closed the doors on the United States disarmament proposals—apparently awakened the Soviet chiefs to the alertness of world opinion on such a delicate subject as disarmament, which is no laughing matter.

The United States embassy said Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen planned to attend Bulganin's Sunday party, taking Mrs. Bohlen and their oldest daughter.

C. C. Parrott, British charge d'affaires, plans to take his family. Virtually everybody else invited on an ambassadorial or ministerial level is going.

Westerners noted, meantime, the velvet carpet treatment for two groups of Yugoslavs now touring the country. A Yugoslav parliamentary delegation is getting the best of everything.

(The United Press said western newsmen were invited to luncheon tomorrow at Bulganin's villa. Included was a printed map of highways in the area to help the diplomats and newsmen find their way.

(Correspondents were not advised whether they would be permitted to take photographs at the villa, 60 miles from Moscow, but they assumed they would be.)

PIGEON RESCUED AS FIRST FLIGHT ENDS IN SEWER

A baby pigeon, stuck for two and a half hours in a sewer pipe a foot in diameter, was rescued yesterday when Humane Society of Missouri Agent Robert Brandau nudged the bird out of the pipe with a clump of rags tied on the end of a 50-foot cable.

Brandau was aided by W. Leonard Phelps, 3257 Hartford street. Phelps and his wife, who have been keeping a watchful eye on a pigeon nest perched on the side of their house, spotted the young pigeon's plight. The day before, they had transferred another of the brood to shelter in their basement after they had found it wandering, apparently lame, in their shrubbery.

Phelps said the pigeon crawled into the small overflow sewer pipe after it fell down a sewer opening on its first venture out of the nest yesterday. Brandau, summoned to the rescue, tried unsuccessfully to flush the bird out with water before he decided to employ the cable, used in cleaning sewers.

Both the pigeon in the sewer and the one in the Phelps basement were taken in tow by the Humane Society. After a week in the Society's shelter at 1210 Macklind avenue, they will be released to try their luck again.

STRONG QUAKE REPORTED BELOW SOUTHWEST PACIFIC

PASADENA, Calif., Aug. 6 (AP)—The California Institute of Technology recorded today a strong earthquake which seismologists said occurred deep in the earth in the southwest Pacific.

Seismologist Charles Richter said the temblor probably was in the vicinity of the Fiji islands, and its epicenter was 250 miles below the earth's surface.

The quake registered a magnitude of 6.8—a major shock.

Harmony With White House Unlikely to Mark Congress At New Session Next Year

First Session of 84th Was Unusually Co-operative With President—He Often Got More Help From Democrats Than From Republicans—In 1956 Both Parties Will Look Toward Elections.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.

THE unusual degree of co-operation between Congress and the White House in 1955 is not expected to continue next year, when many of the actions at either end of Pennsylvania Avenue will be related to the 1956 election of a President, 32 Senators and 435 Representatives.

The first session of the Eighty-fourth Congress, which ended Wednesday, set something of a record. The "cold war" between the executive and the legislative branches, which President Eisenhower once forecast would ensue if a Democratic Congress was elected last year, became instead an era of peaceful co-existence.

The harmony was due mainly to the Democratic policy of "responsible opposition," enunciated by the ailing Senate Majority Leader, Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. In foreign affairs the Democrats, led by Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, chairman of the Foreign Relations Commitee, gave Mr. Eisenhower almost solid support, in contrast to the way in which congressional Republicans hammered at President Truman's foreign policy when the executive-legislative balance was reversed.

The Democrats also gave the President a large measure of backing, at times larger than the Republicans, on domestic measures, although in some instances they "improved" on White House proposals. It is in the domestic field that controversy is likely to sharpen next year; bipartisan support of foreign policy is almost certain to continue. What opposition crops up is likely to center in the remaining Republican isolationists.

NO ONE appeared really unhappy about the results of the session. The President was extremely temperate and bipartisan in his comments made at a press conference Thursday. The record on foreign affairs was commendable and he was deeply grateful, Mr. Eisenhower said.

As for domestic legislation, the President continued, the background is important. The country is enjoying almost unprecedented prosperity, income and purchasing power are up and there is a sound and stabilized dollar. Action by the Government and by individuals is necessary to keep the country moving along this path.

The President reminded his conference that toward the end of June he read a list of 13 remaining legislative items on which no action had been taken. Only four of these measures were enacted subsequently—military reserves, housing, mutual security appropriations and minimum wage—and some contained provisions the White House deemed unwise, Mr. Eisenhower said.

Of the nine now remaining, four were deemed absolutely vital by the President. They were, legislation on school construction, health, highways and water resources. There is some possibility a special session may be ordered, specifically to deal with the subject of highways, but if not, Mr. Eisenhower said, he will call emphatically to the attention of the House and Senate in January omissions of the past session.

As of the last day of the 1955 session Mr. Eisenhower had signed or otherwise allowed to become law 208 measures and more than 300 others on which Congress had completed action awaited his signature or veto. But left over for the next session were many politically hot issues.

It is possible that in perspective the session will be remembered mainly for a change in the Republican party and in Mr. Eisenhower's relation to it. The party's conservative wing, lacking effective leadership since the death July 31, 1953, of Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, dwindled as men who had followed Taft in his effort to win the presidential nomination in 1952 swung in behind Taft's successful convention rival, Mr. Eisenhower.

As the right-wing faded in influence, the stature of the President as party leader grew. There remained powerful Senators, like Minority Leader William F. Knowland of California and Policy Committee Chairman Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, who disapproved of Administration foreign policy, but more and more Congressmen apparently realized the necessity of making some sort of accommodation with world Communism as an alternative to nuclear war.

Also, as the old Taft faction evaporated, Senator George rose up as a sort of latter-day Arthur Vandenberg and an active collaborator in foreign policy of the President and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. Under George's leadership, Congress overwhelmingly accorded the President his so-called Formosa Resolution, and opposition to the Administration sank to a low ebb with the June 22 Senate rejection by a vote of 77 to 4 of a proposal by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy to tie the President's hands at the Geneva "summit" meeting.

If this vote marked a low point in opposition to Administration foreign policy, it also established the waning influence of McCarthy, who once could have counted on 12 to 15 and sometimes as many as 20 Senators to vote with him. Just a year ago the nation resounded with the noises of McCarthy's battle with the Army and the hearings leading up to McCarthy's condemnation by the Senate. Seldom has a political star set so quickly and so inaudibly as McCarthy's at the session just ended.

In the House Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas brought along his majority generally behind the policies of Senator Johnson, his protege, although his opposition to the White House was more frequent than that of Johnson.

Johnson's party leadership was by no means approved by all Democrats. Johnson became known among some as "Lying-Down Lyndon." Americans for Democratic Action, progressive political group, has been almost equally critical of the lack of "creative leadership" in Congress and in the White House. The Congress of Industrial Organizations saw "evidence of a growing unity among liberals of both parties" and looked for action in the second session of the Congress "further to weld this bipartisan liberal coalition."

There was some concern among Democrats that the party has not established a clear record of opposition to Republican proposals or a vigorous program of its own on which to appeal to the voters next year. The major issues likely to carry over until the elections were the Dixon-Yates contract and the perennial argument about private versus public power, and the issue of business men in Government as exemplified by the forced resignation of Harold E. Talbott as Secretary of the Air Force.

The session was affected by the fact that this year foreign policy has been dominant in the minds of Americans. No really crucial domestic issues have arisen to test congressional co-operation exhaustively. In foreign affairs the Administration generally followed the Roosevelt-Truman policies and could count from the beginning on a hard core of Democratic backing.

As of adjournment Mr. Eisenhower had vetoed only three bills, the main one being legislation to provide an 8.59 per cent postal pay rise. Senate Democrats tried and failed to override. Later Congress and the President approved an average 8 per cent increase.

The Democrats organized the Senate in January with a one-vote margin but when Senator Wayne L. Morse of Oregon changed his party designation from Independent to Democrat the Democrats had 49 seats and the Republicans 47. In the House there were 232 Democrats to 203 Republicans.

Mr. Eisenhower listed this week four "absolutely vital" measures he will take up with Congress next year. These are bills dealing with schools, health, highways and water resources. He did not mention taxes in this group, although from present indications the dispute over whether a tax cut or a balanced budget should come first is likely to set off a major battle at the next session. This is forecast by what happened this year.

In his economic report Jan. 29 the President said a 1955 tax cut was out but that in 1956 Congress might "consider a general, though moderate, reduction." Democrats saw in this a hint that the Republicans intended to recommend and take credit for tax cuts in an election year. They got up a plan to give each income taxpayer a $20 reduction effective next year.

This proposal, suggested by House Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, was attached as a rider to an Administration bill postponing scheduled corporation and excise tax reductions and was described by Mr. Eisenhower as "the height of fiscal irresponsibility." By a vote of 210 to 205 the House refused to eliminate the rider but the Senate knocked it out, and subsequently rejected, with the help of Southern Democrats, a Democratic "package" substitute.

ONE OF THE UPSETS of the session came in the field of road-building legislation. Mr. Eisenhower proposed a 10-year expansion plan, based on recommendations of his Advisory Committee on a National Highway Program, to be financed by bonds issued by a special government corporation. The bonds would have been serviced from tax revenues; the new securities were not to have been part of the public debt.

The plan was rejected 60 to 31 by the Senate, which then approved a five-year Democratic program to be financed out of general tax revenues in the regular way. When the legislation reached the House, toward the end of July, the President's financing plan was voted down and prospects for passage of a Democratic substitute, offsetting the cost by increases in taxes on fuel and bus and truck tires, seemed excellent.

But by the surprising vote of 292 to 123 on July 27 the House rejected the Democratic plan. Rayburn, astonished, said the defeat killed all highway legislation for the year and "probably" for next year. Some Democrats credited the defeat to the efforts of lobbyists for oil and tire companies.

The nub of the argument over the road program was the method of financing; no one disagreed with the President's contention that a vast expansion of the nation's highway system is necessary to meet normal needs as well as provide national defense facilities.

The President sent a special message

From Geneva: U.S. Reviews China Policy—With Pain

AT GENEVA talks, from left, WANG PING-NAN of Red China, Ambassador U. ALEXIS JOHNSON and aid RALPH CLOUGH, of the United States.

GENEVA, Aug. 6.

THE reappraisal of America's China policy that has begun here at Geneva may not be agonizing but it is distinctly unhappy. And if it proves possible to progress from this first stage of the ambassadorial conference, the later phases are likely to be even more painful.

The process of re-evaluation has been long delayed, perhaps because of the obvious difficulty of reconciling past statements and past performance with present realities. One of Mr. Eisenhower's first acts as President was to call for the "unleashing" of Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist forces on Formosa. Any Nationalist attack on the mainland, other than the pinpricks of sporadic harassment, would have involved American air and naval forces and would almost certainly have meant sooner or later, an all-out war.

It was this prospect which terrified our allies in Western Europe, and one of the reasons an American Ambassador has now sat down at a conference table with an Ambassador from Communist China is the pressure of European opinion. To responsible Europeans, American insistence on maintaining Chiang as "China," after he had been driven from the mainland with a remnant of his armies, looked like the most dangerous folly.

It would be convenient for America if Peiping would just let matters ride and accept—after the prisoners have been exchanged for the students—the ceasefire which has in fact existed in the Formosa straits for the past three months. But every indication here is that Peiping wants much more than this and wants it quickly. So the struggle to find an acceptable way out of the China dilemma becomes acute.

Take as an example one point of the ambassadorial negotiations here—the effort to find a formula which would permit a third party, an Indian diplomatic team or a neutral power such as Sweden or Switzerland, to supervise the exchange of prisoners and students. Such an arrangement might seem to give Communist China, through a third party, jurisdiction over all Chinese nationals in the United States. This would be a serious, perhaps a fatal blow to Chiang Kai-shek. And so the cables are passing back and forth between the State Department, in Washington, and Geneva in an effort to find a safe formula.

If this comparatively small point is sticky, it takes little imagination to see how long and painful will be the process of arriving at the larger formula for a permanent adjustment enabling Communist China and America to live on the same planet. And time, it is well to add, is not necessarily on the American side. Pressure has been steadily building up in the United Nations for action granting Red China the U.N. seat now held by Nationalist China.

Nor is a prolonged off-again-on-again negotiation likely to enhance the position of Chiang on Formosa. He may well wonder, as constant appeals are beamed from Peiping to his supporters, what his fate will finally be.

As Europe looks anxiously on, America confronts a crisis not alone with respect to China but in over-all policy in Asia. When Chou En-lai, at the Bandung Conference, made his sudden and dramatic declaration offering to negotiate the future of Formosa he won a large sector of Asian opinion that had been doubtful, if not antagonistic. It now seemed to be up to America to come part of the way and remove the threat of war.

A fundamental difference in attitudes is involved. America has concentrated on the menace of Communism in Asia, to the extent that our critics accuse us of a fixation, an obsession. To Asians, or to many Asians at any rate, what has happened in China is a victory over colonialism, a triumph for people of color over the puppet of a white "imperialist" power.

In his just-published book, "In Two Chinas," K. M. Panikkar, for several years Indian Ambassador to Peiping, illustrates this attitude. Panikkar sees China as having become a great power, thanks to the release of energies latent in all of Asia, and suppressed under colonialism.

"It was not military weakness of the Kuomintang regime, and its utter dependence on America that had deprived 'Nationalist' China of its position in the vanguard of Asian awakening, but also the fact that it had ceased to represent the new spirit of Asia. The Communist leaders, not because of their Communism but because they had a greater appreciation of the change that had come over the Asian mind, showed from the beginning a profound realization of the problems of Asia in relation to the West and to America and were therefore more in sympathy with their neighbors," he writes.

If this seems to Americans a dangerous delusion it is nevertheless apparently a very widespread one. It points up the troubles of another very troubled spot. In South Viet Nam, Premier Ngo Dinh Diem is widely regarded as a rather ineffectual creature of American policy.

There all the stresses and strains of the triangle—America, Europe, Asia—are evident. In France those who concern themselves with the problem of Indochina blame Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for Diem and for the recent turmoil. Beneath the surface there is bitter resentment over what is considered ignorant and unwarranted interference.

Perhaps the most urgent question in the present reappraisal is whether America can stop at some halfway point where the past could be forgotten and the way prepared for a gradual readjustment to acceptance of Communist China as a fact of life.

What China wants is recognition, admission to the U.N. and settlement of Formosa. The two first demands might be granted through the "two Chinas" solution which Chou has said again and again is unacceptable. As to Formosa, Dulles has said again and again that the United States will accept no change in its status.

Again and again it has been said publicly, under the Eisenhower Administration, that Formosa is a part of America's strategic perimeter. So it would seem that even though Dulles and Chou should agree to meet they would face each other across an unbridgeable gulf.

But Wang Ping-nan at Geneva speaks politely, even occasionally in a friendly way. At the Panmunjom Korean peace negotiations the Chinese approach was one of unbendable hostility. Whether the difference signifies more than a calculated change of manners is a question still to be answered.

Power From Nuclear Energy Sold by Utility—A Race For Leadership Has Begun

Private Industry Hopes to Carve Out Atomic Empire Rapidly to Keep Public Power Sector at Minimum—Underdeveloped Countries Eager for New Plants—World Watches U.S., Russia at Geneva.

By DONALD GRANT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., Aug. 6.

AS the first international conference on the peaceful uses of atomic energy opens Monday at Geneva, Switzerland, the humming sound that can be heard at West Milton, N.Y., some 18 miles north of here, is the sound of nuclear electricity being manufactured for commercial distribution in the Schenectady area. Which is to say that the age of nuclear energy for peaceful uses already has arrived.

The symbolic moment of that arrival occurred at 2:57 p.m. on July 18, when Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission threw a big copper-bladed switch at the West Milton installation, sending nuclear-power-generated electricity into the lines of the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., a private utility which serves the Schenectady area. You can't, of course, tell nuclear electric power from any other kind of electricity.

Private utility companies, however, can tell a great deal of difference between nuclear power which they manufacture and sell at a profit, and nuclear power which is manufactured at a Government station and sold, for instance, through non-profit co-operative distributors. If the ceremony in a stony field at West Milton marked the symbolic arrival of the age of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, it also marked the efforts of private American utilities and industries to carve out for themselves a large proportion of what promises to be a multi-billion-dollar business.

There are solid economic reasons why the private power business fears future Government competition in the field of nuclear energy, as it always has feared Government competition in the field of water power, on the pattern of the Tennessee Valley Authority development. Like hydraulic energy, nuclear energy involves low fuel costs, but high capital investment. The Government can borrow money cheaper than private industry, and lower interest rates may have a powerful impact in the form of lower rates in the sale of electric power.

One of the best informed private power company engineers in the country believes that even at the present primitive stage of development, a large, public nuclear energy power station can be built which will be able to undersell privately-produced electric power, from coal-fired plants. Although he believes that under comparable conditions coal is still slightly more efficient than nuclear power, he also believes that a Government nuclear plant, financed by 2 per cent Government bonds, would produce electricity cheaper than a private coal plant, financed by 5 per cent money. Unless the private power industry moves rapidly, he believes cheap public atomic power may well become a reality.

Furthermore, the Government—thus far—has been largely responsible for the development of nuclear power. The Government owns all of the nuclear power fuel, and will continue to do so for the forseeable future. The Government also developed the several processes for converting nuclear fuel into electric power, and trained most of the experts in the field, including many of the experts now working for private industry at salaries higher than the Government pays.

In the whole program of developing nuclear power in this country, however, private industry has participated, though as a junior partner to Government. The plan generally followed has been for Government to take the major responsibility, and to put up the money, but to give private industry individual jobs to do, under contract.

THE PUBLIC INTEREST in nuclear energy for war is obvious; the public interest in nuclear energy for peaceful purposes is hardly less obvious, even to the industrialists now trying to get into the nuclear power business in a big way.

Nuclear power promises to be an important source of energy inside the United States. But abroad, and especially in some of the underdeveloped countries of Asia, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America, it may well become—and fairly rapidly—the major source of energy, for all of these countries are now energy-poor.

And it is precisely these energy-poor countries that hold a political balance of power between Soviet Russia and the United States. Representatives of the underdeveloped countries are watching the Geneva conference on the peaceful uses of atomic energy with an almost fanatical interest.

The absolutely critical importance of power in the development of a nation is a fact that the people of the underdeveloped countries know perhaps better than any of us, for they are the ones who suffer from the lack of power. For instance, Britain's power consumption per capita is about 10 times that of India, but only a little more than half that of the United States. And the per capita income of Britain, India and the United States varies at about the same ratio. In a general way, food consumption and life expectancy also stand at the same level as power consumption per capita.

Power-poor countries desperately want nuclear power, and are a potential market for atomic power equipment on a vast scale. It is not an accident that the General Electric Co. of Schenectady is sending no fewer than 18 experts to the Geneva atomic conference; General Electric is a leading manufacturer of atomic power equipment.

But the underdeveloped areas also are looking at Soviet Russia's substantial progress in the field of nuclear power. If the private power industry in the United States is engaged in a race for leadership in nuclear energy development, inside this country, an even greater competition begins Monday at Geneva—a competition between the United States and Soviet Russia for world leadership in nuclear power development.

THE NUCLEAR POWER PLANT at West Milton would be more impressive if it were not for two incidental items: It is not the first time atomic energy has been used to produce electric power for peaceful purposes. The Russians put such a station into operation last year. Furthermore, the West Milton plant is not really an electric power station at all; it is a prototype nuclear reactor for the power plant on the atomic submarine, Sea Wolf.

Experiments with the nuclear power plant are going on all the time, intermittently, as engineers try to work out improvements on the Sea Wolf's power plant. That means the atomic reactor has to be operated. The reactor consists of a controlled fission pile, heating liquid sodium, which in turn is used to heat water, making steam.

General Electric simply put a steam turbine generator in line with the prototype reactor. When the reactor operates, the steam is piped through the generator, making electricity, which is dumped onto the lines of the Niagara Mohawk Corp.

The reactor is housed in a great steel ball, 16 stories high. It is located in a lonely spot, surrounded not by the usual paraphernalia of a power plant—railroad tracks, for importing heavy fuel, pipe-organ rows of smoke-stacks, etc.—but by an apple orchard and a trout stream. Presumably the fuel for the reactor can be transported to the plant in the manager's club coupe.

The lonely location was chosen both for safety, should something go wrong, and for security. Armed AEC guards chase away all who approach the plant, and the steel ball and the outlying buildings are all surrounded by a high wire fence. The ball-shaped building also is a safety device: a sphere has the smallest skin inclosing the greatest space. Air inside the sphere is under pressure. Should the reactor emit poisons it is calculated that the sphere would contain them, the high air pressure increasing the concentration of atomic poisons inside the sphere.

At the ceremony where AEC Chairman Strauss spoke last month Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric said that "this occasion will symbolize the willingness and ability of American industry to invest its skills and its own funds in the development of a progressive atomic energy industry in the great American tradition of competitive enterprise."

To add emphasis to this point, General Electric had installed the $1,250,000 turbine generator to harness the excess steam produced by the Sea Wolf prototype. No one is paying G.E. for use of the generator; Niagara Mohawk pays the AEC for the power it takes, in excess of the power burned at the generator site, at the rate of 3 mills per kilowatt-hour.

The whole arrangement is highly temporary. Presumably one day the Navy and the AEC will be finished testing the Sea Wolf prototype and G.E. will get its generator back. Meanwhile an argument has been stirred up because the AEC-G.E. power didn't go to the three public power outfits in the neighborhood, since the law indicates they are entitled to preference.

Oct. 11 the question of what becomes of the 10,000 kilowatts produced at West Milton will be reopened and the public power people — a rural co-operative at Delhi, N.Y., and municipal power producers at Ilion, N.Y., and Holyoke, Mass.—will get their inning. What Cordiner calls the "great American tradition of competitive enterprise" already is moving on, to conquer new atomic worlds.

Plans for building nuclear power plants are being made by some 17 American private business firms and the AEC has definite proposals before it from half a dozen public and private utilities. The biggest, and most private, of the proposals are by Consolidated Edison of New York, and by Commonwealth Edison of Chicago.

General Electric expects to build the Chicago plant for Commonwealth Edison. It will be rated at 180,000 kilowatts—less than the New York plant—but will be the largest all-nuclear generator. The New York plant will contain an oil-fired booster, to step up the temperature of steam produced by the nuclear reactor.

Assisting Commonwealth Edison in the Chicago nuclear enterprise will be eight sponsoring companies—including Union Electric of Missouri—which will share in the "experience," though not in the ultimate power. General Electric reportedly will absorb a part of the cost

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

From Howard I. Young

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Since my return to St. Louis from Washington, D.C., this week, I have had an opportunity to read the editorial which appeared in last Sunday's issue entitled, "In Fairness to Howard Young."

I am most appreciative for the consideration you and your editorial staff gave me in connection with the unjust charge and criticism made against me by the General Accounting Office of the United States.

The impartial attitude expressed in your editorial is appreciated by me.

HOWARD I. YOUNG.

What About Parks Airport?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What has happened to Parks Airport? I read with a great deal of interest that the county is ready to purchase Weiss Airport. Is the City of St. Louis going to sit back and do nothing?

Is St. Louis going to wait until values have increased to such an extent that it will necessitate the city paying a greater price in the very near future? Or will it as usual be lackadaisical and forget about things that are so vital to the community?

St. Louis has needed a secondary airport for a long time. The mounting traffic at Lambert Field is making the load too great. Why doesn't the city sell Columbia Bottoms and use this money for a down payment on Parks Airport?

With the new Cahokia bridge in the process of being built, private planes landing at Parks Airport, will make the one way trip to St. Louis in 15 minutes.

Must St. Louis always be asleep at the switch or will it act now?

E. HUMMEL.

Just Because of a Smile

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Just because the Communists are now smiling, this does not make them angels. They still are evil men. Don't ever forget it. We must be alert at all times and keep our guard up.

Milwaukee. ED BATZNER.

Speaking of Deterrents

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The court that rules it illegal for someone to warn motorists of a radar trap by holding up a sign is, in effect, ruling it is illegal to caution a motorist to slow down.

The purpose of capturing and fining motorists for speeding is, I gather, to thus put other motorists on notice to slow down or be similarly fined. The gentleman holding the sign is doing just that.

Unless, of course, the purpose of fines for speeding suddenly has become the money thereby obtained for the city and the publicity thereby obtained by the judge.

Poor, poor Mr. Evans. A victim of a city's greed and a policeman's chagrin. And he really should be put on the police payroll as an influence for good among erstwhile speeders. INEVER GOTCAUGHT.

That's Baseball

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I wish some of your readers would get off Augie Busch's back and be glad he scraped enough money together to keep a baseball team in St. Louis, major or minor caliber, win or lose. Give the Cardinals a chance. Rome wasn't built in a day.

D.E.F.

What Next?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

While the population of Missouri has remained almost stationary for the past 25 years, the cost of maintaining our public schools continues to climb ever higher.

Now we are confronted with a new school financing plan to be voted upon Oct. 4, which if passed will impose another tax of 2 cents per pack on cigarettes.

I cannot support such a measure that singles out a certain class to be taxed for the benefit of all the people.

The nation and its public institutions have grown great because they have had the support of our citizens, but there is a limit that the people can stand and God help us if the lobbies and politicians keep trying to find that limit.

We were sold on consolidation of schools as a measure for better schools at less cost. Now this. What next? T. E. WEST.

Normandy.

Back From New York

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We have just returned from a month's vacation in New York and wish to say that what we missed most there was the Post-Dispatch. We figured it would be necessary to purchase seven papers each day to get your news and features.

Despite the excellent nationwide reputation of the Post-Dispatch, it is too easy to take your newspaper for granted. It is not until you get to other cities that you realize just how good it is.

So it's good to be back.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN GOLDSTON.

Standish Query

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

After first reading the review of "Allegro" in the Post-Dispatch and then seeing the production, I wonder if Reviewer Myles Standish needs a vacation away from it all.

Six Out of 10

So much attention has been paid in recent months to the entry of small savers into the stock market that the great increase in life insurance investment is going with almost no notice. Yet while the number of individual investors in corporation stocks is still relatively small, nearly six persons out of every 10 in the United States are now insured.

The figures for 1954 on the increase in life insurance business are most impressive. A total of 49 billion dollars in policy values was purchased last year—the largest amount ever bought in any one 12-month period. This brought the aggregate in protection to 334 billion dollars on a basis of 237 million policies, held by 93 million policyholders. In terms of the individual family, this averaged $6300 in insurance owned per family. This amount, so the new edition of the "Life Insurance Fact Book" figures, was one and a third times the family's annual income, less taxes, of $4800.

With four families out of five insured in some way, the total of the insured population reached 57 per cent, an increase of 6 points in the last 10 years. Many of these families regard their insurance as long-term savings as well as protection, since the total of savings in life insurance policies at the end of the year was 69 billion dollars—the largest amount in any one form of long-term savings.

One of the most interesting aspects of the 1954 insurance year was the record growth of group life insurance. In this one year, the amount of group life insurance policies jumped from $79,768,000,000 to $94,312,000,000. This gain of $14,500,000,000 resulted in 2,200,000 more persons being covered than in the preceding year. In part this was due to the fact that group insurance was issued for nearly 1,700,000 employes of the Federal Government.

There was no such increase in the sale of industrial insurance—the relatively high-cost small policy insurance whose premiums are collected weekly or monthly at the door of the policyholder. Industrial insurance in force rose from $37,781,000,000 in 1953 to only $38,664,000,000. The following table shows what has happened to these two kinds of insurance for working men and women in the last two decades:

(000,000 Omitted)

	INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE IN FORCE	GROUP INSURANCE IN FORCE
1935	$17,471	$10,283
1940	20,866	15,256
1945	27,675	22,436

Residents of Missouri and Illinois—indeed of all states other than Massachusetts, New York and Connecticut—may wonder why the benefits of state savings bank life insurance have not been allowed to spread over the country.

Massachusetts led the way in this type of low-cost, over-the-counter insurance, thanks to one of the many pioneering social services of the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis. In 1954 Massachusetts had a total of $512,524,000 in force. New York had $260,107,000 and Connecticut $25,760,000.

Some day some Missouri State Senator or Representative will do this state a profound public service by leading the crusade at Jefferson City that will make this economical, sound type of life insurance available to the people of Missouri. For there is no reason why the savings bank life insurance benefits enjoyed in Massachusetts, New York and Connecticut should be barred to Missourians.

Another question will occur to those who study the excellent annual publication of the Institute of Life Insurance's Division of Statistics. The question is: Why have so many new insurance companies been organized in Texas? The total number of Texas life insurance companies was 47 in 1940. By last year it had zoomed to 257. Louisiana was second with 80 and South Carolina third with 36. New York had only 27 and Missouri but 16.

Is this mushroom growth of companies in Texas related in any way to the alleged rackets that Representative Hebert of Louisiana says are being operated by some Texas insurance companies in the vicinity of military bases? Surely here is a matter for the State of Texas, the Department of Defense, the House Armed Services Committee and the insurance industry—to go into thoroughly.

Life insurance is big business, just about the biggest of businesses. The men who run it cannot be too careful in keeping it in the best of order for the benefit of the six out of 10 citizens who buy its protection.

Up and Down in the A.L.

As mehitabel said, with no reference to the American League, it's up one day and down the next and toujours gai. In one week the one and two-tenths per cent which separated the White Sox, Indians and Yankees was reduced to two tenths of one per cent, or was it the other way around, upside down, or what? Excitement offers no footing for mathematics, and nobody can cling to baseball statistics anyway. So we have thrown away our slide rule. The standard tools for measuring this pennant race are a gnat's eyelash for judging distance plus a razor's edge to slice it thin.

Air Disaster in the Ozarks

Fire in midair is the pilots' nightmare. If it cannot be quickly controlled, then the plane must be set down quickly. When no suitable field is at hand and a crash landing must be made, there is the double hazard of death from violent impact and from a spreading of the flames as a result of ruptured fuel tanks. If there is a good landing field nearby, with fire equipment on it, the pilot has an excellent chance.

Capt. Hugh Barron, a veteran pilot, had a record that showed he should be able to make the best of any emergency. He was credited with saving the lives of his 40 passengers when he had to land at Chicago last Nov. 9 with jammed wheels.

Capt. Barron took off from Springfield, Mo., in the most perfect flying weather. Fifty miles farther on, over Lebanon, he radioed that one engine was afire. When his fire warning flashed on he must have quickly exhausted his extinguisher containers. It is not hard to imagine the thoughts that must have raced through his mind when he saw that the fire was unchecked and realized that he was in a race with death.

He is reported to have circled Waynesville, 28 miles from Lebanon, where the airport runway was too short for a wheels-down landing. Then he headed for Fort Leonard Wood, five miles away, which has ample runways and excellent fire fighting equipment. Capt. Barron was half a mile short of a runway when the Convair's right wing burned through and fell off. That was the end of a gallant try to save passengers and ship. Thirty persons were killed outright.

The recovery of the right wing and engine, the several eye-witness accounts and the records of Capt. Barron's talks with the control towers are almost certain to reveal what caused the fire and why it could not be extinguished. It may be that what is learned from this disaster will mean almost as much to the airlines as did the solution of a fire problem in the four-motored Douglas planes several years ago.

The statistical record of the airlines is far superior to that of the private automobile, but still greater safety must be the first consideration of the airlines. They all will have something to learn from the final report on this disaster in the Ozarks.

Trickery at Hell's Canyon

President Eisenhower has said again and again that Congress should be free of executive interference and dictation. Yet the Federal Power Commission, reconstituted since he took office, has just flouted Senate and House about as brazenly as it could.

Knowing that committees of both branches had voted for a Government dam at Hell's Canyon on the Snake River, and having been asked to defer action of its own until floor votes could be had, the FPC kept quiet until Congress ended its first session and then announced permission to the Idaho Power Co. to build three small dams which would make the proposed Hell's Canyon project impossible.

Jerome K. Kuykendall, FPC chairman, protests that timing of the announcement was not related to the adjournment. Yet the FPC decision was reached July 27, eight days before it was made public. Congress was still in session then. Why was it not informed promptly? And why, as Senator Kefauver charges, did Kuykendall tell House members the matter was still pending when the FPC actually had already made its decision? The explanation that it took eight days to put the ruling on paper in proper form just does not wash.

Little wonder that the FPC announcement has raised a storm. It has offended some Republicans as well as many Democrats. It was bad enough to keep them in the dark and to ignore requests for delay. It was worse to grant public water rights to a private company when, so far as the FPC knew, Congress was on the way to the opposite decision. True, House and Senate might not follow the committee recommendations, but the FPC had no right to assume this. Its action looks like a bald attempt to prevent a congressional decision, one way or the other, and to prevent such a decision for 50 years by granting Idaho Power a 50-year license.

Aside from the all-important issue of conserving public resources for the public, it is amazing that any agency should believe congressional authority might be so defied. Just when the Dixon-Yates case was unfolding, how did the FPC conclude it could foist a 50-year give-away on Congress merely by waiting for the legislative summer recess? Even if the license is in line with White House power philosophy, the FPC must have known of public and congressional opposition. The commission must have known, too, that the issue is one on which Congress is entitled to the last word.

Under the circumstances, the FPC license to Idaho Power seems of very doubtful validity. It is sure to come under attack as soon as Congress reconvenes. Construction of those three Idaho Power dams may be about as remote as the building of that Dixon-Yates powerhouse.

All for a Young Midshipman

Secretary of the Navy Thomas deserves credit for promising an impartial review of the case of Midshipman Eugene W. Landy. The Navy had refused a reserve commission to this honor graduate and athlete of the Merchant Marine Academy, apparently because Landy's mother was a Communist 10 years ago. The Navy concedes it has nothing against Landy himself.

Now Secretary Thomas says he did not know of the matter until he read about it in the newspapers. If there was something wrong with the way naval officials handled the case, there is something decidedly right about the sudden public interest and the Secretary of the Navy's interest in a Midshipman who—in the words of his indignant classmates—did not get a "square deal."

Marilyn at Bement

There have been small town centennials galore in recent summers but never before one that held up a stalk of corn to that at Bement, in east-central Illinois, where the Lincoln-Douglas debates were arranged.

Thanks to that practical visionary of the world of music and art, Carleton Smith, who was born in the prairie village of 1500 souls and still calls it home, Bement ran off a series of "town meetings of the world" with such noted speakers as Senators Flanders of Vermont and Wiley of Wisconsin, Norman Thomas and Philip Willkie. It staged a "freedom of religion day" with seven churches joining hands. It assembled an art museum with canvases by Goya, Rembrandt, Tintoretto, Matisse and other celebrated painters.

But Bement saved its piece de resistance for last. As a heat lightning flash from the August sky, Marilyn Monroe flew out from New York to "commune with Lincoln" and to "see the lovely men with the beards" who "are so powerful and masterful." And what could be more climactic? For blond Miss Monroe of the Venus carriage and the perennial poise has become a precious part of the national folklore along with Buffalo Bill, John L. Sullivan, Adm. Dewey and Lillian Russell.

We hope to be around when Bement goes for 200. Marilyn's great-granddaughter should be something to see!

Ten Years After Hiroshima

Awe and wonder were aroused 10 years ago by the bomb that fell on Hiroshima, thankfulness, too, and a kind of revulsion. Science had provided a terrible weapon for ending the war without all the American casualties implicit in an invasion of Japan. But at what a price!

Editorials asked whether there might not have been a demonstration of the bomb, coupled with an ultimatum. It would have been more logical had this troubled feeling been directed against war itself. Surely it does not count with the dead that they fell by sword, bullet or bomb.

The Hiroshima memorial promises that the bomb will not fall again. Let us hope so. Let us hope also that man, the divider of the atom, builder of cathedrals, conqueror of disease, singer of songs, comforter of the ill-fated, will learn to live according to his own knowledge that there are far better ways for resolving his disagreements than the way of war. This is an ancient prayer, but man himself can make it an answered prayer.

Blessed are the peacemakers.

As Many Arrows to One Mark

The Mirror of Public Opinion

First Atlantic telephone cable, now being laid, to work a new miracle of communication, replacing radio circuits heretofore used; an international effort, its basis is an electron tube built to last 20 years and magnify signal a million times.

C. C. Duncan in the Bell Telephone Magazine

Early on the morning of last June 28 the cable ship Monarch slowly steamed through the northwest arm of Trinity bay, leaving behind the village of Clarenville, Newfoundland. Nevertheless, she was still connected with the new cable station at Clarenville—by the cable being payed out at increasing speed as she steamed into the Atlantic.

Cable ships have been terminating trans-Atlantic telegraph cable; but this new cable was different. For it was the first trans-Atlantic telephone cable.

When it is completed, speech will be transmitted across the Atlantic by cable for the first time.

—Plaque borne by three S.S. Monarchs since 1877

The conception of this project originated with Dr. Oliver E. Buckley, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories from 1940 to 1951, who in 1919 headed a small group investigating problems of deep-water cable technology.

Meanwhile, in 1927 translantic telephone service was opened by employing radio circuits. Over the years it has increased tremendously in usage. However, this service has been subject to two important limitations: One, the crowded radio spectrum which limits the number of circuits that can be provided; the other, the periodic magnetic storms which impair the transmission of radio waves, particularly over the North Atlantic.

Vacuum Tube for 20 Years

To solve the many problems that would be encountered in making a cable system, Bell System engineers continued their search for techniques, apparatus, and material which would minimize the hazards of laying, operating, and maintaining a deep-sea cable.

This led to the design of an electronic vacuum tube that would survive on the ocean bottom for more than 20 years, terminal equipment to feed power out over the cable to these tubes, and the creation of an ingenious flexible amplifier or repeater that could be incorporated into the cable and laid as an integral part.

As the prototype of the trans-Atlantic-cable-to-be, the cable laid in 1950 between Key West, Fla., and Havana, Cuba, embodied all these features.

Early in 1952, President Cleo F. Craig of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. appointed a committee to report upon the feasibility of a trans-Atlantic telephone cable.

In reporting favorably on the project by May of 1952, the committee suggested early discussions with officials of the British Post Office, which furnishes telephone service in the United Kingdom, and the Canadian Government.

A Three-Nation Project

The types of facilities to be used were left for the technical organizations of the British Post Office and the Bell Telephone Laboratories to consider and agree upon. A joint committee advised using a cable system of Bell Laboratories' design between Scotland and Newfoundland, and one of British design in the shallower waters to Nova Scotia.

A further recommendation proposed that the link between the United States and the Nova Scotia cable terminal be a radio relay system. These suggestions were subsequently concurred in by the Canadian participants.

In essence, the international project thus set in motion involves two separate one-way cables, laid some 20 miles apart, between Oban, Scotland, and Clarenville, Newfoundland.

They will have a capacity of 36 telephone channels. In each cable, voices traveling under the Atlantic for more than 1900 nautical miles will be sped on their way by 52 one-way repeaters. (Thus, there will be a total of 104 amplifiers in the trans-Atlantic link.) In Scotland, connection will be made to London over the British long distance telephone trunk network.

At Clarenville, connections will be made to a British-designed two-way submarine cable extending 330 nautical miles to Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia. This cable will be equipped with 16 repeaters.

From Sydney Mines the telephone circuits will be carried 575 miles over a new radio relay system to Portland, Me., where the United States circuits will be connected to the Bell network.

For more than 14 years, engineers at the Bell Telephone Laboratories have made frequent checks upon a group of very specially designed electron tubes that have been operating continuously.

Voices in the Deep Sea

These tubes and their long performance are fundamental to the deep-sea portion of the trans-Atlantic cable project. For because of their long survival, and Bell System experience with similar tubes in the waters between Florida and Cuba, it is confidently believed that tubes of like design in each of the repeaters will provide amplification over the Atlantic span for at least 20 years.

In addition to many other components, each repeater in the Scotland-Newfoundland part of the cable includes three electron tubes. These tubes, which receive power from very accurately regulated current sent over the cable itself, amplifies the power of the weakened incoming signal some 1,000,000 times.

The tubes are an integral part of a repeater unique because of its shape and construction and the precision and stability of its characteristics.

In order to pass over the drum of the cable-laying ship, the repeater has a flexible housing. The center portion of the structure, which is just a bulge in the cable, is almost eight feet long and a little less than three inches in diameter. From this section the repeater tapers until it is reduced to the diameter of the deep-sea portion of the cable—one and one-quarter inches.

As the Monarch Plows On

As the Monarch plows eastward towards Oban, with the cable flowing over her stern, those involved in its accomplishment occasionally let their thoughts turn to earlier milestones in communication.

Morse's classic statement about the telegraph, "What hath God wrought"; Cyrus Field's ultimate triumph in laying the first trans-Atlantic telegraph cable, and Bell's familiar, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you," all come to mind.

The telephone cable project stimulates them, encourages their confidence, and makes them believe, with the Archbishop of Canterbury in Shakespeare's "King Henry V":

As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Come to one mark;
As many ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;

As many lines close in the dial's center;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat.

THAT'S MISSOURI.

Bill Vaughan in The Kansas City Star.

There's a lot of Missouri in Missouri still: A team of mules ran away when frightened by a motor car up in Daviess county last week.

Wallace Stevens

Wallace Stevens, who died last Tuesday at the age of 75 in Hartford, Conn., was a professional insurance man and spare-time poet. In 1950 he won the Bollingen Award of the Library of Congress and last May he received the Pulitzer Prize in 1954. A tireless walker, Mr. Stevens began the work of many poems on long tramps in city and country. The following selections are from The Auroras of Autumn and Collected Poems*, reprinted by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., copyright Wallace Stevens.*

The Beginning

So summer comes in the end to these few stains
And the rust and rot of the door through which she went.

The house is empty. But here is where she sat
To comb her dewy hair, a touchless light,

Perplexed by its darker iridescences.
This was the glass in which she used to look

At the moment's being, without history,
The self of summer perfectly perceived,

And feel its country gaiety and smile
And be surprised and tremble, hand and lip,

This is the chair from which she gathered up
Her dress, the carefullest, commodious weave

Inwoven by a weaver to twelve bells...
The dress is lying, cast-off, on the floor,

Now, the first tutoyers of tragedy
Speak softly, to begin with, in the eaves.

Of the Surface of Things

I
In my room, the world is beyond my understanding;
But when I walk I see that it consists of three or four hills and a cloud.
II
From my balcony, I survey the yellow air,
Reading where I have written,
"The spring is like a belle undressing."
III
The gold tree is blue.
The singer has pulled his cloak over his head.
The moon is in the folds of the cloak.

The Old Lutheran Bells

These are the voices of the pastors calling
In the names of St. Paul and of the halo-John
And of other holy and learned men, among them

Great choristers, propounders of hymns, trumpeters,
Jerome and the scrupulous Francis and Sunday women,
The nurses of the spirit's innocence.

These are the voices of the pastors calling
Much rough-end being to smooth Paradise,
Spreading out fortress walls like fortress wings.

Deep in their sound the stentor Martin sings.
Dark Juan looks outward through his mystic brow . . .
Each sexton has his sect. The bells have none.

These are the voices of the pastors calling
And calling like the long echoes in long sleep,
Generations of shepherds to generations of sheep.

Each truth is a sect though no bells ring for it.
And the bells belong to the sextons, after all,
As they jangle and dangle and kick their feet.

Rhee and Chiang Fear Efforts To Ease Far East Tension Will End Hope for U.S.-Red China War

South Korean President Wants Conflict as Means of Unifying Country—Formosa Leader Would Use It as Chance to Recapture Mainland.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.

ANGUISHED PROTESTS and threats and warnings have been coming from Formosa and South Korea since the United States talks in Geneva on the ambassadorial level with Red China were proposed.

Both the indomitable old Patriot and President of South Korea, Syngman Rhee, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek see in efforts to ease tension in the Far East an end to their hope that a war between Communist China and the United States would be the means of unifying Korea and returning the Nationalists to the mainland.

The Chinese Nationalists have limited their protests to warning the United States that it was playing with fire when it agreed to negotiate with Red China. They expressed fears of a sellout. Foreign Minister George Yeh in Taipeh Aug. 4 said the government would view with great disfavor and strongly oppose any meeting between United States Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Chou En-lai, Premier and Foreign Minister of Red China.

On the same day in Washington President Eisenhower said at his press conference in answer to a question that "I believe the Secretary (of State) has said that it is within the realm of possibility that these meetings will lead to negotiations, possibly on the ministerial level."

The Korean President on Aug. 1 announced that "this government is now compelled to take direct action with the Communists, for it wants the Communists to admit their violation of the armistice agreement and withdraw from our sacred national territory."

Says Reds Plan New Invasion.

Rhee referred in this statement specifically to the areas south of the Thirty-eighth parallel held by North Korea. He contended that the Communist Chinese and the North Koreans were preparing a new invasion of South Korea. The Red-held territory south of the Thirty-eighth parallel was necessary, in the government's opinion, to prevent a surprise attack on the South Korean capitol, Seoul.

Again on Aug. 4, Rhee declared: "Because the Communists, with increased troops and fire power in Korea, are plotting to launch another invasion of South Korea, we want to recover Kaesong, Ongjin and the area north of the Han river in order to consolidate our lines . ."

He does not like the trend in international affairs. "Even the theory of co-existence," he said, "is of late gaining ground in friendly nations. Therefore, we are now compelled to settle by ourselves the neglected Korean question."

The 80-year-old president's threats to take direct action are not new, but neither are they idle. There is no question but that he would start his armies north, if he could, and risk everything on the gamble that the United States would be forced to come to his rescue. He would then have his war and, with the help of the United States, the chance to unify his country.

Generals Lyman L. Lemnitzer, United States Far East commander, and Isaac D. White, commander of the Eighth Army, flew to Seoul to soothe the fiery president. The United States controls the gasoline and munitions supplies for the Korean army. Rhee might start a war, but could not keep it going. His army would be immobilized within a week.

Nevertheless, the situation is dangerous. The real restraint on Rhee today is not lack of supplies to fight a war — the old man would chance that if he could get it started — but the objections of the Korean army chief of staff, supported by other Korean generals. They are realistic enough to know how little they could do without the backing of the United States.

Opportunity for Chiang.

President Rhee's war would also present the long-sought opportunity to Chiang Kai-shek. The argument would be, and it is valid, that invasion of China from Formosa would tie down Chinese troops in China and keep them from reinforcing North Korea.

Syngman Rhee has to seek occasion to start a conflict. Undoubtedly there have been violations of the armistice provisions in North Korea. Airfields have been reconstructed and new ones have been built. Squadrons of MIGs have been seen on these airfields. Their presence is a violation of the provisions of the armistice which forbade any increases in equipment for either side.

Such matters are not occasion to go to war. The government of the Republic of Korea therefore must find others. It claims that the North Koreans and the Chinese are planning a new invasion. The facts, according to informed sources, are that the Chinese Communists have reduced the number of Chinese troops in North Korea substantially and troop dispositions are not such as to favor an attack.

The territorial claim, while legitimate as a defensive measure, is one-sided. The Korean president does not offer to trade any of the large amount of land north of the thirty-eighth parallel which the Republic of Korea holds in return for obtaining concessions on the small amount held by the Reds south of the parallel. It is all, according to Rhee, sacred property of the Republic of Korea.

Nevertheless, the moves of the lifelong Korean patriot are unpredictable. Before he dies he is determined to act. Changes in the Korean army high command would be a symptom of his plans. He cannot move against the will of the present chief of staff. But he is determined to move. "What we are intending to do," he said last week, "is our solemn task for survival, and therefore it will be carried out, regardless of whether the United States agrees to it or not."

Chiang Kai-shek has a much simpler problem if he wants to make trouble. Indeed, his blockade and air actions along the mainland coast are an invitation for reprisals by the Reds.

For example: June 20 the Nationalists announced that their aircraft had attacked a fleet of more than 400 Chinese Communist vessels 15 miles from Matsu; June 23 the Red Chinese reported that they had brought down with antiaircraft fire two Nationalist F-84 fighter-bombers over Fukien; the same day four Nationalist F-47s attacked the island of Namoa, Kwantung province, and killed six fishermen, while damaging three boats; June 28 the Reds downed two Nationalist planes near Matsu; July 16 one Nationalist plane shot down over Amoy; July 30 one Nationalist plane damaged by antiaircraft fire over Swatow (175 miles southwest of Quemoy).

This is not a complete record of events during the period. With such a record it is difficult to understand how the Secretary of State is able to demand a cease-fire in the Formosa strait from the Reds. At the present time the Nationalist forces are the aggressors. They are carrying out an incomplete blockade of shipping along the China coast. They are also constantly reconnoitering over the mainland from the air.

Blockade Recognized.

These are legitimate operations in the conduct of the Chinese civil war. In international law, blockade is recognized in a civil war within the three-mile limit to sea. Theoretically this distance to sea is part of the land on which fighting takes place. On the other hand, the Reds, with equal legitimacy, can blockade Formosa or attack the sources of Nationalist military power on the island.

The United States position on whether the Chinese conflict is a civil war is equivocal. It pretends that the status of Formosa has not been settled since the United States captured it from the Japanese. The Nationalists, however, claim that it was turned over to them in accordance with the Cairo agreement. They do not recognize the Communist government of China and announce repeatedly their determination to "liberate" the mainland.

The Reds take the same position. "The exercise by the Chinese people," Chou En-lai declared July 30, "of their sovereign rights in liberating Formosa is a matter of China's internal affairs."

At the same time there is no chance that the United States will surrender Formosa and the Nationalist leaders to the Reds for their vengeance. As Secretary of State Dulles remarked recently, the Chinese Communists may have to live with the Formosan problem for a long time.

Ultimately the Reds will have the military power to neutralize Formosa. Before that time comes the United States should be able to shift the Formosan problem from a unilateral obligation to an international one. But in the meantime means must be found to restrain the Nationalist desire to cause war.

Two Frankensteins.

South Korea and Formosa under the present leadership of these countries are two frankensteins whose appetites can be satisfied only with war. Are we building a third in South Viet Nam? Ngo Dinh Diem, the premier supported by the United States, now is fighting a civil war to gain control of South Viet Nam from dissident elements backed by the French.

The situation was unconsciously described by a top French official, who said in the course of a discussion about Viet Nam: "If you will make Diem stop his anti-French propaganda, we will call off the sects." (The sects with their private armies are fighting the Premier and the national army of Viet Nam.)

If Diem gains control of South Viet Nam, he will be faced with all-Viet Nam elections, provided for in the Geneva accord signed a year ago. He cannot agree to elections, for the Communists would certainly win. He will be faced then either with overt Communist aggression from the north or with a Communist revolt from within. The situation in Viet Nam looks no better for the peace of mind of the United States and for peace in Southeast Asia than it does in South Korea and Formosa.

World's Scientists at Geneva Seeking to Apply Atomic Power to Advance Man and Ease Burden

No Contest, No Surprises if U.S. Can Help It — Vast Scope of Program.

by RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.

A SCIENTIFIC endeavor unique in world history opens Monday in Geneva with the start of the 12-day International Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy.

Top scientists and engineers from 72 nations on both sides of the Iron Curtain will gather there to compare notes, report progress and try to chart the course of a new technology that is growing out of two unprecedented explosions ten years ago, at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The men who will meet at Geneva are bound to feel a joint responsibility to show the world that atomic scientists can do much more than prepare for atomic war—that they can apply the same new force to expanding industry, relieving drudgery and combatting disease.

A United States technical advisory team of 183 scientists and engineers will present 178 scientific papers of the total of 474 to be read at the conference by representatives of 23 different countries.

Strauss Echoes Sentiment.

Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, who heads the five-man official United States delegation, declared, before leaving for Geneva:

"We do not regard this as a contest. We are not attempting to show that we are better than anyone else. It is not a sort of scientific Olympic games in which we are participants. We have, of course, the longest experience and the richest and most diverse atomic energy program, but, while it might follow that we should logically make the outstanding contributions, we are not going into it with the idea of making any such demonstration."

Asked if there were possibilities of surprise disclosures at Geneva, Adm. Strauss said:

"I would not foreclose the possibility of surprise. We haven't any surprises up our sleeves. We are not going at it in that way. I don't know what others might do, but presumptively the rules of the game have been laid down by the U.N. steering committee which set the stage for this some months ago. The papers have been presented to the U.N. or are about to be presented, and the element of surprise would be quite foreign to the whole purpose of the enterprise."

If surprises do appear at the atomic conference, despite precautions and promises, there is a good chance they will concern one or both of possible scientific achievements that could revolutionize the production of atomic electric power. These are:

1. The so-called direct conversion of atomic fission into electricity. All the power reactors discussed publicly thus far make electricity by an expensive, round-about method. A chain reaction of splitting atoms releases heat, which produces steam, which in turn drives a turbine and turns a generator.

2. A controlled fusion reaction — that is, the harnessing of the hydrogen-bomb principle for useful purposes. This development would free the world from dependence on uranium or thorium, the so-called heavy metals. Instead, the light elements would be used as fuel, and their supply is virtually inexhaustible.

Examination of the tentative program and the two-foot stack of advance texts of the papers to be read at Geneva gives no hint that either subject will be brought up by the United States, Russia or anyone else.

U.N. Mentions Fusion Topic.

However, a background pamphlet published by the U.N. contains this significant paragraph:

"As for nuclear power itself, all presently projected operations will utilize fission rections, whereby the splitting of heavy nuclei, such as uranium or plutonium, releases energy. However, some consideration might also be given to the possibility of obtaining useful power from fusion reactions, in which energy is released from the combination of very light nuclei, such as hydrogen, to form heavier ones."

Some of the 162 hours of conference time is allotted for informal discussions, and one of those periods could be used in bringing up either of these crucial subjects.

From the Atomic Energy Commission comes nothing but a dead silence of these two important subjects. A former lawyer for the Joint Committee takes this silence to mean, in this case of controlled fusion, that any United States program is "quite modest in scope." He notes that the hydrogen bomb program was announced in 1950, at the start of active development, and that the Air Force has announced its interest in an intercontinental ballistics missle.

British Expert Speaks Out.

British authorities are less reticent on the subject of controlled fusion. Sir John Cockroft, the British atomic authority, said recently that the fusion of light elements would provide a power source "without limit." A British Government report on nuclear power said one pint of water could be made to give heat equivalent to burning 10,000 tons of coal, "and the problem of world reserves of energy sources would appear to have been solved for all time." The date of this achievement, however, was put at "perhaps in 10 years' time, perhaps in a century or more."

Significantly, it is an Austrian scientist who will discuss the subject at the fourth annual atomic energy conference of the National Industrial Conference Board, next Oct. 26 to 28 in New York. Hans Thirring, director of the Institute for Theoretical Physics, in Vienna, is scheduled to speak on "nonweapons potentials of thermonuclear energy."

Most of the Geneva conference will be devoted to applied science, rather than to theoretical studies. In the words of a United Nations resolution, adopted unanimously by the General Assembly Dec. 4, 1954, the conference is intended "to explore means of developing the peaceful uses of atomic energy through international co-operation and, in particular, to study the development of atomic power and to consider other technical areas—such as biology, medicine, radiation protection and fundamental science — in which international co-operation might most effectively be accomplished."

Varied Activities of U. S.

The AEC points out that the United States will be the only participating nation to present scientific papers on every subject designated for discussion.

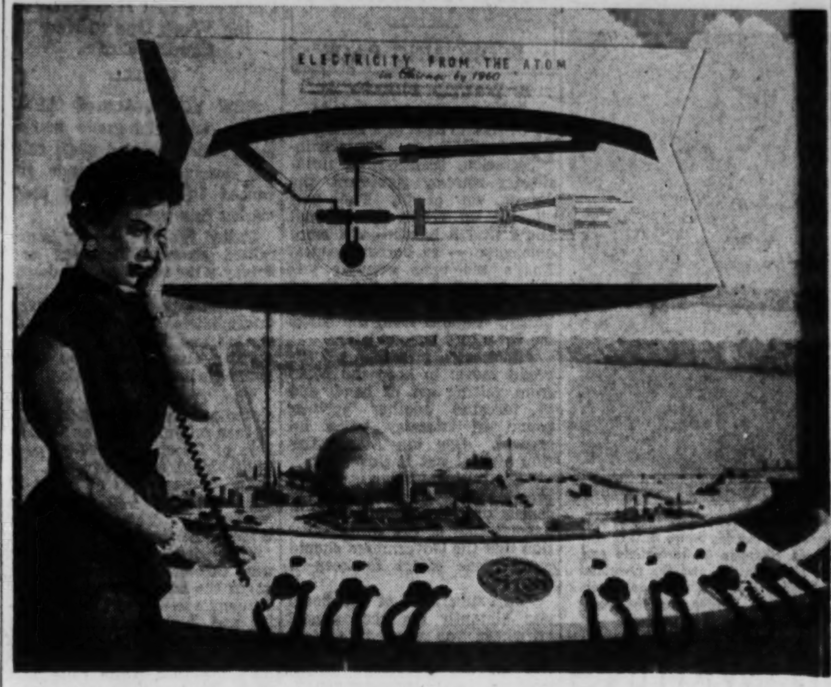
In addition to presenting papers and taking part in discussions, the United States delegation will operate a full-scale research reactor daily. This is the "swimming-pool" reactor that was built at the AEC's Oak Ridge national laboratory and sent by plane to Geneva, where President Eisenhower tried his hand at the controls while attending the Big Four conference.

Exhibits also will be presented by about 100 United States industrial and commercial firms and 50 academic, professional, educational and research institutions.

The British delegation will present detailed models of the Harwell heavy-water experimental reactor and the Calder Hall atomic power station in England. The Russians have prepared a scale model of their 5000-kilowatt atomic power station now being operated in the Moscow region.

Members of the United States delegation, in addition to Adm. Strauss, chairman of the AEC, are Dr. Willard F. Libby, a member of the AEC; Dr. I. I. Rabi, professor of physics at Columbia University and chairman of the general advisory committee to the AEC; Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, president of the National Academy of Sciences and president of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, and Dr. Shields Warren, scientific director of the Cancer Research Institute, New England Deaconess Hospital, at Boston.

By ironic chance, the conference will open just two days after the tenth anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and one day before the tenth anniversary of the attack on Nagasaki.



Model of nuclear power station to be constructed by General Electric Co. for the Commonwealth Edison Co. at Chicago, will be shown at the Geneva conference on atomic energy for peace. In the photograph Miss Eileen Wittmann of Elmhurst, N.Y., listens on earphone to description of plant, recorded for the exhibit in English, French, Spanish and Russian.

itself. There is no assurance that the entire plant, when completed, will be a paying proposition to operate.

But as G.E. engineers point out, there is a big black metal hulk in the G.E. yard, here in Schenectady, the shell of the first large-scale steam turbine, installed by G.E. for Commonwealth Edison at Chicago back in 1903. At the time, it was not quite as efficient as the old reciprocating steam engines being used—but it was the forerunner of vastly more efficient steam turbines on which G.E., as a result of the earlier experience, made more than a few dollars profit for its stockholders.

NO ONE REALLY KNOWS how much electricity produced by atomic energy will cost to generate. Such a plant has yet to be built on a commercial scale. Obviously the costs of the first plants will be greater than that of later plants, when mistakes made in the first instance can be corrected.

A General Electric engineer, trying to produce estimates as accurately as possible for application to the projected Commonwealth Edison plant at Chicago, has arrived at the following set of figures:

1. Fuel costs of a nuclear plant should be about one-half to two-thirds as much as fuel costs for a coal-fired plant.

2. Capitalization costs should be perhaps 50 per cent greater for nuclear than for coal plants, at first.

3. Nuclear fuel costs should be reduced "somewhat," as new uranium sources are discovered and processing methods are refined.

4. Capitalization costs for nuclear plants should be cut in half rather rapidly, as the industry gains experience in building such plants.

Size is another factor in cutting the capitalization costs. The same engineer estimates that as a nuclear power plant is increased in size by 400 per cent, the cost of capitalization per unit of electricity produced is cut in half, on the basis of present knowledge. Small reactors are less efficient, at present, but this does not mean they always will be.

General Electric is planning, already, a series of "package" power reactors that can be used in out-of-the-way places and transported easily. G.E. now sells "package" research reactors, as well as component parts, all neatly listed in an atomic catalogue.

In the end, all commercial development of nuclear energy depends on the Government in this country: the Government not only must furnish the fuel, but also can give or withhold permission to enter the field at all. Still, a progressive loosening of Government restrictions is anticipated as time goes on.

It is estimated by the Atomic Industrial Forum that by 1965 private industry in this country will have invested some $1,500,000,000 in nuclear power plants. Various figures are presented for the amount of new power to be added by nuclear plants, through both private and public investments. There seems to be general agreement that this new power can be absorbed in this country without serious dislocation of present power capacity, and in the world generally the potential needs for new power are almost unlimited. If a real program of development were ever launched, aiming at a standard of living everywhere approaching that in the United States, there wouldn't be enough coal in the whole world to last for 20 years.

First Session of 84th Congress Was in Harmony With President to Congress in February asking for "immediate and effective action" to reduce the school classroom shortage. Legislation failed to reach the floor of either chamber. The measure favorably reported by the House Education and Labor Committee was sidetracked by the threat that there would be a floor fight for an amendment, sponsored by Representative Adam Clayton Powell (Dem.), New York, a Negro, which would deny federal aid to any school district practicing racial segregation.

In the field of health, some legislation was enacted, but most of the measures incorporated in the President's general health program were left for next year. Included in those delayed were the Administration plan for a federal health re-insurance service and a proposal to match state and local expenditures for medical care of the aged, totally disabled, the blind and dependent children. The hospital construction program and the National Institutes of Health received increased appropriations.

Under water resources, the President grouped several projects, including the Upper Colorado Basin project and the smaller Frying Pan-Arkansas River project. The Senate approved the Upper Colorado bill, which would authorize six major water storage reservoirs and 12 irrigation projects in Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico. This would be expanded ultimately to 12 reservoirs and 39 irrigation projects, at a cost of more than a billion and a half dollars. The House leadership put off consideration. The Frying Pan-Arkansas project was not taken up.

How Measures Fared.

In general, this is how Administration measures fared during the session:

Approved without change or with little change: Defend Formosa resolution, European and Asian treaties, new funds for foreign aid, reciprocal trade extension, national defense budget, military pay raise, cuts in military manpower, public debt limit extension, renewal of expiring taxes and anti-polio vaccine program.

Approved with material changes: Military reserve program, limited federal pay raises, minimum wage increase, new mortgage insurance and a public housing program.

Delayed or defeated: Atomic peace ship, Colorado Basin development, customs simplification, delinquency control program, group health re-insurance, highway expansion program, a lowered voting age, military survivors benefits, minimum wage coverage, postage rate increases; refugee act revision, school construction, statehood for Hawaii, strengthened internal security, Taft-Hartley Act revision and self-financing for TVA.

Mr. Eisenhower sought, as part of what he considered an indispensable adjunct to reductions in the standing army, a compulsory program to create a trained military reserve of 2,900,000 men. Congress passed a watered-down version, rejecting the compulsory concept for those in service or those who had served. The House vote to establish the weakened program was bipartisan; the Senate vote was not recorded.

One Dollar Minimum.

The President sought a minimum wage rise from 75 cents an hour to 90 cents. The Democrats proposed a rise to $1 and this was accepted. Again the Senate vote was unrecorded, but the House tally included a comparable number of Democratic and Republican votes on each side of the question.

Congress voted by large majorities to continue the foreign aid program for another year. The President did not get quite as much money as he sought, but the reduction was not great in view of some carryover funds. Congress appropriated $2,703,300,000; Mr. Eisenhower had asked for $3,266,600,000 in his final request.

The Democrats took the initiative in public housing after the President had asked authority to build 35,000 units a year for two years. The legislation, as passed, provided for 35,000 units for one year, as a result of Democratic maneuvering. The Democratic National Committee pointed out that on public housing 80 per cent of House Republicans voted against the president and 69 per cent of the Democrats voted for him.

Mr. Eisenhower, as a result of Democratic help, was almost completely in control of foreign affairs. Passage of the resolution giving the Chief Executive a free hand in defending Formosa, and ratification of the Southeast Asia Defense Pact and other treaties were never in question.

The reciprocal trade program instituted by the late Cordell Hull in the 30s was renewed for another three years. High tariff protectionists were beaten, but liberal Democrats thought protectionists were given too many concessions. In the House, a majority of the Republicans voted unsuccessfully to weaken the bill. In the Senate, a large majority of Republicans, as well as Democrats favored it.

An issue almost certain to cause an interparty fight among Democrats next year will be the continuing effort to exempt natural gas producers from direct control by the Federal Power Commission. The House passed the bill at this session and the Senate is expected to bring it up next year. Behind this bill are powerful individual Democrats from gas-producing states, aided by Republicans. Big-city Democrats generally oppose the legislation.

Wonderment Of Childhood Re-Captured

A CIRCLE OF TREES, by Dana Faralla. (Lippincott, 221 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
DOROTHY ROUDEBUSH

IF Dana Faralla had given the figures for the reading-age level in the front of her book, its character would have been sooner grasped. For here is a story for young readers, say from twelve to sixteen. It gives the impression of having been written by a youthful author who has tried to capture the wonderment of childhood as well as its terrors—and succeeded.

Dana Faralla, without condescending, manages to reduce to simple terms some immense concepts, to describe the elemental forces of nature on a rampage with an objectivity that strips them of a measure of their horror, and to offer, in the person of Reilly-O, a symbol of reassurance. All this she does with a singing prose, mannerisms of which suggest that she may be more at home in a tongue other than English.

"A Circle of Trees" is the story of the Nielsen family, pioneering on the Minnesota prairies about 1880. In the isolation of the wilderness, the family takes on a special protective role. It consists of four children, of whom the two younger have the reader's attention; the father embittered by the loss of their mother; and the patient housekeeper who has tried to fill her place.

That is the family, until the coming of Reilly-O, who appears one day from nowhere, a parfleche at his back. His stay with the Nielsens provides the unity of the novel which is in no way a saga, rather an episode in a continuing drama.

Reilly-O symbolizes man's acceptance of the natural world. Perhaps from his association with the Indians he has come to look with composure on its vagaries. "There's no use shaking your fist in the face of the elements," he says. "It won't help. Be humble, ask for mercy and the grace of pity."

IN direct contrast is Gunna Nielsen's pessimism, which has hung like a dark cloud over the household. Even nature's benefits are a conspiracy against him, "betraying him with good."

Reilly-O brings with him much prairie lore and many symbols. He knows the meaning of a buffalo skull, he can sew moccasins of "stinging leather," he teaches the children to sing when they enter a strange country. Best of all, he shows them how to start trees from apple seeds, for the adornment of their castle of ruins on the hill.

Together they plant other trees, bringing them from the river woodland. They set them in a circle to make a green bowl one day and to signify by their order the everlasting cycle of life and death, of winter and spring. Such tender moments Dana Faralla describes with feeling, completely identifying the reader with the solemn, intent children.

The author's style throughout is a delight, especially for one who reads with the ear.

This is a novel to be recommended for young readers, yes. But it is also for the grown-up, who still wants to know, with Reilly-O, when the grass-pink comes to the wet meadows and the loon is on the swamp.

Long Cold War

THE LAND THEY FOUGHT FOR, by Clifford Dowdey. (Doubleday and Co., 438 pgs., $6.)

Reviewed by
IRVING DILLIARD

IF THE DECADE from 1945 to 1955 seems like a long Cold War, then we have forgotten some pretty important American history. For there was a Cold War in this country over the slavery issue from Nullification in 1832 right up to the firing on Ft. Sumter in 1861.

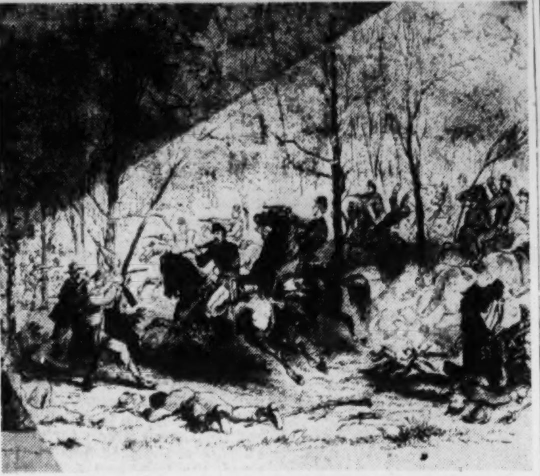
Clifford Dowdey, in the fourth volume of Lewis Gannett's "Mainstream of America" series, reports that bitter struggle primarily in terms of the South, but with enough about the North to show how the disparity between the sections contributed to the gathering storm. Having painted the background for the war itself with detailed accounts of such events as Nat Turner's rebellion, he then draws the main outlines of the combat.

A Richmonder, who grew up in the Lee tradition, Clifford Dowdey is becoming a spokesman for his area, much as his late friend, Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, was. Here is a sample of how he writes.

"For the new Confederacy of the spirit there was a new generation. Children born before the war in areas early occupied had no memory of life on their land except under the martial law of the enemy; by the time Reconstruction ended in 1877, the generation under 20 experienced for the first time freedom from occupation forces on their own land. By then they were unchangeably molded. They were molded on the symbol and the model of Robert E. Lee.

"Even before he died, an old man at 63, 'Uncle Robert' had passed into a legend. When death came to the cotton-bearded college president, for all his efforts to turn his countrymen's minds to peace, his own mind (like Jackson's) returned to the hours of the mortal conflict. Also like Jackson, he called for A. P. Hill, the long-dead Little Powell. 'Tell A. P. Hill he must come up.' Then the great Confederate murmured, 'Strike the tent.'"

This is Clifford Dowdey's tenth book. Earlier titles of his include: "Bugles Blow No More," "Experiment in Rebellion," "Where My Love Sleeps." and "Weep for My Brother."



Contemporary drawing from the jacket of "CIVIL WAR ON THE WESTERN BORDER: 1854-1865," by Jay Monaghan (Little, Brown & Co., 454 pgs., $6). Monaghan, former Illinois State Historian at Springfield and author of books on Lincoln, Tom Horn, Ned Buntline and the Overland Trail, is now in Australia on a Fulbright fellowship. His new book deals with the pre-Civil War fighting on the Kansas border and the many battles in the country towns of Missouri after Fort Sumter.

READING AND WRITING

Prokosch Novel Is Stark Retelling of Cenci Crime

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A TALE FOR MIDNIGHT, by Frederic Prokosch. (Little, Brown and Co., 354 pgs., 3.95.)

FREDERIC PROKOSCH has retold the story of the Cenci family in a novel whose leanness of style marks a departure from his more important previous writings. "Storm and Echo" and "The Asiatics" were both remarkable as examples of the unfettered imagination in operation.

More often than not his material had no basis in any recognized body of facts even though it presumably described the behavior, tribal laws and general culture of Asiatic and African peoples. These novels were also distinguished for their opulent, sensuous, irridescent and sometimes feverish prose.

By contrast "A Tale for Midnight" stays close to the historical outline, moves at a steady, fateful pace and is wholly free from verbal coloring for its own sake. Being a historical study whose outcome is known or can be easily discovered by reference to any encyclopedia, it cannot rely on suspense as does a completed fabricated novel.

Yet it rivets the interest from its opening pages onward. The starkness of the writing gives a reality to the violent and fearful happenings that is rarely achieved by the detailed explanations and psychological interpretations of most historical novelists.

In brief, the story tells how Beatrice Cenci and her stepmother instigated the murder of Francesco Cenci, the father of Beatrice, how they finally confessed under torture and how they and others involved were executed for the crime. Francesco Cenci is represented as a corrupt, self-indulgent and perverted monster whose novel vices were by no means rare in Renaissance Italy. His brutal treatment of Beatrice, which takes pathological forms at times, supplies a humanly understandable reason for his murder.

YET no attempt is made to turn Beatrice into a sympathetic character except by occasional references to an underlying sensitivity that has been neutralized or aborted by the time she reaches maturity. She is ruthless before the murder and suffers no remorse when it is done.

Enough is told, however, to justify the belief that circumstance rather than natural inclination is responsible for her corruption. And it is this implication of subverted tenderness, grace and beauty that permeates the story with the coloring of tragedy.

Aside from this it is a vivid cross section of a vital and turbulent society; and it is a complete cross section comprehending all ranks and all the important sources of power. The author's economy of means results in a kind of flatness of characterization so far as the principal actors are concerned. No amount of words, however, could have resulted in a better understanding of the prevailing social, political and moral forces of the period.

Beauty Is in the Mind's Eye

THE NAKED TRUTH AND PERSONAL VISION, by Bartlett H. Hayes Jr. (Addison Gallery of American Art, Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., 112 pgs., $3.75.)

Reviewed by
ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

THERE still are those who insist that they "just can't see modern art." They mean, of course, with the mind's eye rather than that behind the spectacle lens. For such, this little book should be a guide to appreciation, if not to full understanding and acceptance. It is, in effect, a very special catalog of an exhibit arranged at Phillips-Andover to illuminate this difficulty.

Its frontispiece is a New Yorker cartoon depicting a life class. Every canvas except one is covered with "abstractions." On the lone exception there is a highly faithful version of the model. Seeing it, the instructor tells the art student: "You've got a long, long road ahead of you young man." That is the theme of the book, though it is more philosophically put in the first sentence: "The Arts are man's protest to accepting the World at its face value."

If "accepting" means "reproducing" in one medium or another, then the artist really never had a chance, no matter what his intention. By strictly limiting his subject, the sculptor may do most in this respect. Yet no matter how perfectly proportioned the figure he carves, the stone never turns to flesh—well, never except in that G. B. Shaw play.

Since the painter is restricted to a two-dimensional canvas, his possibilities are further reduced. The writer cannot even dream of a literal presentation of appearances. As for the musician: Is he to reproduce all the unarranged sounds that come to the ear?

THUS the artist is inevitably restricted to the presentation of impressions; and all the good artist ever wants to do is to give form to his personal impressions of this subject and that. Since each artist sees a given subject in his own way, and since every gallery visitor also sees picture or statue in his personal way, there can be difficulties of communication.

There are widely shared tangible experiences. If the artist does not go beyond these there can be a large measure of shared understanding. He may even attempt the writer's storytelling. People can say they are "speaking the same language." But such an experience is likely to be either trite or too shallow to foster those visions which are the mind's delight.

The illustrations in Mr. Hayes's little book—some in color—show how artists have tried to rise beyond this level. Some readers may enjoy looking at the pictures, two or three at a time, to study their own reactions before reading those of the author. In some cases they may be tempted to disagree with him, or even with an artist's own explanation of his work. That they certainly are free to do. Art is personal. As the author says:

"An artistic truth is an intentional personal bias toward a fact. The more people tend to see a thing alike, the less personal and, therefore, less artistic it is, because the more measurable and less individually distinctive it becomes. Thus the arts are chiefly concerned with the way people see differently, with a personal, rather than an impersonal, vision."

True. Yet so absolute a statement raises difficulties for, say, the museum director, the critic, or the art historian. If art is utterly personal, how does the director know what to display, the critic what to praise, and the historian what to record as permanently important? How do they know anybody will agree with them? Also, what safeguards remain against the charlatan and his claque? How does beauty remain truth?

THE answer, of course, is that no art is without its standards even if these be only technical. Then there is an activity of the mind which probably is best called "educated taste." It stems out of warm familiarity with many diverse works of art, a familiarity with the good which leads to quick rejection of the bad.

This book explores no theory of aesthetics. It tries hard to be a primer, a very good primer; and it succeeds. But it does make clear that the standards are necessarily broad. They must be, if the artist is to have scope.

In the end, all is in the painter's or the sculptor's hand, in the cultivated beholder's eye, and in their minds.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

SCORCHING PACE

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6. (AP).

BUSINESS held to a scorching pace this week. The Administration, scenting an inflationary threat, tightened the screws on credit. The new squeeze on credit means that you'll find it harder—and more expensive — to borrow money. That's the case whether you plan to buy a car "on time," get a mortgage on a house, or borrow millions from the banks for inventory accumulation.

Announced intention of the credit move: to keep the boom from getting out of hand, and to forestall another postwar round of runaway price increases. One top Administration official put it this way:

"The business boom is getting pretty exuberant. It's the consensus of the economic and financial side of the Administration that the Government should exert some effort to keep it orderly."

The exuberance of the boom was blatantly apparent almost anywhere you wanted to look. The steel industry, whose payroll hit the staggering record total of nearly $298,500,000 in June, scheduled operations this week at 94.4 per cent of capacity. That should mean an outpouring of 2,278,000 tons of steel. That's particularly significant when you take into account the searing temperatures in the great steel centers, now baking in a record heat wave. Tonnage produced in the like week last year was only 1,527,000.

Electric power output at latest count was the highest for any week in history; automobile production, although down from the previous week, was still a good 40 per cent greater than a year ago.

Soft coal production in the latest week was up nearly 28 per cent from last year; freight carloadings were up 16 per cent. Dun & Bradstreet said retail trade smashed all mid-summer records.

Other Boom Signals.

There were other boom signals. Chrysler reported record sales for the first half-year and a four-fold jump in profits. The nation's 126 biggest railroads disclosed that their combined earnings for the first six months were up 79 per cent from a year ago. Sears, Roebuck reported record July business.

The textile industry, long in the throes of depression, came up with a batch of rosy earnings reports: M. Lowenstein & Sons had record first-half sales, Burlington Industries more than doubled its net, Dan River Mills announced a 53 per cent rise in profits.

The First National City Bank of New York toted up the first-half year profits of 734 major corporations. The tally showed a 31 per cent gain over their combined first-half earnings last year.

Shortages, Rising Prices.

Construction boomed as never before. The Commerce and Labor Departments reported that building activity in the first seven months this year rocketed to an all-time high of more than 23 billion dollars. Highways, homes, stores and office buildings set the pace.

Pressures generated by the stepped-up pace of business made themselves felt in two familiar forms; shortages and rising prices. Price hikes were announced by producers of aluminum, steel scrap, auto tires, Canadian crude oil.

Meanwhile you could find plenty of exuberance among consumers—they were buying at a record clip, and going into hock to do it. The Federal Reserve Board reported that installment debt skyrocketed in June to an unprecedented high of nearly 25 billions. On-the-cuff buying of new automobiles accounted for most of the rise.

It was against this background of mounting raw material prices and consumer debt that the Government's money and credit mechanics decided it was time to apply the brakes. First, the Veterans Administration and the FHA stiffened down-payment and pay-off terms on Government-insured home loans. If you're a G.I., you can't buy a house any more without putting up some of your own money, and the mortgage payoff time is shortened from 30 to 25 years.

The Federal Reserve followed up by hiking the rediscount rate in most of its major banking districts. That's the interest the Federal Reserve charges its member banks. New York banks promptly lifted their "prime rate"—the interest they charge their gilt-edge borrowers. This is the start of the peak season for business loans. Business men who borrow to finance crop purchases or Christmas inventories will find themselves paying the highest interest rates in 22 years.

Banks joined the Government in warning that danger signs were fairly visible on the economic horizon. Here's what two of them said:

Guaranty Trust Co. of New York—"It seems a good time to bear in mind that there never has been a boom without an end. . . . Experience shows that confidence has a way of developing into overconfidence, which frequently leads to unsound business expansion. It would be foolish to assume that the present situation was uniquely immune to this danger."

Northern Trust Co. of Chicago—"Great waves of prosperity have always been interrupted (sometimes abruptly) by years of relatively poor business. This pattern will be repeated unless the excesses so easily developed in a boom are carefully avoided."

U.S. ISSUES IN RALLY AFTER WEEKS' SLIDE

Corporate List Has Harrowing Week Due to New Credit Curbs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP)—Utility and high-grade investment issues declined while rails and foreign dollar bonds advanced in an irregular bond market this week.

United States Treasury issues rallied strongly Thursday and Friday after weeks on the downside. Gains on the last two trading days of the week pushed the intermediates over last week's closing and the long range securities almost made up their losses earlier in the week.

The Treasury 2½s of 1963 closed at 97 6-32 bid, 12-32 higher than on July 29. The Victory 2½s of December 1967-72 were 94-22-32 bid, a hike of 22-32.

The 30-year 3¼s at 104 21-32 bid were only 4-32 under last week's close while the 40-year 3s were unchanged at 99 4-32 bid.

The corporate bond market went through a harrowing week under the influence of the Government's new credit curbs. Utility and high-grade investment securities on the Associated Press bond index touched new lows for 1955 while rails held their own and foreign dollar bonds registered a modest advance.

Rediscount Rate Boost.

During the week 11 of the 12 Federal Reserve districts boosted the interest rates banks must pay when they borrow from the Federal Reserve. The rate was raised from 1¾ to 2 per cent in all except the Cleveland district where a 2¼ per cent rate was established. Only the Richmond, Va. district now remains at the old 1¾ per cent rate. Richmond is expected to fall in line next week when its board of directors meet.

Boosts were also recorded during the week in the prime interest and commercial paper rates. Prime rate is the interest commercial banks charge their biggest borrowers with the best credit ratings. Commercial paper is the money market term for short term unsecured notes of industrial and finance companies.

These moves tightening credit followed an increase the previous week in interest charged on broker-dealer collateral loans. And just one week ago the federal housing and veterans administration raised the down payment minimums of people buying new homes and also cut the mortgage terms from 30 to 25 years.

Objects of the Curb.

The objective of all these actions was to curb pressures which might tend to turn the business boom into inflation. It reflects a view held by many economists, in and out of Government, that credit terms have been too loose. Consumer installment credit, for instance, soared to $24,194,000,000 on July 1, with a hike in June of $765,000,000, biggest monthly increase in history.

State and municipal long-term financing reported in July totaled $455,807,392, according to the Daily Bond Buyer. This compares with $650,780,442 in June and with $280,425,809 for July 1954. The seventh-month total this year is $3,294,009,304, about 18 per cent behind last year's pace.

The tone of the tax-exempt state and municipals market improved slightly over the previous week. This week's biggest offering, the $17,000,000 in Mobile, Ala., tunnel revenue bonds, sold out the first day and, generally speaking, most of the other issues were 75 per cent sold by the end of the week.

No Bids for Issues.

Two municipal offerings, however, failed to attract bids. They were Detroit, Mich., $1,640,000 auto parking bonds and Calcasieu Parish, La., $8,170,000 drainage bonds. The Detroit Parkway Authority will ask for new bids Aug. 23.

WHEAT PRICE OFF FOURTH WEEK AS SOYBEANS SPURT

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (AP)—A shift in the outlook for the wheat carryover on July 1, 1956 sent wheat prices down for the fourth straight week on the Board of Trade this week.

While wheat was sinking, the Midwest's two big crops—corn and soybeans—scurried up on buying inspired partly by hot, dry weather. Corn lost a good part of its gains before the week finish.

Wheat closed the week 2⅝@3⅝ lower, corn 1⅛@2½ higher, oats ¾@1⅝ lower, rye ⅛@½ higher, soybeans 2 to 3 cents higher and lard 8 cents lower to 15 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Wheat was doing all right, if not making any spectacular gains, during the early part of the week. That was in the period when corn and soybeans were racing higher and imparting some sympathetic strength to the rest of the market.

What took the starch out of wheat was a private forecast Thursday by C. M. Galvin of James E. Bennett and Co. that this year's total crop would equal 926,000,000 bushels. This was higher than the July 1 estimates of Galvin and the Agriculture Department.

Complaints corn was deteriorating under the hot sun caused buying in that cereal. The most serious situation was in Nebraska and Kansas.

There also was buying in soybeans on the dry weather, although no complaints of damage were heard.

Oats were not influenced by the weather, the crop having been harvested in the dry area. The slight upturn in rye was viewed as largely a technical matter following four weeks of declining prices.

Lard was lower most of the week but rallied on short covering by local traders on Friday. Loose lard closed the week at 9½ cents a pound, down ⅜ cent for the week and at the lowest price in a little more than two years.

NEW CREDIT RESTRICTIONS, VIEWED SLAP AT INFLATION, BIG FACTOR IN STOCK BREAK

Combination of Major Developments Happen to Co-incide With Market's Readiness for a Reaction.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP) — Stocks took a tumble this week in a reaction that pushed the market down sharply from its old record highs. The fall was brought on by a combination of major developments. They happened to coincide with the fact that the stock market was ready for a reaction and apparently also willing.

Chief factors in the fall, brokers conceded, were new credit restrictions imposed as a slap at inflation. Little by little the screws have been tightened on credit. This week, two major steps were taken. The Federal Reserve banks in principal cities raised the interest rate on money they lend to member banks. Such a rise in what is known as the discount rate is a basic weapon in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board to control inflation (by raising it) and deflation (by lowering it).

Discount Rate Boosts.

Making money more expensive discourages borrowing and thus puts the brakes on inflationary business expansion and speculation. The rate had been 1¾ per cent since April. The Cleveland bank boosted it to 2¼ per cent, highest since 1934, and the other banks set the rate at 2 per cent. At the same time, the big New York commercial banks started charging their best customers with the highest credit ratings 3¼ per cent for money they borrow, highest in 22 years. The rate had been 3 per cent.

The warning signal was enough to jolt the high-flying stock market into a decline. The retreat was orderly at all times. Nobody got scared. But all were well aware that the new harder money policy was effective anti-inflationary medicine.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks two weeks ago hit a record high level of $177.00, but it lost ground on the week after a solid 10-week advance. This week the average dropped $3.10, second greatest fall of the year, exceeded only by the mid-March shakeout during the Fulbright hearings in Washington. It closed this week at $172.40. The drop represented a market value loss of about $3,100,000,000.

Break in Averages.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed the week 9.45 points lower than last week at 456.40, sharpest break since week of March 11. The 20 rails finished 3.19 lower at 155.00 and the 15 utilities showed a loss of .36 of a point at 66.23.)

Sales for the week amounted to 10,542,954 shares, smallest since May 27, compared with 11,164,905 the previous week. Of the 1419 issues that sold during the week, 868 closed lower, 390 higher and 161 unchanged.

Monday's market tumbled as the recently strong blue chip stocks sold off severely. Confidence in the market was weakened when the Chinese agreed to release 11 American flyers, a move which raised many uncertainties in Wall Street minds.

The market continued irregularly in the midst of its uncertainties for two days.

It was last Wednesday that the higher interest rates were announced.

Thursday's market plunged down in an orderly manner. The next day there was a rebound, but the session was one of the quietest and narrowest in a year.

Brokers felt the reaction now under way could well have a great distance to go before it found a footing for a new rally of consequence. Chief factor for that feeling were the tighter credit policies, uncertainties in the nation's foreign relations, and disappointment among traders over corporate reluctance to raise dividends or split their stock.

HOW WALL STREET JOURNAL READERS GET AHEAD

By a Subscriber

"One day I picked up The Wall Street Journal in a railroad club car. I expected dull reading. Imagine my surprise when I found some of the brightest, most interesting articles I ever read.

"I sent for a Trial Subscription. For the first time in my life I began to understand why some men get ahead while others stay behind. I learned about the far-reaching changes taking place in America. I found out about new inventions, new industries and new ways of doing business that are helping ambitious men earn money. My Trial Subscription to The Journal cost me $6. I had the time of my life reading it. And it showed me how to increase my income."

This story is typical. If you think The Wall Street Journal is just for millionaires, you are WRONG! The Journal is a wonderful aid to salaried men making $7,000 to $20,000 a year. It is valuable to owners of small businesses. It can be of priceless benefit to ambitious young men who want to earn more money.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for three months for $6. Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. SLPS-7

Published daily right in the Midwest to bring you vital business and Washington news immediately.

33 EUROPEAN D.P.S DUE HERE THIS WEEK

Relatives, Welfare Agencies to Be on Hand to Greet Them.

A group of 33 refugees from Communist-dominated countries in Europe will arrive in St. Louis early this week. They were among several hundred displaced persons who arrived in New York yesterday aboard the transport, Gen. W. C. Langfitt, from Bremerhaven, Germany.

A similar group of 66 refugees, who arrived here last month, now are settled, living with relatives or in homes arranged for by their sponsors under the Refugee Relief Act.

The new group of displaced persons will be met by relatives and friends whom many of them have never seen. Representatives of the Catholic Resettlement Office, the Lutheran Refugee Service and the Church World Service, which were active in arranging for members of the refugee group to come to St. Louis, also will be on hand to greet them.

Among the group will be Mr. and Mrs. Johann Schmidt, their two children and Mrs. Schmidt's mother, Mrs. Anna Meltsch, who fled their farm home on the Hungarian border in 1945 rather than live under Communist rule. They are sponsored by Schmidt's uncle, Joseph Magditsch, 5241 Alcott avenue.

Others in the group and their sponsors are:

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Welker, Romania, sponsored by Michael M. Misch, 2606 Bredell avenue, Maplewood.

Mr. and Mrs. Johann Bishof and their daughter, Gertrude, 11 years old, Yugoslavia, whose sponsor is Wallace J. Kletzker, 7 Laymont court, Richmond Heights.

Katharina Frister, Romania, sponsored by Ilona Flood, Sappington.

Mrs. Katharina Joerke, Hungary; Mrs. John Hess, 6300 Sutherland avenue, sponsor.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kiefer and their son, Peter, 3, Romania, sponsored by Nick Felker, 3912 DeTony street.

Mrs. Susan Gauges and Marie Gauges, Yugoslavia, whose sponsor is Michael Mayer, 4257A South Compton avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Beneschan and their childreen, Adam and Katharina, 19 and 15, respectively, Yugoslavia, sponsored by Nicholas Braun, 4222 Ellenwood avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Friedrich Haunold and their children, Friedrich and Gerhard, 6 and 2, respectively, Austria, and Mr. and Mrs. Johannes Stumper and their son, Walter, 2, Yugoslavia, sponsored by Joseph Simon, 1209 Sidney street.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Wagner, Romania, whose sponsor is Nick Holzinger, 5215A Jamieson avenue.

Joseph Weinhardt, Romania, sponsored by Edward P. Weinhardt, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Heinrich Taeubel and the son, Friedrich, 28, Yugoslavia, sponsored by Frank X. Schwarze, 3632 Russell boulevard.

Residents of Hiroshima Pray On A-Bomb's Tenth Anniversary

Siren Sounds, Bells Peal Throughout City — 500 Peace Doves Fly Over Cenotaph.

HIROSHIMA, Japan, Aug. 6 (UP)—The 250,000 residents of Hiroshima bowed their heads in prayer today at exactly 10 years to the minute after the first atomic bomb ever used in war nearly wiped their city from the face of the earth.

At 8:15 a.m., the moment when the bomb fell on Aug. 6, 1945, a siren sounded and bells began to peal throughout the city.

The city's present residents stopped for a minute of silent prayer in memory of those who died when an American B-29 dropped the bomb.

When the prayer was ended 500 peace doves were released to fly over the white cenotaph erected in the center of the ruins which mark the point where the bomb came down.

The day's events were climaxed at night with the traditional floating of 10,000 lighted lanterns down Hiroshima's seven rivers in a gesture of solace to the spirits of the dead.

During the half hour daytime ceremony, held annually by the city of Hiroshima in its Peace Memorial Park, messages were read from Prime Minister Hatoyama and the speakers of the two houses of Japan's Parliament.

Hatoyama said the symbol of Japan's rebirth from the destruction of war was epitomized in the "sight of the people of Hiroshima sweeping away the dark clouds of suffering of the past and participating boldly in the task of peaceful construction."

"It is said the study of atomic energy in the world today has advanced several stages," he added. "We look forward to the day when it will not be a tool to destroy mankind and civilization but employed for the welfare of mankind."

SCHOOL AID TO HIKE TAXES, SAYS SURVEY

Fact-Finding Group Praises Program but Tells of Need for Money.

By the Post-Dispatch Jefferson City Correspondent.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 6—The proposed new state school foundation program of more state aid to public schools "is worth the increased cost" and deserves support of voters, but additional state tax financing will be required, the Missouri public expenditure survey reported today.

A 1955 legislative act to establish the increased aid program will be submitted to Missouri voters for approval in a special referendum election Oct. 4, together with a companion act creating a state cigarette tax, earmarked for school financing purposes.

Public expenditure survey, a privately-financed governmental fact-finding agency, in a survey report today issued a warning that unless the cigarette tax bill is approved the school foundation program could not be started on an acceptable basis.

School Aid Figures.

State aid for public school districts now totals about $45,000,000 a year. The new program, if ratified by voters, is estimated to cost about $67,000,000 a year when in full effect.

Estimates of revenue from the proposed cigarette tax of 2 cents a package vary from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 a year.

"In addition to the cigarette tax," the expenditure survey report stated, "other tax revenues will be necessary two years from now if the program is financed in full."

Appropriations by the 1955 Legislature for all state purposes for the current two-year fiscal period exceeded estimates state revenues by $10,500,000, it was said. This over-appropriation could be met for the current period from a state general revenue surplus, it was said, "but the next Legislature will need to find continuing new revenues, in addition to the cigarette tax, to finance the foundation program and other foreseeable state needs.

$20,000,000 Needed.

"The foundation program, when fully financed, is estimated to cost $22,000,000 more than the present program. The proposed cigarette tax is estimated to produce $9,000,000, leaving $13,000,000 for which continuing revenues must be found by the next Legislature.

"Other state services for which new revenues will need to be found will bring the total to well in excess of $20,000,000 a year."

This estimate of additional financial requirements for the school plan and other expanding state operations, the survey report stated, included allowances for increases in state income and state sales tax collections, based on more effective enforcement of those tax laws.

The survey report pointed out cigarette and sales taxes were "the most logical sources of new revenue necessary to finance the foundation school program and other state needs," since the Federal Government largely has usurped the income tax field as a source of revenue.

MINDSZENTY NOW LIVES NEAR TOWN IN SOUTH HUNGARY

VIENNA, Aug. 6 (AP)—Cardinal Josef Mindszenty is staying at a palace near Pecs in southern Hungary, a church official of his episcopate at Esztergom said today. Pecs is a small town about 25 miles north of the Yugoslav border.

Reached by telephone from Vienna, the official said the Cardinal had been visited by his mother after his release from jail. His mother informed church authorities at Esztergom her son is "comparatively well."

The church official was unable to say whether the Cardinal is still in confinement. No church dignitary of the Esztergom episcopate has seen him.

Hungary announced on July 16 that it had freed Cardinal Mindszenty temporarily and that he had been given quarters in a church building. His exact whereabouts, however, had been a mystery.

The Cardinals, who is 63 years old, had served 6½ years of a life sentence imposed by a Communist court Feb. 8, 1949, which convicted him of treason.

KIDNAPERS TAKE DESERTER BACK TO EAST GERMANY

BERLIN, Aug. 6 (AP) — An East German police major who fled to the West has been spirited back to the Reds by kidnapers who got help from his own daughter, West Berlin authorities said today.

The girl was reported to have teamed up with two young German agents who used drink and probably drugs to return her father more than 150 miles from his haven near Darmstadt, West Germany, to the Soviet zone two weeks ago.

West Berlin police said the victim of the plot, ascribed to the East German security police, (SSD), was Slyvester Murau, 48 years old, who had held high rank in the Communist people's police.

Joachim Tietze, 24, arrested here as a suspect in a robbery, confessed the kidnaping and implicated Murau's daughter and Heinz Horeis, also 24. He said he and Horeis were paid 10,000 West marks ($2400) by the SSD after Murau was lured back to the East zone. Both are under arrest in West Berlin. The girl, however, is back in the East zone.

Rebuilding a Ball Club Is Tough, Long-Term Job.

THERE has been an unusually heavy run of mail recently from lugubrious Cardinal fans who can't understand what's the matter with the ball club. Many have been viciously vitriolic, recommending that everybody connected with the club operation, from Gussie Busch down, be fired, and an entirely new front office be installed.

Actually it all boils down to a capsule diagnosis that our old friend, Senor Miguel Angel Gonzalez, once gave to an anguished and frustrated Frankie Frisch in a moment of profound grief.

The Cardinal club of Frisch's days had losing streaks, too, and one evening as a train was taking the Redbirds away from the city of the latest diamond misfortunes, Frank asked Miguel rhetorically what the what was the matter with the ball club.

"I tole you real queeck," the canny Senor volunteered. "Everything okey dokey with this ball club except one thing. You wanna know? I tole you. Too many lose game."

And it's as simple as that right now. The ball club is being rebuilt. That's a long range job. There are sure to be disappointments. It takes a long time to get together a pitching staff and eight regulars. Or make it six regulars. That's what the Cardinals had to do, for Stan Musial and Red Schoendienst are the only players remaining from the last Redbird pennant winning team of 1946.

For those who would criticize the Cardinal front office, we need only to point to the plight of the Pittsburgh Pirates. There's no argument about it, Branch Rickey is the greatest team builder the game has ever known. He built the Cardinals to championship strength. He built the Brooklyn Dodgers into the game's soundest squad. He built so well at Brooklyn that the organization is still functioning. Or had you heard?

More Difficult Now To Find a Gimmick.

RICKEY has had five years with the Pirates, but the club, after Friday's action, was hopelessly last, 34½ games behind the Dodgers. You see, it's tougher now to build a ball club than it was in Uncle Branch's days with the Cardinals and Dodgers. His gimmick at St. Louis was the farm system. He was ahead of the rest of the baseball world with that method of developing ball players.

By the time Branch moved to Brooklyn, the farm system had been adopted by all clubs that could afford it. So the Mahatma turned to a new gimmick. A profoundly religious man, Rickey no doubt was actuated by humanitarian motives when he decided that Negroes should have an equal opportunity in the business of baseball. But aside from humanitarianism, Jackie Robinson was a helluva ball player. Jackie and Roy Campanella, Don Newcombe, Junior Gilliam and Joe Black made a tremendous difference in the Brooklyn picture. It was very good business for the Dodgers.

Shortly after Rickey went to Pittsburgh, Arthur Mann, who had served as assistant to Rickey at Brooklyn, and who knew Rickey better than Branch knew himself, told us that Rickey had a new gimmick at Pittsburgh.

"It may take a couple of years or three or four," Mann told us, "but you wait and see. The Pirates will win a string of pennants and will be a standout in the baseball world just as the Cardinals and Dodgers have been."

Well, something must have happened to the gimmick, which, of course, Mann didn't identify even with a hint.

Rickey is still the smartest man in baseball. But big league ball players are harder to find now.

Getting back to the Cardinals, their program also calls for a lot of patience from the fans. The team is young. There have been disappointments. The outfield isn't as good as observers thought it was going to be.

Perhaps a Pitcher of Martinis Would Help.

YOUNG players make mistakes. Young players, especially in these days of high salaries for beginners, lack the rugged competitive spirit that Cardinals showed in the days when it was a daily battle for groceries. Harry Walker, a rugged competitor in his playing days, admitted Friday night that he was shocked by the Little Lord Fauntleroy attitude of some of his nice boys toward the rougher aspects of baseball combat.

To illustrate, the other night a young Cardinal, carrying a potential run, slid so politely for home plate that he didn't even reach it. In contrast Jim Greengrass of the Phillies, similarly carrying a potential run, slid so hard for the plate that he knocked Bill Sarni loose from the ball.

Unless the young Cardinals can persuade their player representative to have rough slides legislated out of baseball, they'll have to slide hard, too, or all the other boys in the league will wind up with the lolly-pops and sundry October prizes.

It takes time to mould a good, rugged ball club, to weed out the sissies and the pay-day ball players. But the Cardinals have gone a long way in the rebuilding job. All the club needs now is a pitching staff, a Bill Dickey or a Mickey Cochrane behind the plate (another Walker Cooper would do); a hard hitting shortstop, a couple of strong right-handed hitters and presto, the Redbirds will start winning pennants again.

Cards Pull Out All Plugs for A.L.

THE switchboard at the Cardinal offices was an American League news bureau during the past week, when Cleveland was at New York, Chicago was at Boston and that other league's race was a matter of bulletin importance to baseball fans.

"I guess a lot of them couldn't wait for the newspaper or the radio reports," said Ada Ireland, switchboard operator. "We had calls asking for scores all the time." How many calls—15 or 20? "Oh, easy," said Miss Ireland. She obtained scores from a news ticker in the offices.

Furgol's 69 Gives Him 214

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (UP)—British Open Champion Peter Thomson stood off the challenge of PGA Titleholder Doug Ford with a two under par 70 today to cling to first place after 54 holes of Tam O'Shanter's "All American" tourney with a total of 206, 10 under par.

Thomson and Ford, playing together in the next to the last threesome of the day, waged a ding-dong battle in an intermittent drizzle all around the 6915-yard course, and Ford finished with a 69 for 207.

Thomson, making his third appearance in the event (he led the tourney at this same point last year) began the day two strokes up on Ford and he increased the margin to three after nine holes today, when he was two under par with a 34 compared to Ford's 35.

But Ford chipped four inches from the pin on the tenth hole to pull a stroke closer with an eagle and he gained another stroke with a par on the fourteenth, compared to Thomson's bogie five. Both birdied the fifteenth, bogied the sixteenth and parred in.

Thomson nearly holed out a chip shot on the final green, but the ball, which had gone into the grand stand and was lifted to give him a play at the cup, rimmed the hole and bounced two feet away.

Haas Shoots 67.

Meanwhile 39-year-old Freddie Haas, Claremont, Calif., who started today's play four strokes behind Thomson, came up with the best round of the day, a five under par 67, to move into a second place tie with Ford, one stroke off Thomson's pace.

Ford played today on his 33rd birthday and posted his 17th consecutive round of 70 or less.

Bo Wininger, Oklahoma City, Okla., tallied a 68 to grab fourth place with a 208 total while Leo Biagetti, Willoughby, O., posted a 69 for 210 and fifth place.

Three players, Roberto de Vicenzo, Mexico City; Al Mengert, Mamaroneck, N.Y., and Mike Fetchick, Lake Mahopac, N.Y., tied for sixth at 211 while veteran Jimmy Demaret, Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., and defending champion Jerry Barber, Los Angeles, deadlocked at 212.

Heavy rain after half the field was on the course today hampered nearly everybody, leaving the fairways soggy and the greens slow for the last finishers of the day. Still 31 of the 80 pros in the field matched par of 72 or were better.

Six players were bracketed at 213, and then came St. Louis's Ed Furgol, 1954 National Open king, who had a third-round 69 for 214. Dutch Harrison shot 73 for 216, Gene Webb had 74 for 217 and Dick Chassee rounded out the St. Louis group with 77 for 219.

Patty Slips Up.

Patty Berg, Chicago, tallied a five-over-par 81 in the women's pro division, but still held first place with a total of 227.

Miss Berg, three-time winner of the event, shared the lead on the first day with a one-under-par 75 and yesterday fired a 71 to boast a seven-stroke lead on the field heading into today's competition.

But the course was soaked by a driving rain as she began her round today and she scrambled to a three-over-par 41 on the first nine, but held her margin as most of her competitors fared equally poorly.

On the back nine she was two

Manager Connie Ryan Pitching

Highlight of a brawl in a Big State League game at Corpus Christi, Texas, Friday night was this clash between CONNIE RYAN, manager of the home team, and Pitcher BILL BAGWELL. Ryan has just bounced a right cross off Bagwell's jaw. Both were ejected from the game by the umpires. The fight started after a home run by Pitcher Rene Vega of Corpus. As he trotted around the bases he goaded Bagwell, who retaliated by hurling a baseball. Vega, in turn, picked up a bat, and players poured onto the field from both sides, fists swinging. In Texas they do things in a big way, they say.

A Tiger Claws the Plate

BILLY HOEFT, Detroit pitcher, jumped on the plate in the sixth inning of the game between the Tigers and the Yankees at New York as he scored on a double by Harvey Kuenn in the sixth inning. ELSTON HOWARD, Yankee catcher, made a leap for the throw from Left Fielder Bob Cerv. The umpire, calling Hoeft safe, is BILL GRIEVE. BILL TUTTLE, Detroit centerfielder, signaled to Hoeft to stay on his feet.

Phils Hand Cards Eighth Loss in Nine Games

Dickson 5-3 Winner On Lopata's 2-Run Homer

By Bob Broeg

Manager Harry Walker, put out by his players' performance Friday, was saved further pain last night. This time he was put out by an umpire in the first inning, which made the Hat a lot luckier than 9414 Busch Stadium unfortunates who saw the Cardinals blow another ball game.

The reluctant Redbirds, staggering toward the finish of probably their humblest home stand since the poor-relation Robison Field days a generation back when Branch Rickey was manager and Burt Shotton his alter ego on Sundays, lost their fifth straight game to Philadelphia, but, shucks, it was really nothing. They've actually dropped eight out of nine and 14 of the last 18.

The score in this one was 5 to 3, a result of heavy hitting against Harvey Haddix by Willie Jones and Stan Lopata, each of whom homered while sharing six of the Phillies' 11 hits. They drove in the visitors' five runs.

Not Enough Virdons.

Jones's eight-inning single tied the score and Lopata's two-run homer, the 128th off the shaky St. Louis staff in 105 games, broke up the ball game in which the Redbirds momentarily led only because Bill Virdon, the rookie center fielder, hasn't forgotten how to drive in runs.

With one home-team tally as a result of a Philadelphia error, the only Cardinal runs knocked in were a result of Virdon's fifteenth homer with one on in the fourth inning. The kid has driven in eight of the 13 runs scored the last four games by a bashful-batting ball club that has managed only 31 markers on just 83 hits the last 13 contests. The team batting average over that horrible two-week period is an anemic .212.

The pitcher who puzzled the Redbirds this time was, refreshingly, an established major leaguer and not a dart-throwing lefthanded dandy with a drugstore-model glove bought in the Cuban canebrakes. Grey-templed, wizened Murry Dickson, 39 years old this month, relied heavily on the most recent addition to his variety-store assortment of pitches, a knuckleball. And the Cardinals were held to six hits, two apiece by Ken Boyer and Stan Musial.

Walker, who had tried to shake up his ball club with a clubhouse dressing-down after Friday night's abortive loss, tried shaking up his lineup this time after excusing his players from pre-game practice, but he failed to find the inspirational spark he frankly sought.

Haddix's 11th Setback.

The Hat, in fact, provided the most fireworks himself just after the Phillies had scored a cheap first-inning run off Haddix, destined for his eleventh defeat against eight victories even though he struck out seven batters and walked only one before he bowed out in the eighth. Gran Hamner's hard two-out single and two bloopers, one each by Del Ennis and Jones, produced the first Philadelphia run.

In the home first with two out and Musial on as a result of an error, the count on Virdon reached "2-2" when Dickson fluttered forth a daisy of a dipsy-doodle pitch, which fooled Catcher Andy Seminick and maybe Plate Umpire Frank Secory as well as Virdon, who did not offer at the delivery. A belated third-strike call with Musial breaking for second brought heckling from the Redbird bench.

Walker, offering no resistance at the time, reached the dugout

red bird notes

ROBIN (17-9) ROBERTS, striving for his sixth successive 20-game season, will pitch for Philadelphia at 2 o'clock today, seeking a fourth 1955 victory over the Cardinals. Willard (2-2) Schmidt, promising young righthander, will hurl for the Redbirds in the game that ends their home stand.

The National League must be hard-pressed for petty cash. Joe Frazier, called out on strikes to end Friday night's game as a pinch-hitter, was notified by President Warren Giles in a telegram that he had been fined $40 for "remarks" to Lon Warneke, the plate umpire in that game.

In an effort to snap the Cardinals out of their batting slump, Manager Harry Walker, who had dressed down the Redbirds behind closed doors after Friday's game, directed his players not to report last night until 7 o'clock, an hour before game time. As a result, the Cards skipped batting practice.

Harvey Haddix struck out the side as a light rain fell in the third inning.

When Walker shook up his lineup, returning Red Schoendienst to second base, benching Rip Repulski and playing Pete Whisenant, he moved Stan Musial to left field and put the strong-armed Whisenant in right.

Sheary Quits Holy Cross in Salary Dispute

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP)—Lester H. (Buster) Sheary resigned today as basketball coach at Holy Cross College in a salary dispute.

Sheary has coached the Crusaders since the spring of 1948 and in seven seasons his teams won 155 games while losing only 36.

Both Holy Cross officials and Sheary admitted that salary terms prompted the resignation.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 6—Starting pitchers were wild as Thoman-Boothe of Overland, Mo., and Joplin opened their state American Legion junior baseball title series here tonight.

An error and four walks issued by the Thomans' Andy Reed accounted for three Joplin runs in the first inning. Two hits and a double steal added another Joplin run in the second.

Then it was Joplin Hurler Bob Stinson's turn to become a bit wild. An error, three walks and a single by John Meives produced three runs for the Overland team in the second inning.

Meives's hit finished Stinson. He was replaced by Joplin Pitcher Huff, who struck out the next two batters to end the inning.

The Thomans scored two runs in the fifth inning to get a 5-4 lead. Ray Wilson doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored on a fielder's choice. Ron Seago's sacrifice fly later batted in Roland Kurtz, who had reached base when hit by a pitched ball.

This was the first contest in a best-of-three series which is scheduled to continue with the second game at 2:30 p.m. (St. Louis time) Sunday. A third game, if necessary, would be played immediately thereafter.

Winner of the state series will advance to the regional tournament at Enid, Okla., Aug. 14-18.

Meanwhile, Down on the Farm . . .

Jack Faszholz, pitching for the Cardinals' farm club at Rochester, N.Y., in the International League, gained a 6-2 victory over Buffalo last night, though allowing 13 hits. In the American Association yesterday, the Cardinals' Omaha subsidiary won at Louisville, 4-2. The victory went to Stu Miller, though he needed Bob Tiefenauer's assistance in the sixth.

TIGERS CLIP NEW YORK, 7-5; SENATORS, A'S 6-5 VICTORS

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP)—All four of the American League's first-division teams were defeated this afternoon and the Chicago White Sox retained their slim one-point lead over Cleveland and New York.

The last-place Baltimore Orioles walloped the White Sox, 8 to 1; Cleveland dropped a 6-5 decision to the seventh-place Washington Senators and the Yankees lost to Detroit, 7 to 5. The fourth-place Boston Red Sox missed a chance to tighten the race when Kansas City came up with three runs in the ninth for a 6-5 verdict.

Chicago has 63 victories against 43 defeats and a .594 percentage, while both the Indians and Yankees have 64 wins against 44 losses for a .593 mark. Boston has won 62 lost 46, and remains two games from the top.

Grand Slam by Philley.

Dave Philley's grand slam homer and another four-bagger by Gus Triandos set the pace for Baltimore as Irv Palica held the leaders to three hits before he gave way to Harry Dorish at the start of the eighth in 98-degree weather. Dorish yielded only one more safety. Only Chicago run was a homer by Bob Kennedy.

The Orioles tagged Loser Jack Harshman, Mike Fornieles and Sandy Consuegra for nine hits in handing Marty Marion's men their fourth straight setback.

At New York, the Yankees threw a scare into the Tigers with a three-run pinch homer by Yogi Berra in the eighth, his twentieth of the season, but the Tigers added an insurance run in the ninth off Whitey Ford.

Billy Hoeft and Bob Wiesler battled in a scoreless duel for five innings before each side scored twice in the sixth. Two throwing errors by the leaky Yank defense and three Tiger singles added up to a decisive four-run outburst in the seventh, as Manager Casey Stengel shifted pitchers wildly. Hoeft, tiring in the heat, retired after seven innings.

Aber Hero in Relief.

In the last of the ninth, the Yanks made a desperation threat as singles by rookie Bobby Richardson and Mickey Mantle put men on first and third with only one out. Al Aber, who replaced reliefer Joe Coleman in the eighth, struck out Bill Skowron and Bauer to end the game.

The Detroit seventh was a nightmare for Stengel and the Yankees fans among the gathering of 15,002. Tom Morgan, who had replaced Wiesler in the seventh, was doing the pitching. As soon as Morgan walked Jack Phillips, out he came. Jim Konstanty took over.

Ray Boone's liner bounced off Konstanty's right leg and the pitcher threw into center field for an error, letting Phillips take third. Jim Delsing's pinch single scored Phillips with the tie-breaking run.

After Pinchhitter Earl Toregson flied out, Frank House, batting for Harry Malmberg, singled to drive in Boone. House moved to second when Richardson's throw to second on Hoeft's bouncer pulled Phil Rizzuto off the bag, Delsing scoring on the play. Kuenn singled to left, bringing Johnny Kucks to the scene. Bill Tuttle's sacrifice fly drove in House with the fourth run of the inning.

Left Fielder Bob Cerv had a rough afternoon with two sinking line drives by Kuenn that went for a double and single.

Shea Stops Tribe.

Effective relief pitching by Spec Shea featured Washington's victory over the Tribe. Shea yielded only two singles in the last 3⅔ innings to gain his second victory. Art Houtteman and Jose Santiago were pounded for six runs in the first three innings.

Jim Finigan's infield single climaxed Kansas City's three-run ninth at Boston. With Elmer Valo on third, Finigan hit back to the mound but Reliefer Tommy Hurd didn't field the ball in time to get Valo at the plate and first base was left open, allowing Finigan to reach the base safely.

Brooklyn was rained out at Chicago in the first inning after waiting 75 minutes to start. Despite the postponement, the Dodgers still gained ground in the National League, stretching their lead to 16 games when Pittsburgh shut out Milwaukee, 2-0. It was the Dodgers' longest lead of the season.

Bob Friend held Milwaukee to four hits as the Braves lost their fourth straight. Dale Long hit a homer off Ray Crone in the fourth and the Pirates added another run in the ninth.

Cincinnati blasted the New York Giants for 17 hits in a 13-4 triumph behind Art Fowler. Ted Kluszewski hit his thirty-sixth homer, Wally Post his twenty-eighth and Gus Bell his nineteenth in the attack against Ruben Gomez and Hoyt Wilhelm.

American Runners Blair and Courtney Star on Scottish Track

Fordham Ace Sets Record

GLASGOW, Scotland, Aug. 6 (UP)—Tom Courtney of Fordham beat three of Europe's best middle-distance runners today to set a Scottish all-comers record of 1:49.2 for the half-mile run, and Dick Blair of Kansas won two sprint races in the Glasgow Rangers track meet.

However, Courtney and his three crack rivals, Brian Hewson and Derek Johnson of England and Audun Boysen of Norway, failed in their efforts to push to a new world record for the 880-yard distance.

In the mile run, Bobby Seaman of Los Angeles finished a disappointing third. The race was won by Gunnar Nielsen of Denmark in 4:08.9. The time also set a Scottish all-comers record but fell far short of the four-minute mile which the crowd of 40,000 fans had hoped for.

Courtney, who finished second to Arnold Sowell of Pittsburgh in the United States National A.A.U. championships at Denver last June, lay back in the field for the first lap around the quarter-mile track, and then put on a burst of speed in the final 300 yards to beat Hewson by a stride. Hewson was one of the three runners who ran the mile in less than four minutes in a race won by Laszlo Tabori of Hungary, May 28.

Hewson was clocked in 1:49.3; Johnson in 1:49.7 and Boysen in 1:50.4. Courtney's winning time fell well short of the listed world record of 1:48.6 shared by Mal Whitfield of the United States and Nielsen. (However, the 1:47.5 clocking by Lon Spurrier of San Francisco currently is awaiting approval as a new world mark.) Boysen is the world 1000-meter record-holder.

The lack of a pacer kept the time slow in the mile event. None of the runners was anxious to set too fast a pace at the start. Alex Brackenbridge of Scotland made an effort to liven up the field as he opened a wide lead on the third lap, but Nielsen and Ken Wood of England easily overtook him on the final lap.

Wood finished second in 4:09.8 while 19-year-old Seaman was far behind in third place with a clocking of 4:13.4.

Blair twice clocked 11.4 seconds in winning the 120-yard invitation handicap race, but the feat was not recognized as a British and Scottish all-comers record because of a strong following wind. In the final of the event, Blair beat England's Brian Shenton by a stride. The American later won the 220-yard race in 21.8 seconds.

Doug Sanders, 22-year-old Florida college student, increased his margin in the men's amateur division with his poorest round of the tourney, a 73, for a 212 total, four under par. He held a six-stroke edge over Jim Tom Blair, Jefferson City, Mo., who tallied a 74 for 218.

Wiffi Smith, St. Clair, Mich., continued to pace the women amateurs with a 79, three over par, for a 231 total, nine strokes better than Jackie Yates, the women's intercollegiate titleholder from Honolulu, who posted an 80 for a 240 total.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP)—Larry MacPhail, master of the Glenangus Farms in Maryland, announced today the sale of his 7-year-old stallion, General Staff, to a syndicate for $240,000.

General Staff, a son of Mahmoud, will continue to stand at Glenangus Farm and will be managed by a committee composed of Henry H. Knight, J. M. Roebling and MacPhail.

and suggested to the umpire, jawing with the oral jockeys, to stick to his balls and strikes, a recommendation that led to one word, then another. Secory had the last one, thumbing out the St. Louis player manager, banished for the third time. Walker then gave Secory an uncheerful little earful before retiring.

With two out in the fourth, playing under the baton of Coach Lou Kahn, the Cards took the lead. Musial got the first Redbird hit, a single off Dickson's glove, and Virdon lined his home run into the pavilion.

Bright Moment: 3-1 Lead.

The home team made it 3-1 in the fifth, but, typically since losing their sense of timing, the Cardinals failed to profit fully out of the opportunity. After Haddix doubled with one out, Harvey was breaking back to the bag on Boyer's sharp grounder that skimmed past Shortstop Bobby Morgan and then rolled through Ennis in left field for an error.

Haddix, reversing his field, scored on the miscue and the fleet Boyer sped around and belly-flopped safely into third, but Wally Moon, baffled by the Dickson knuckler that claimed five strikeout victims, went down swinging. Musial drew the first of only two walks yielded by the merry magician, intentional, and Virdon flied out.

Thereafter, following the pattern of recent Redbird defeats, it was only a question of time. Jones whacked his fourteenth circuit smash in the sixth, cutting the lead to one run. And after Ennis doubled with one down in the eighth, Willie drove him across with the tying tally. With two out the crouching Lopata, as troublesome generally for Haddix as Hamner, drilled a "1-2" delivery into the left field seats for his thirteenth homer.

And it was time to go home because friend Dickson, as young in his rubber right arm as in a gay heart, closed out the Cardinals with the skill of an old pro.

GOLF by ROBERT MORRISON

Par Is Three.

PAR for a nifty, new little golf course nearinng comletion on Highway 66 (9307 Watson Road) is 333 333 333—27, but it may not be so easy as the general run of wide-open pitch-and-putt layouts.

Don and Bill Duwe, sons of the long-time Forest Park pro, the late Ed Duwe, have been building the attractive little layout the last two years. They hope to have it in operation before the season is out.

It's situated on about 10 acres of ground, and the nine-hole layout measures about 730 yards in length, according to rough estimates provided by Don Duwe. But the attractive thing about it is that it was cut out of a wooded area and big trees were left standing.

"We like to think of it as true miniature," Don explained. "We made it a point to leave every big tree we could and we've done a great deal of planting. We'll trap the greens and in fact make every effort to reward a good pitch shot. If a green is missed, it will penalize the player."

The greens, almost completed, have so-called U-3 Bermuda grass which, Don said, should stand up under the heavy traffic that will be necessary to make such a venture a going concern.

"This grass has made a fine putting surface already and the greens are hardly a year old," Don remarked.

Bill and Don got the idea of building such a course when they left Forest Park some three years back. The hot weather has slowed down their progress in recent weeks, but they may open within a month or so, Don said.

To give an idea of the distances of the holes, Don said the yardages in order would approximate 125, 100, 85, 85, 50, 100, 35, 75 and 75. The course will be lighted for night play. Fees probably will be about 50 or 65 cents.

The name, Don said, probably will be the Crestwood Golf Course.

Bingle, Bangle, and Bungle.

THESE days, when any unnecessary wear and tear on golf course greens is to be avoided, at least one pro is up in arms over the game of bingle, bangle, bungle.

"It's a game in which the golf score doesn't mean anything," Creve Coeur's Jack Burns explained. "The players don't even keep score cards as they compete for points on (1) hitting the green, (2) getting close to the hole and (3) taking the fewest putts.

"It results in a group sometimes taking 25 minutes to play a hole. They even carry tape measures with them and walk all over the greens excessively and in this kind of hot, humid weather we've been having, the greens can't stand it."

The excessive traffic around the greens thus develops, Burns further explained, because if one golfer hits a green with his approach, another golfer may take any number of strokes in just trying to get close to the green so that he then may score a point by getting closest to the hole with an accurate chip or taking the fewest putts.

Burns said he was doing his best to stop this kind of thing at Creve Coeur. It is not golf, he said, when they play the game that way.

IN strong support of Bermuda shorts for the male of the golfing species is Algonquin Pro Homer Herpel. . . . He says it restores a dressed-up appearance that has been sadly lacking since the day of knickers. . . . "It became so any old kind of khaki slacks would do in too many instances," Herpel asserted. . . . Gerald Kwentus, Sunset caddie, is another to receive an Evans scholarship from the Western Golf Association. . . . He is tabbed for Northwestern University. . . . Jim Remmert, Lakeside, an earlier scholarship recipient, is headed for Wisconsin. . . . Other local boys are under consideration for similar awards, reports Algonquin's George Whyte, Western director who is taking an active interest in this phase of the association's program.

Lloyd Mangrum, former Tam O'Shanter winner, was unable to compete this time because physicians have ordered the veteran player to rest for six months to mend rib separations suffered during the Masters event last spring. . . . Don Clarkson, Glen Echo pro, back from Tam O'Shanter, was wishing he could play more often in circuit tournaments. . . . But then, he noted, some apparently play too much—like Tommy Bolt, who picked up at Akron where he became "tired of golf." . . . Another star reportedly thinking of taking a rest is Jackie Burke, Clarkson said. . . . Despite good play, he just can't seem to win—his last victory was in 1953, a year after his big four-victory season in 1952.

$306 'Double' At Cahokia; Crackice Wins

The daily double last night at Cahokia was a rewarding $306.60, the biggest daily-double return so far in the meeting at the East side race track.

Little Hach, winner of the second race under the guidance of Jockey Bobby White, returned $75.60 on a win ticket. The first part of the daily double combination was Casinova, which paid $7.40 to win. Palmer Domenico rode Casinova, and in addition to that first-race victor, also was aboard Great Threat, the winner in the fifth race.

Crackice was the victor in the sixth race, and added to the respectability of its record in local racing this season. It was Crackice's fifth victory in its most recent eight starts in the area. The horse was a winner four times during the recent Fairmount meeting, and in other races has placed twice, and finished in the show position the other time.

Appointment set a track record as it won the feature seventh race, doing the mile and one-sixteenth distance in 1:45 2-5, under Jockey Clarence Meaux. The former record was 1:45 1-5. Alternative, the favorite in the race, finished fourth.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

Akins In Real Test In Bout With Logart.

VIRGIL AKINS, St. Louis welterweight, currently working on a string of three successive knockouts, faces a real test at St. Nicholas Arena, New York, tomorrow night when he opposes Isaac Logart of Cuba in a 10-round bout.

The contest will be telecast but will not be seen on TV in St. Louis.

Logart, a native of the same town in Cuba which produced Kid Gavilan, Camaguey, has won 37 of his 46 bouts in the pro ranks since 1949. Of his victories, 19 were by knockouts. He lost four decisions and boxed five draws.

Akins, a professional since 1948, has won 29 of his 43 bouts, 15 by knockouts; lost 13 times and boxed one draw.

This year Akins seems to have found himself, however. His 8-round knockout of Ronnie Delaney of Akron, O., in May at St. Nick's was one of the real upsets of the year. Just previous to that bout, Delaney had defeated Johnny Saxton, former welterweight champion of the world, and was a prohibitive favorite to beat Akins. But Akins knocked him out—and good.

Virgil then took on Joe Miceli in the same place and knocked out Joe in a round. And Joe just the other night gave Art Aragon an artistic lacing in Los Angeles.

Logart is ranked tenth among the welterweights, Akins fifth.

In bouts this year, Logart won two hard-fought decisions from Ludwick Lightburn at St. Nick's, knocked out Rocky Casillo in Miami in six rounds and defeated Jimmy Hackney in Madison Square Garden.

Akins is in the midst of managerial troubles with a squabble between Eddie Yawitz and Lou Wallach going before the Missouri Commission recently. Unable to decide the rightful manager, the commission suggested that Akins refrain from boxing until the affair was straightened out but Yawitz suggested that the manager's share of Akins's earnings be put in escrow until the rightful manager is determined, probably by a court action. That was done and this will be the first bout which Akins will have fought under the arrangement.

Virgil looms large in the plans of the International Boxing Club here this winter and if he continues at his present pace, it would not seem too far-fetched to expect to see him in a fight for the 147-pound championship at The Arena before the end of the indoor season.

Moore Gets to Work.

ARCHIE MOORE has been having so many distractions in his camp at North Adams, Mass., where he is training for his shot at the heavyweight championship of the world, that he has clamped down against any more personal appearances.

Moore said that he was five days behind schedule in his effort to get ready for Rocky Marciano at Yankee Stadium, Sept. 20, so for the present it's nothing but hard work for him.

There was much speculation as to why Moore chose North Adams in the first place, as it is in the Berkshire Hills in northwestern Massachusetts, a rather remote spot, but it has been learned that he had a bout there some years ago and grew to like the place. It is 150 miles from New York City.

Archie was on a television show the other night in New York, then he was asked to make an appearance at a boys' camp near North Adams. He was told it was five miles from his own camp but discovered it was nearer to 30. The trip took so long it kept him from another TV appearance and spoiled an entire day's work. So it will be nothing but hard work for Archie for a while, at least.

Moore fought and knocked out Esco Greenwood at North Adams, July 29, 1949, at North Adams. After that he went 20 straight fights without a loss, although he boxed a draw in the string.

His first loss after that was to Harold Johnson on a decision in 10 rounds at Milwaukee. He later beat Johnson, then knocked him out in a title defense last year.

So, in addition to an attractive setting for a training camp, which descriptions indicate North Adams is, Archie has something of a superstitious liking for the place.

That he will get himself into top shape for Marciano there is no doubt but the oddsmakers in New York continue to boost the price against Archie. The latest quotation to come to notice favored Marciano at 1 to 4.

Such a price seems to be a big overlay and Marciano would do well to guard against wild optimism which such quotations might bring him.

To "A Reader"—Irv Schoenwald in picking Marciano over Moore was merely stating his opinion. As an associate of the International Boxing Club, Schoenwald would not be interested in making or taking bets.

Italy Foe For Right To Play U.S.

GLEN COVE, N.Y., Aug. 6 (AP)—Australia clinched a spot in the Davis Cup inter-zone finals today when Rex Hartwig and Lew Hoad crushed Kosei Kamo and Atsushi Miyagi of Japan, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

The Australians, winning their third point of the series, thus qualified to go against Italy's European champions at Germantown, Pa., next weekend. The winners of that match challenge the United States for the trophy at Forest Hills, N.Y., Aug. 26-28.

The final two singles matches tomorrow thus become only a matter of routine.

In the reversal of yesterday's schedule, Hartwig is slated to go against Miyagi and Rosewall against Kamo. However, Capt. Harry Hopman of the Aussies is expected to ask permission to substitute Hoad for Hartwig.

The newly-formed Australian doubles team, winners of the Queens and Wimbledon titles, was never pressed as it whipped through the three sets today in 57 minutes.

They didn't lose a service and only on one occasion had a delivery carried to deuce. Generally they were winning their services at love.

Buchholz in Jaycee Tennis Quarterfinals

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 6 (AP)—Earl Buchholz, second-seeded boys player, from St. Louis, advanced to the quarterfinals of the National Jaycee tennis tournament today by defeating Leslie Nicholson of Memphis, Tenn., 6-2, 6-2. Buchholz will meet sixth-seeded James Shaffer of St. Petersburg, Fla. Sunday.

Richard Leach of Arcadia, Calif., defeated Charles McKinley of St. Louis, 6-2, 6-0, in the boys fourth-round singles.

In other matches, two more seeded players were ousted from singles competition. The biggest upset came when Eddie Sledge of Dallas beat eighth-seeded John Skogstad, Coral Gables, Fla., 6-4, 6-2, in the fourth round of the juniors division.

Unseeded Paul Palmer Jr., Phoenix, defeated George Stoesser, Carmel, Calif., 7-9, 6-3, 6-1, in the boys division for the other upset of the day. Stoesser was seeded fifth.

The top seeded player in both divisions won their matches easily. Art Andrews, Iowa City, took only 20 minutes in disposing of David Nelson, Chicago, 6-0, 6-0, in a fourth-round junior singles match.

In the boys division Ned Neely of Atlanta, seeded first, beat Peter Woodward, Topeka, Kans., 6-2, 6-1.

Buchholz and fellow St. Louisan Rodney Susman won two matches to reach the quarterfinals of the boys doubles division. Buchholz and Susman defeated Larry Hough and Mickey Charney, both of St. Paul, Minn., 6-2, 6-2, in the second round, and came back to whip Robert Folz and Paul Palmer Jr., of Phoenix, Ariz., 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

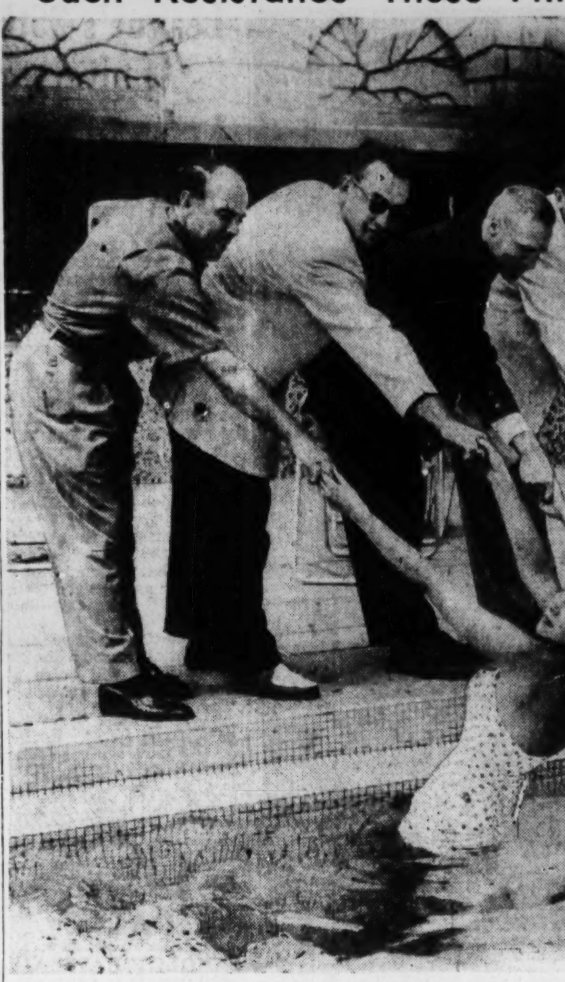
Such Resistance These Phillies Have!



—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Players May Be Great Swimmers, But Not at Their Hotel Pool

By Jack Rice

Major league baseball is full of disappointments. A disappointment recently developed here is the swimming pool at the Hotel Chase, the day nursery for National League teams brought in to play with the Cardinals by night.

The hotel built a swimming pool and a patio, and planted shrubbery at the bleacher wall to keep the swimmers from feeling sorry for all the hot people waiting at the corner for a Lindell bus.

At the time the pool was building there was idle talk in the league of the oasis that was to be. When it was completed, the oasis had to be treated as a mirage. Managers decided swimming pools are full of hot water, and that the athletes are paid to get tired on good, dry land only. So their bathing suits never get wet. Dry and sulking, they don't even go near the water much any more.

"A lot of them used to come and sit around the pool last year," said a lifeguard, Miss Missouri. Earlier in life she was christened Sharon Knickmeyer, but this summer she is Miss Missouri.

Dodgers, Giants Like It.

Looking around at the shrubbery and other trimmings that seem to grow naturally around swimming pools, it seemed strange that baseball players should no longer come and sit. "Oh, the novelty wore off," said Miss Missouri, "and they'd rather sit in their air-conditioned rooms." It is a clue that may have been missed in the commissioner's survey on what is wrong with modern baseball.

"The Dodgers and the Giants spend more time down here than any of them," said Miss Missouri. "All their executives sit around the pool, sometimes for a couple of hours, when they're with the team." The pennant-winning strategies in the league the past two years plainly have sprung from the waters here, while astigmatic Cardinal officials trying only to find a pitcher overlook a whole pool.

"Leo Durocher is here a lot, and he's a very charming man," continued Miss Missouri. "He said he didn't mind, really, if the players went swimming if they'd just go in and swim a length or two and get out, but he was afraid some of them might not do that. They might dive or run and break an arm or something." Miss Missouri nodded as she spoke, understanding Mr. Durocher's concern. Miss Missouri's special assignment at the pool is children, and their running and diving and getting into depths over their heads.

Pallid Night Workers.

"A couple of the Phillies used to come in last year, but I haven't seen them this year," said Miss Missouri. Several of the dry-docked Phillies appeared on the terrace, following a photographer. A woman said, "you always used to be able to spot the baseball players here, they were so tanned." A man warned her that was as damaging as remembering Rudolph Valentino. It's night baseball now, he said.

"This better be worthwhile," said a Phillie, grinning. "I left the best pinochle hand I've had on this trip, to come down here."

He blinked at the sunlight. He met Miss Missouri, and blinked again. "I haven't met the other 47, but you should do well at Atlantic City," he said. Gallantry doesn't need water to grow. Air-conditioning will do as well.

DETROIT, Aug. 6 (AP)—New York, scoring the winning run on an error, won the Union Printers' Baseball League title today, defeating defending champion Washington, 2-1.

New York scored once in the fourth. Washington tied the game in the seventh, but let New York score in the last half of the inning on a single, hit batsman and an error.

New York, which last won the title in 1952, eliminated Boston, 5-2, in an earlier game.

(St. Louis's Typo team was eliminated earlier in the week.)

Late Manitoba Hatch Boosts Duck Prospects

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 6—Prospects for better duck hunting in 1955 than last year are picking up in Manitoba.

After crying the blues all last fall and up till early summer, there's more than a good chance of bang-up shooting this fall.

There has been a complete reversal of a gloomy picture here, and that's great news for hunters all along the Mississippi flyway.

Saskatchewan broods help fill the flyway skies too, although most spill down the Central flyway. And in Saskatchewan the duck outlook is so spectacular, you have to see it to believe it, and maybe then you're not sure.

Earlier this year Saskatchewan Game Commissioner Ernie Paynter reported that farmers were due for some bad crop damage with a 25 per cent increase in ducks coming up. Following the 1954 season in that province when all that kept scatterguns silent were game laws and lack of shell money, that's cheering news.

Ducks kept climbing until when hunt regulations were announced, gunners in Saskatchewan found their daily bag limit increased to 15 birds, and a season opening around Sept. 1.

Here in Manitoba where early duck population predictions of gloom had been thick, August reports show that there's every possibility that there'll be as many ducks as there were in 1952, a hot and heavy year when limit bags were the rule and not scattered exception.

Second Hatch Big Success.

It's all the result of the second hatch. This year it has been an outstanding success. Brood sizes for both dabblers and divers is extremely favorable. In Saskatchewan, Ducks Unlimited Manager Herb Moulding reports that it looks like a record hatch there.

In Manitoba second nesting attempts and late nesters produced enough birds to offset the poor showing of first nesters. Canvasback have done well with average broods of seven ducklings. Mallards have topped them with an average of 7.3, and the dabblers cover every small pothole pond across the country side.

Barring bad hailstorms, or botulism, to hit at the small birds, there's going to be a good break for Mississippi flyway gunners, and Central flyway sportsmen will be getting shooting a la mode.

DOWN THE STRETCH

Drop in Mutuels.

ALTHOUGH the mutuel handle at Cahokia Downs for the first 12 nights of the meeting, $2,398,619, is ahead of the total for the corresponding period at Fairmount, the East St. Louis Jockey Club meeting is almost $400,000 behind the figure for the same period in 1954. . . .

The 12-night average at Cahokia is $199,885, compared to the $228,792 at the inaugural meeting at the track. . . . Fairmount's handle for its first 12 programs was $2,318,975, whereas it was $2,774,403 at Cahokia a year ago. . . .

However, with the new tax law, Cahokia to date has saved $41,883.48. . . . That's the difference between the 6 per cent, which goes to the state on handle of more than $300,000 a night and the 4 per cent, when the betting is under that mark. . . . Only once since the meeting began has the handle been over $300,000. . . . That was Aug. 6, when $304,407 passed through the windows.

Change of Diet?

Trainers and owners who had success at Fairmount are finding the going rather rough at Cahokia. . . . For instance there is C. Howard Springs, who saddled 27 winners at Fairmount and so far has not had a single winner at Cahokia. . . . Whereas the horses trained by Springs and managed by Fred Roenigke earned $26,125 at the Collinsville track, the total is only $635 at the current meeting. . . . Springs saddled Cykie, which was first Friday night, but then was disqualified for interference and placed second.

Then there are the horses owned by Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Holman, which have earned only $500 against the $15,050 at Fairmount. . . . And Thurman Gammon's horses have won only $1350, while those in the Mrs. T. M. Pruett string have accounted for $3390. . . .

In Cahokia's first 104 races, 37 public choices for a percentage of .35, have come into the winner's circle. . . . Second choices have won 25 times; third choices on 12 occasions, while long shots have been in the winner's circle 30 times. . . . There have not been too many odds-on-winners, but two of them were successful Friday night—Marie H in the fourth and Movie in the ninth.

Slow Starting Time.

ADVERTISED post time for the first race is 8:15 o'clock, but not once on the first 12 nights have the horses reached the post at that time. . . . It's been anywhere from 8:22 to 8:32, which was the time the horses went to the post Friday night. . . . The new starting time was announced by officials so that fans could get home earlier. . . . Here's the time the horses reached the post for the first race each night, according to official charts of the Daily Racing Form:

Date.	Time.	Date.	Time.
July 23	8:23	July 30	8:27
July 24	8:23	Aug. 1	8:27
July 26	8:22	Aug. 2	8:27
July 27	8:25	Aug. 3	8:29
July 28	8:24	Aug. 4	8:28
July 29	8:25	Aug. 5	8:32

* * *

HOOFBEATS: Another horse has gone to a new owner via the claiming route. . . . Mrs. Margaret Roos took Game Prince for $2000. . . . Among the latest riders to leave Cahokia to ride at James C. Ellis Park (formerly Dade Park) are C. Collins, R. L. Jackson, R. Duncan and J. D'Augustino. . . . One of the strings racing at Ellis Park is that handled by Eddie Cole, the 24-year-old Harrisburg (Ind.) trainer, who had quite a bit of success at Fairmount. . . . Cole has 22 horses and has first call on the services of John Delahoussaye.

Kutis North and C.S.M.C. Could Clinch Muny Baseball Titles Today

M'Nearys To Be in Playoffs

By Neal Russo

All three Muny senior baseball races go right down to the wire today. Kutis North in the North Side League and Carondelet Sunday Morning Club in the South Side circuit could repeat as league champions with victories today, but the Heine Meine loop could end in a tie for first place.

McNearys were assured of a playoff berth in the Meine League yesterday when the Carondelet Advertisers defeated Luigis, 10-6, at Porky's Field, behind Lefty Bob Barry, who pitched to all but the last batter. Duke Wodraska took over then.

By defeating the Advertisers (6-8) today at Porky's, McNeary's (8-6) will be sure of the title. However, a McNeary loss would enable the winner of the Hoffmeisters-Luigis game at Meine's to tie McNearys for first place and make a playoff necessary. Both Hoffmeisters and Luigis have 7-7 records. Today's games start at 3 o'clock.

Don Knobbe whacked a home run and a triple to lead the Advertisers' attack yesterday.

Although the regular season ends today, rained-out games have been rescheduled this week in the North and South Side leagues.

The eliminations will begin Aug. 21 at Meine Field but Fairground Park No. 1 will be the site of the remainder of the two-losses-and-out eliminations for the six teams that finish first or second in each league. A meeting to determine the draw will be held tomorrow night at the Downtown Y.M.C.A. Kutis North gained the Muny title in 1954.

Kutis North (10-2) plays Borbein-Young (9-4) in the 1 o'clock North Side game at Sherman Park No. 2. (The C.Y.C. playoffs are at Fairground No. 1, the league's regular diamond). If Borbein wins, Union Printers will have to defeat Kutis in at least one of two makeup games this week to give Borbeins a chance at the title.

Lloyd Merritt, Kutis ace, is unable to get in from Camp Chaffee, so George Shaffrey or Chuck Currinder will start on the mound against the Borbeins' Dick Loeser. The regular Kutis catcher, Jack Caito, also will be absent again. He is vacationing. Kutis and Borbein have broken even in their four meetings.

Carondelet Sunday Morning Club (10-3) opposes Kimacks (9-5) at Carondelet Park at 1 o'clock with Kurt Krieger likely to hurl for the leaders. Don Mumm, another Camp Chaffee soldier, isn't expected to be on hand for Kimacks, who probably will start Righthanders Dave Hoolan or Al Westrich instead. If Kimacks win, Kutis South will have to defeat Carondelet in a rescheduled game this week to enable Kimacks to tie for the crown.

Hoffmeisters, who have lost five of their games by one run and two others by two runs, again will be without the services of two key men, First Baseman Bob Hormeyer and Center Fielder Roland Stuckmeyer.

Celebration of League's 25th Anniversary

A special doubleheader today at Troy will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Southwestern Illinois Inter-City Baseball League which has turned out many players for the majors and minors.

Preceding the All-Star game will be a three-inning old-timers' contest between Maryville, 1931 champions, and the Leece Red Birds of Collinsville, runners-up that year. Most members of both 1931 teams are expected to take part in the game.

In 1931 Maryville won the first-half flag, the Leeces the second half, and Maryville took the playoffs, two games to one.

In the All-Star game, John Maly of Maryville will manage the Reds. His coaches will be Bill Kondoudis of Collinsville and Olin Clawson of Edwardsville. Venice's Lyman Tucker will pilot the Blues. His coaches will be Oliver Holzmeier of East St. Louis Smallings and Charley Brisky of Granite City Sacred Hearts.

The old-timers' game on the Moonlight Diamond, one mile west of Troy, will begin at 1 o'clock, the all-star game at 2:30.

Lambeau Drills College Stars in Secret to Develop Offense for Browns

Stress on Air Attack Expected

Game on Channel 36

THE College-All-Star-Cleveland Browns football game next Friday night will be televised by the American Broadcasting Company and carried here by KTVI, Channel 36, starting at 8:30 o'clock.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (INS)—The twenty-second annual All-Star football game at Chicago's Soldier Field next Friday night will give ex-pro coach Curly Lambeau an excellent chance to show up his old friends in the money-for-play ranks.

Lambeau, in a decided departure from All-Star tradition which saw top college coaches handling the collegians, was named to handle the All-Stars in an all-out effort to snap a four-year pro domination of the classic.

Not since 1950 have the Collegians beaten the pros in the big game. Since then, the pro champions have almost toyed with the campus kids—to such an extent that sponsors of the game, headed by the late Arch Ward, decided on the drastic coaching change this year.

This year's all-star opposition—the Cleveland Browns—rate as decided favorites to beat the Collegians. But Lambeau, a hard-bitten veteran of the pro ranks himself, has other ideas. The man who helped found pro football when he established the Green Bay Packers and who later coached the Chicago Cardinals and the Washington Redskins, believes he has the tools to beat the Browns.

He has five crack quarterbacks and six outstanding ends.

The quarterback contingent is made up of Ohio State's Dave Leggett, Notre Dame's Ralph Guglielmi and Tom Carey, Oregon's George Shaw and California's Paul Larson.

The ends are Oklahoma's Max Boydston, Georgia Tech's Henry Hair, Southern Methodist's Ed Bernet, California's Jim Hanifan, Ohio State's Dean Dugger and Wisconsin's Jim Temp.

Lambeau has been drilling his charges in secret for the past three weeks at Northwestern's Dyche Stadium—and has not revealed his offensive plans.

But it is no secret that his big opportunity lies in striking through the air at the powerful Browns, rather than shattering his ranks by trying to gain overground, as did Jim Tatum of Maryland last year, and other recent college coaches.

All of the All-Star quarterbacks are throwers of the first collegiate standing—particularly Leggett and Guglielmi. They also are resourceful and eager to make an All-Star impression to bolster their efforts to become pro standouts in their own right.

Lambeau, now at liberty after years of national recognition as a pro coach, desires nothing more than to beat his old friend, Paul Brown, of the Browns.

It might mean another big time job for Lambeau, too, if his team can upset the Browns. A crowd of 90,000 is expected to witness the big game.

The records show 13 victories for the pros in the series, two ties and six victories for the All-Stars.

Invidious Virus (Flag Fever) Hits British Consul's Staff at Boston

BOSTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—The British Government, Boston branch, has taken informal notice of a strictly American phenomenon—the pennant aspirations of Boston's baseballing Red Sox.

British Consul William Barker tucked his tongue firmly in his cheek today and asked in a letter to the Boston Globe whether the pennant fever which has infected Red Sox fans "is or is not brain-washing, American style?"

Wrote Barker from his island of cricket in an ocean of baseball madness:

Some Esoteric References.

"The staff of this office is 93 per cent British. But coffee-break conversation, instead of centering on proper themes like cricket or channel swimming, nowadays tends to be dominated by esoteric references to home runs by Mr. Williams, double plays by Messrs. Klaus, Goodman and Zauchin, and wicked curve balls of Mr. Nixon and his conferees.

"In brief, an insidious virus has penetrated what should be a sacrosanct British stronghold. One is entitled to ask: 'Is this or is it not brain-washing, American style?'"

(The United Press quoted Barker as saying the hidden-ball play should be barred in Boston. "The strategem may be baseball, (but) could it not be proscribed?"

(For the benefit of British readers whose familiarity with baseball and the Red Sox does not approach that of Mr. Barker:

(Theodore (Ted) Williams is a tall outfielder with an amazing talent for employing a wooden bat to propel thrown balls where opposing fielders cannot reach them, i.e., he knocks 'em out of the park.

(William Klaus, William Dale Goodman and Norbert (Norm) Zauchin are a trio of infielders especially adept at catching balls bouncing along the ground and passing them back and forth until two men are declared out.

(Willard Nixon is a right-handed pitcher with the not unusual ability to make a thrown ball depart from a straight line thus making it difficult for a batter to smite the ball fairly.

(The Red Sox are Williams, Klaus, Goodman, Zauchin, Nixon and several other young men who annually drive their followers into a state of dementia by making threatening passes at the American League championship, i.e., the pennant.)

Consul Barker has other complaints, too. Seems he has no radio in his automobile. So, what happens when he pulls up with other cars for a red light?

'Goodman on Second,' Etc.

"From every dashboard Mr. Curt Gowdy (who broadcasts Red Sox games) is declaiming, not quite loudly enough, that Goodman is on second, Klaus on first and Williams at bat.

"'Here's the three-and-two pitch,' he says—and there goes the green light and away surge the cars, radios, Curt Gowdy and all. Does anybody care for the nerves of the radio-less minority?"

Barker, who endeared himself to New Englanders last December by mailing out Christmas cards bearing a drawing of the Boston tea party, winds up with one admonition:

"Your correspondent must request that his identity be not revealed outside New England. His addiction to local vices, if known in certain quarters, might lead to his premature recall from Boston.

"This would be a calamity as (a) he likes Boston and (b) he could not bear to miss the world series games at Fenway Park at the end of this summer.

"Yours faithfully,

Grashoff Goes For St. Joseph In C.Y.C. Game

The two powerhouses of C.Y.C. senior baseball, St. Joseph's of Clayton and St. Pius, meet today in the second round of the two-losses-and-out playoffs at Fairground Park No. 1. Starting time will be 3:30.

The loser of the 1 o'clock game between Epiphany and Holy Rosary will be eliminated.

Manager Erv Fischer, who said before the season that he would be happy if his St. Joseph team won even half of its games, probably will start his ace, Harry Grashoff, who struck out 16 and allowed only three hits in a 9-0 victory over Epiphany last Sunday.

Manager Bob Steinke of St. Pius will counter with Ray Olliges, the righthander who never wears a cap on the mound because "it makes me uncomfortable," or Dick Gangloff, who is just as much at home at first base, behind the plate or in the outfield.

Olliges started and Tom Drazen relieved in the seventh in St. Pius's 7-1 triumph over Holy Rosary last week.

Fischer, who has managed many of the boys on his team for six years, was pessimistic this spring because St. Joseph's was moving up from the junior ranks although several key players still were eligible for junior ball. They wanted to remain together after gaining the junior title.

St. Joseph lost only once, to All Souls, in league play. St. Pius also was beaten only one time during the regular season, Steinke's second as manager.

A big surprise to Steinke has been the recent hitting of Ron Hebrank, who had three hits in the first playoff game. Dan Blomberg has turned in an excellent job in center field since switching from the infield.

League-leading hitters during the regular season were: Bishop Cody League—Jack Fischer, St. Joseph's .552; Bishop Winkelmann—Don Roedner, Epiphany .482; Bishop Helmsing—George Dorenkamp, St. Liborius .464; Cardinal Glennon—Dick Gangloff, St. Pius .428.

Men in Blue Turn Air Blue, Draw Fines; Two Are Teachers

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Aug. 6 (UP)

PRESIDENT W. J. GREEN of the Longhorn League, a Class D baseball loop, reversed the usual order of things today and fined three umpires for using abusive language and violating National Association rules.

Green fined two of the umpires $100 each and a third $25. He refused to name the trio, saying it might hurt their futures in their other professional fields. Two of the umpires are school teachers.

The charge against the umpires fined $100 each was use of profanity; the third man drew his fine for violating National Association rules for handling baseball.

Green said that "the handling of a situation arising in the ball games and the use of language detrimental to the game plus threatening remarks to players in regard to their actions in ball games is something this office does not approve and will not condone."

The league official added that the umpires "definitely did not uphold the traditions of the man wearing a blue uniform whose duty is to uphold the dignity of baseball."

SOCCER SHOTS
by Dent McSkimming

Some of the clubs now engaged in two summer soccer tournaments here are expected to enter the one-day seven-a-side tournament to be held at Meramec Sport Club on Sunday, Sept. 18. Short halves are played in this knock-out tourney with each team limited to seven players.

Three trophies will be offered, to go to the tournament winner, the runner-up and to the team scoring the greatest number of goals. Entries are being received by Harry Wipperfurth, 6020 South Grand, FL 3-9547.

County May Expand.

Four or more clubs are likely to be added to the St. Louis County Soccer League when that organization opens its second season in October. Invitations have been extended to Trojans, Scott Air Base, Dogtown and Tabacchi clubs, according to league Organizer Walter Giesler. Last season the County League was a six-club organization. Giesler said no invitations would be sent to clubs affiliated with other leagues.

"We're not trying to build up our league at the expense of another," said Giesler. "Any club that wants to join us is welcome, but we're not doing any pirating."

One club in the County League has received overtures from the head of another league, a step that might lead to much realignment. Three leagues for senior clubs operated here last season (County, Khoury and C.Y.C.) and the Kutis club went its independent way.

Khoury Tryouts For Batterymen At Forest Park

Batterymen for the Khoury All-Star baseball games will be selected in tryouts at Forest Park next Sunday and Aug. 16.

The All-Star games are scheduled at Busch Stadium Aug. 26-27-28 and Sept. 3. Affiliated leagues in Southern Illinois and Kentucky will hold their star games at Brooks Stadium in Paducah, Ky., Aug. 26-27.

The tryouts next Sunday will begin at 1 p.m., St. Louis time. Players unable to take part in those tryouts will have a special session Aug. 16 at 6 p.m., St. Louis time, at the same diamonds in Forest Park.

Tryouts will be on these diamonds, across from the Highlands:

Atoms—softball diamond 17; bantams, softball diamond 18; midgets, diamond 1; juniors, diamond 2; juniors, intermediates and seniors, diamond 3.

Twenty pitchers and 20 catchers will be chosen for the atoms, bantams and midgets, 10 of each for the juveniles, juniors and seniors, and nine of each for the intermediates.

All-Star co-chairmen are Bob Richards and Tony Kreft.

Skish Champion To Defend Title In Meet Here

Jon Tarantino of San Francisco, all-round champion in the National Fly and Bait Casting tourney last year at Long Beach, Calif., will defend his distance bait title in the national skish competition Thursday, August 18, at the St. Louis Fly and Bait Casting Club docks in Forest Park. Tarantino also won the all distance title in the regular casting events.

Last year's winner in the men's skish distance fly event, Ben Fontaine of New Orleans, will be one of the approximately 375 casters expected here for the tourney. The defending women's and junior titleholders are from the West Coast and have not filed entries as yet.

Two members of the St. Louis club expected to make a bid for the skish honors are Bill Schellert and Fred Sexauer Sr. The Carondelet club will have Gus Sturm and Vic Wiedemann in the event, while Harold Smith of North St. Louis club is another contender.

Skish is a sport in which standard fishing tackle is generally used. The rod is unrestricted but the reel must be of standard manufacture with a level winder. The line must test not less than nine pounds and the plug or weight may not exceed ⅝ of an ounce. The sport is designed especially for the improvement of fly, bait and spin casting between fishing trips. The name "skish" comes from two words—"skeet" and "fish."

Six skish events scheduled for men in the national meet are: ⅜-ounce spinning distance, ⅝-ounce bait distance, fly distance, accuracy fly, ⅝-ounce accuracy bait and ¼-ounce spinning accuracy bait. Women and juniors compete in two events only—accuracy bait and accuracy fly.

The regular casting action starts Aug. 17 with registration taking place Aug. 14 and 16.

Japanese Team Sets Record for 400-Meter Swim

U.S. Squad Trails by 8 Points

TOKYO, Aug. 6 (AP)—Japanese swimmers bettered the world record in the 400-meter relay tonight, beating the United States in the second night of the United States-Japan championships.

The United States team, finishing one length back, also bettered the old world record.

The Japanese quartet stroked the eight lap event in 3:46.8, topping the old mark of 3:47.9 set by Yale University in 1951. The American team was clocked in 3:47.6.

The victory wound up the second night of competition and gave Japan an imposing 30 to 22 lead in team scoring in the three-day event.

The old relay mark was set over a 25-meter pool. Tonight's record came in the Meiji Shrine 50-meter pool.

The Japanese won three of the five events on the second day's program which produced new meet records in the 100 meter backstroke and the 200-meter butterfly events.

Betters Meet Record.

The predominantly Japanese crowd roared approval as world record holder Yoshi Oyakawa, a Hawaiian Nisei, was given a gold cup for his backstroke victory in 1.05.9. It bettered the meet record of 1:07.2 set in 1950 by Jim Thomas of the United States.

Oyakawa did in the hard way, coming on with a burst of speed in the final 30 meters to overtake Ohio State's Al Wiggins and Japan's Keiji Hase, who wound up second and third.

Ford Konno of the Hawaii Swim Club won, as expected, in the 400-meter free style, but only after a tough race. He had to spurt on the gun lap to overtake Japan's Tsukasa Ohno. The time was an unspectacular 4:35.6.

The race provided a big surprise, however, when Ohno and teammate Yuki Sjohi, both young university students, nailed down second and third places to blank Hawaii's Bill Woolsey. The finish gave Japan a standoff in points, 3-3.

The Americans pulled an upset of their own in the 200-meter butterfly with George Harrison, a 16-year-old newcomer from Orinda, Calif., and Bill Yorzyk of the New Haven Swim Club clinching second and third.

Harper Diving Winner.

Takashi Ishimoto, another swimmer from Nihon University, surprised with a victory in 2:29.5, a new meet record. To gain his cup, he had to outdistance teammate Jiro Nagasawa, the world record holder, who came fast at the end, but out of the money.

Don Harper of Ohio State, the National A.A.U. springboard champion, took the high board from Japan's Yutaka Baba.

Tomorrow's events include the 800-meter and 100-meter freestyle races, the 100-meter butterfly, the 200-meter backstroke and the 80-meter relay.

Council Flying High in Ducks Recommendation

CONSERVATION experts in the 14 states in the Mississippi flyway expect a bumper crop of wild ducks this fall. That became evident last week when the Mississippi Flyway Council decided what it would seek from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service in the way of a hunting season and bag limits.

The council wants a 60-day season—five days more than last year—and a daily bag limit of seven ducks, with a possession limit of 14.

Although the council stipulated that the seven-bird daily bag limit should include two pintails, its recommendation still represents a considerable increase over last year's limit of four.

Even if a hunter this year should fail to bag a pintail (sprig), he would still be permitted, under the council's plan, to take five ducks daily, or have 10 in possession. Most ducks bagged in the Mississippi flyway are mallards, with pintails second.

If the council's recommendation is adopted, a sportsman could bring home 14 ducks on a two-day trip this fall, provided he included four pintails in his bag. Last year, he could possess no more than eight ducks of all species.

State Officials Optimistic.

Many of the state conservation officials who attended last week's meeting at the Statler Hotel here were optimistic that the Fish and Wildlife Service would liberalize, at least to some extent, the hunting rules for the Mississippi flyway.

Whether the federal agency will go along with the council's recommendations is a question, however. The desires of all flyway councils, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be presented to the Fish and Wildlife Service tomorrow and Tuesday in Washington.

Some time later this month, the officials rules will be announced.

Since an increase in ducks has been reported for each of the last three years, conservation officials of states in the Mississippi flyway, which includes Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas, feel that an extended season and increased bag limit are justified this year.

The latest report is that the number of nesting ducks in the Canadian provinces that supply the United States with birds is 9.1 per cent greater than last year.

"Hunting regulations should be closely tied in with the supply of ducks," one state official told Outdoors. "If there are more birds, liberalize the rules. If less, then tighten them."

Anti-Depradation Move.

The theory behind giving a bonus of two pintails daily to Mississippi flyway hunters is to help reduce depradation caused by ducks of this species on the West Coast. Some of the pintails that use the Mississippi flyway eventually find their way over to the Pacific coast, it was said.

The Mississippi Flyway Council rejected a proposal by the Fish and Wildlife Service which would give states, especially those with zoning difficulties, an option on determining the length of the wildfowl season.

Under a formula suggested by federal officials, a state could have a longer or shorter season than that fixed by the Government agency. If a shorter season were chosen, the bag limit would be increased for the particular state. On the other hand, an extension of the season—one method of eliminating zoning problems—would mean a reduction in the bag limit.

The council said that, for this season at least, it did not wish to adopt the federal agency's proposal.

However, the council did recommend that the seasons for the various states in the flyway be set between Oct. 1 and Jan. 20, and that any state should be allowed to have a split season without a penalty on length.

I. T. Bode, director of the Missouri Conservation Commission, said he would seek special hunting dates for the Bootheel area in Southeast Missouri.

Because of certain environmental factors, ducks move into this section much later than other parts of Missouri, usually after the season ends.

If the season is extended on a state-wide basis this year, Missouri will tack the extra days to the end instead of the beginning of the shooting period.

Other recommendations made by the Mississippi Flyway Council for this year's hunting season include: Fixing of daily hunting hours at one-half hour before sunrise until one-half hour before sunset, instead of one-half hour before sunrise to one hour before sunset, as last year; permitting one wood duck in the daily bag, and retaining the rule pertaining to motorboat shooting.

Chance to Voice Views.

A meeting at which all St. Louis county sportsmen will be invited to express their views on fish and game regulations for the forthcoming seasons will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at the county courthouse in Clayton, in the jury assembly room on the second floor.

The public meeting has been called by Dennis Connor, state conservation agent for the county. He said: "I shall point out the present wildlife situation, as we know it, and hope that interested parties will make suggestions on regulations, which I can report to our commissioners."

Similar meetings, presided over by conservation agents, will be held as follows: Thursday at Hillsboro, Jefferson county; Aug. 19 in Franklin county, place to be announced later; Aug. 16 at St. Charles courthouse, St. Charles county.

Lions to Sponsor Grid Clinic Here For Teen-Agers

The Detroit Lions will hold a football clinic for St. Louis-area high school teams two days before their Sunday night, Aug. 28 benefit game with the Chicago Cardinals, it was announced last night.

Joseph F. Dwyer, chairman of the pro football exhibition to be played for funds to be used in connection with the Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital, said the Lions would hold their clinic for teen-age players at Washington University's Francis Field, Friday, Aug. 26. More than 50 teams and coaches will be invited.

The Lions, Western Division champions the last three years and national titleholders in 1952-53, will break camp at Ypsilanti, Mich., and play two earlier exhibition games before arriving here in time for a heavy workout in connection with the clinic.

Dwyer, assisted by Joseph F. Holloran and Edward G. Marsh, game co-chairmen, and by two veteran coaches, Carl Snavely of Washington U. and Dukes Duford, formerly of St. Louis U., said the Chicago Cardinals might arrive from their Lake Forest (Ill.) camp in time for the demonstration.

Although Coach Buddy Parker of Detroit and Ray Richards, new Chicago mentor, expressed greatest interest in rookie players at this time, Parker told Dwyer that Paul Christman, who handles the Lions' quarterbacks during the training season, had been working with Harry Gilmer, a seven-year professional veteran with the Washington Redskins. Gilmer was obtained to understudy Bobby Layne at Detroit and receive instruction on offense from Christman, former Missouri U. All-America and Chicago Cardinal ace.

The ticket chairman for the benefit exhibition, E. L. Kaiser, added Joe Lenneman as a new member to his committee and reported progress for the contest that will be played at Public Schools Stadium.

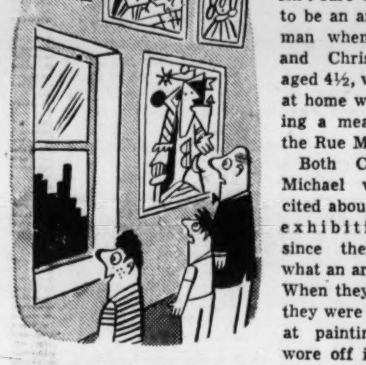
At Paris Exhibition

Two Small Boys Get A Load of Picasso

By Art Buchwald

PARIS.

THEY say it's easier for children than for adults to understand Picasso's paintings. On a hunch we took two children with us when we went to see 50 years of Picasso Exhibition which is being held at the Louvre this summer.



The youngsters rounded up from friends were Michael Barry, aged 7, who isn't sure whether he wants to be an artist or a policeman when he grows up, and Christopher Torem, aged 4½, who finger paints at home when he isn't riding a mean bicycle down the Rue Marbeuf.

Both Christopher and Michael were quite excited about going to an art exhibition particularly since they didn't know what an art exhibition was. When they discovered that they were required to look at paintings the elation wore off immediately.

On entering the first room of the exhibition which featured paintings of Picasso's blue period, both children showed some interest. But as we moved into the cubist period, things started to get confused.

● "WHAT DO YOU LIKE BEST in this room?" we asked Christopher.

"The window," he said. "Let's go outside and play."

Michael was studying one of the cubist village scenes. "What is it?" he asked.

"It's a bunch of houses." Christopher said, "Let's do something else."

We stopped in front of another cubist painting. "Michael, what is that?"

"I can't see it very well."

Christopher, who was hopping on one foot, said "It's a girl with a guitar." Which it was.

Michael looked at a large surrealistic painting titled "Woman in a Shirt on a Couch." "What is it, a jigsaw puzzle?"

"Look carefully. What do you see?"

Michael looked carefully. "I see a fat woman and a couch."

Only then did we realize Michael had caught on to the game and was reading the titles next to the pictures. Christopher couldn't read, so he was our only hope.

"What do you see there?" we asked him in front of a "Portrait of a Young Girl" painted in Avignon in 1914 and described in the catalogue as Cubisme rococo.

● "I SEE A LADY, but I don't know what she's doing," Christopher replied.

"Neither do I," said Michael. "I don't even see the lady."

"Let's have a Coca Cola," suggested Christopher.

We stopped at another painting of a still life.

"Could you paint that?" we asked Christopher.

"No," he said, hopping on his other foot.

"Why not?" we asked him.

"Because I don't have any purple paint at home."

Michael had gone on and up ahead we found him staring at a picture titled "Nude Woman on a Couch."

"I really don't get it," he said. "I really don't get it. She's all mixed up. Her head looks like it's split in two."

"It's a lady sitting on something," said Christopher. "Gee whiz, let's do something else."

The paintings became more complicated as we continued. Christopher was now holding his throat and complaining he needed a Coke desperately. Michael had become very quiet and even a little angry.

● WHEN HE CAME to three paintings of women whose eyes were not exactly lined up and who had two noses and two mouths each he said, "Why did he do that?"

We said Picasso was trying to show the side of the face and the front at the same time. This did not satisfy him.

"That's funny," said Michael, "that's real funny. I never heard of having eyes like that."

"I like it," said Christopher, "because she's got a blue face and yellow fingernails. I like blue faces."

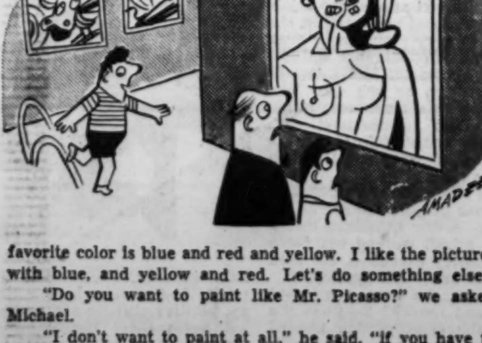
"I don't like green faces," said Michael. "That woman there looks sick."

"She looks like an alligator," said Christopher. "Come on, let's do something else."

In the last room of the collection there were seats and we all sat down to discuss the exhibition.

"You know why they put the names next to the paintings?" Michael said, still mad. "It's because if you don't understand it you can read what it is. That's why."

"I wish there were more cows," said Christopher. "I like the cows and the horses, but mostly the cows. My favorite color is blue and red and yellow. I like the pictures with blue, and yellow and red. Let's do something else."



"Do you want to paint like Mr. Picasso?" we asked Michael.

"I don't want to paint at all," he said, "if you have to paint people the wrong way."

"Would you like to paint like Mr. Picasso?" we asked Christopher.

"Yes, I'd like to paint cows like that."

"Do you have any objection to where Mr. Picasso puts people's eyes or noses?"

"No," he said, "only I like blue faces. Let's go have a Coke"

"Let's go to the movies," suggested Michael.

We left the museum with Christopher running up ahead of us while Michael walked beside us still mad and leaning more and more towards wanting to be a policeman.

"I'VE been through St. Louis on the train lots of times," said the man from San Jose, Calif. "Thought this trip I'd stop off and see it. People tell you there's nothing to see in your town but I've been very much impressed. This, for instance, is beautiful, simply beautiful." He paused and mopped his brow. "Just don't see how it can rain and still stay hot."

The man from San Jose, S. W. McCarley, of the Southern Pacific Lines, was emerging from the orchid greenhouse at Shaw's Garden as he spoke. He and his wife were among the full house aboard the Gray Line afternoon grand tour of the city, some of the many thousands of out-of-town visitors who tour the points of interest of our city throughout the year.

While St. Louisans flee to Oregon and Texas, sightsee in Boston and Philadelphia, visitors from Oregon and Texas, Boston and Philadelphia, vacation in St. Louis and find the prospect not at all unpleasing.

It is perhaps our greatest native failing that the average born-and-bred resident of St. Louis finds is incredible that anyone would find anything fascinating to see here. But they do. And some of them, like McCarley, feel we should abandon some of our overweening modesty and civic deprecation and do a little more boasting—Texas and California style.

WHAT are the big attractions visitors want to see when they come to St. Louis? Gray Line Tours recently reported that the three most asked about are the Anheuser-Busch Brewery, the Zoo, and the Lindbergh trophies at Jefferson Memorial.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, which screens requests from many would-be sightseers, reports that there are more than a dozen categories which are regulars in their correspondence files. These include, in no special order of importance:

Art Museum
Municipal Opera
Steamer Admiral
Forest Park
Zoo
Cardinals
Old Court House and Cathedral
Jefferson Memorial
Jewel Box
Eugene Field home
Campbell house
Forest Park Highlands
Shaw's Garden
Golden Rod Showboat and boats other than the Admiral
Cherokee Cave
Cinerama

Visitors who come in large groups or attend conventions are most likely to be interested in industrial tours, such as the trip through the Anheuser-Busch brewery, which is visited by 70,000 to 100,000 people a year. During the summer months, conventions sometimes include another sample of Busch hospitality, an evening at Grant's Farm.

This year the Chamber of Commerce, through its Visit St. Louis office, is sponsoring a special offer to out-of-town week-end visitors. This is called "St. Louis Holiday," which, for $7, provides tickets to the Municipal Opera, a trip on the Admiral, a Gray Line Tour, and "Cinerama Holiday." On Sundays when the Cardinals are in town, a ball game replaces the tour.

Advertised in out-of-town papers within a radius of 250 miles, the weekend holiday is proving popular, according to Haig Toroian of the Chamber of Commerce.

APPROXIMATELY 15,000 people each year get a capsule version of St. Louis sights via The Gray Line Tours. There are two of these a day, a two-hour tour each morning and a three-and-a-half-hour grand tour each afternoon, which includes a comprehensive survey of the city's architecture, foreign flavor, industrial and residential area from the riverfront to Clayton. It is a tour which leaves most visitors pleasantly surprised.

"It happens over and over again," says Dan Meyer, manager of Transit Service Corp. which operated The Gray Line here. "People tell us that they considered St. Louis a big country town, that they never realized it was such a beautiful city and had so many attractions until they took our tour."

Meyer's letter file bears out the enjoyment of the average tourist, and also provides an interesting cross-section of reaction. There is a childishly scrawled letter of comments from every child in the Dorsey School, Dorsey, Ill. Sample: "Thank you for taking us to the Zoo. What I liked best of all was the little black bear."

A man from a town in Iowa known for a certain product, showed concrete appreciation by sending some of the product—five rings of bologna sausage.

Several years ago a boy from the West coast and a girl from the East coast purchased tickets at Union Station for the grand tour. somewhere between the Old Court House and the bear pits, romance flourished, and the couple came back the next year on their honeymoon with a promise to return each anniversary.

In five years, Meyer can recall only four complaints from sightseers. One was from a man who disapproved of the attention paid the Old Cathedral. Another was from a member of the W.C.T.U. who wrote that the time spent at the brewery stop could better be spent in church.

The tour we took seemed to make everybody happy and although it was a middle of the week, muggy day, every seat was taken in the glass-topped air-conditioned luxury bus. We boarded it at the second stop, at Hotel Jefferson; the bus also takes on passengers at Union Station and Hotel Statler.

Bill Beck, our driver, spoke into a microphone extending over the steering wheel; in a smooth, mellow voice he delivered an impressive flow of statistics, history and occasional wisecracks while managing the intricacies of no-left-turn traffic. In the downtown area he pointed out the Union Electric Building (birthplace of the American Legion), the Post-Dispatch, Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney (established in 1850), the Frisco lines home office, the old Federal Building, Jaccard's Jewelry Co., and various other stores and businesses. First spontaneous reaction came at the sight of the Stix-Baer-Fuller parking garage.

"Isn't that wonderful?" a woman passenger marveled.

"THE enjoyment of the tour depends on how comfortable you are, so make yourself comfortable," Beck advised passengers. "Take your shoes off if you like. I'm not going to guarantee getting them back on."

"St. Louis is the ninth largest city in the United States," he announced as we rolled down to the riverfront. "It is one of the few major cities that does not count its suburban population. Population within the city limits is slightly over 900,000. Counting the suburbs there are over a million and a half people. It is the leading industrial center of the South and the third largest industrial center in the United States."

The Rev. R. H. Toole, retired Methodist minister from Indiana, who was stopping over with his wife and cowboy-clad son on their way back from El Paso, Tex., leaned across the aisle.

"How many bridges span the Mississippi at St. Louis?" he asked us.

With typical native ignorance, we looked blank. Was it three or four?

"We are now approaching two of the eight bridges which span the Mississippi river," Beck advised us. "The river is at its narrowest here except for its source. Across the river is East St. Louis, population 90,000, largest mule trading center in the United States. Ahead is the Admiral, finest riverboat afloat recently made famous on Cinerama. Next is the Golden Rod, one of the only two river showboats still in operation. This structure to the right is the old Rock House, oldest standing structure on the banks of the Mississippi, built in 1767."

Our seatmate was Mrs. J. N. Watson, of the suburb of St. Johns, who told us she had lived here all her life but had never seen the historic sights. When the Rock House information was given, she nudged us and whispered, "See what I mean?"

Beck explained the proposed riverfront park, the existing parking lot, the Old Cathedral, Courthouse and Dred Scott case, the new inter-regional highway, the Merchants Exchange and the drug and chemical companies on Fourth street. He called attention to still existing examples of French architecture in this area, wrought iron balconies and open courtyards, to Soulard open market, the Welsh baby carriage company (largest in the world) and St. Peter and Paul's church, one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in this country.

There is an old story to the effect that sightseeing drivers used to say of Anheuser-Busch brewery, "We are now passing the largest brewery in the world," and that some wag invariably called out, "Why are we passing it?"

The grand tour doesn't. It stops there and passengers get free literature, a view of the 70 blocks and 95 acres of plant, and the equipment that puts out 4,500,000 bottles of beer a day. They also get a bottle of beer and pretzels.

Our group rode the escalators and climbed stairs for a view of the bottling plant and lined the balcony rails to take in the magnitude of the machine world.

"Purtiest sight I ever did see," one man sighed.

DURING our stop, we questioned some of the other passengers as to their reactions to St. Louis.

Mrs. Augusta Harms of Baltimore who works for Calvert distilleries was interested in the Busch plant. Mr. and Mrs. Willard Gold of Ford City, Pa., were here because he had been stationed around St. Louis during the war and wanted to see how much things had changed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schlueter of Caruthersville, Ind., "just came down on a shopping tour and decided to take the afternoon off and see the city." Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carire of Harrisburg, Pa., were interested in Shaw's Garden.

This was our next scheduled stop. On the way we passed Concordia Turner Hall (where the German soldiers who joined up with the Union Army were trained before the Civil War), Benton Park and lotus flowers in the lake, through the German area where the driver pointed out shining scrubbed front steps, past Missouri School for the Blind, Tower Grove park, to the botanical gardens.

"Isn't it lovely?" said one woman. "Such beautiful trees. But there are beautiful trees all over St. Louis."

From the garden, we went over Kingshighway (once the King's High Road, built for the King of Spain), past the fringe of the Italian area "affectionately termed "The Hill" (home of Yogi Berra and Joe Garagiola), past the Fouke Fur Co. (St. Louis is the fur center of the United States), on to 1400-acre Forest Park, "big even for Texans." The ohs and ahs for the park, the Jewel Box, and the scenery we take for granted would have warmed the least enthusiastic native.

The tour makes a brief stop at Jefferson Memorial, where the Lindbergh trophies interest tourists, and at the Zoo. The Zoo stop is never long enough for the children and those who want to see the daily chimpanzee or elephant shows usually make plans to return another day if time permits.

OTHER special attractions for visitors include a baseball game and a Municipal Opera performance. A spokesman for the Cardinals estimates that more than 50 per cent of the crowd at Sunday games comes from out of town, week days about 40 per cent. The Municipal Opera estimates that 25 per cent of its audiences, or about 175,000 to 200,000 persons a summer, come from out of town.

According to Captain Joseph Streckfus, president of Streckfus Steamers, about 25 per cent of the Steamer Admiral's patronage comes from outside the St. Louis area. Chartered busses have brought groups from Kansas City, Indianapolis, Little Rock, and Terre Haute this season, and a recent check of license plates on cars on the dock found a total of 24 states represented.

History-minded visitors often are interested in spending time at the Missouri Historical Society at Jefferson Memorial, at the Campbell House, sole surviving mansion of Lucas place with its original furnishings of the 1850s, or Cherokee Cave at 3400 South Broadway, with its 1000-year-old Damascus palace and pre-historic skeletons.

The Art Museum is visited by tourists as well as local residents during its summer exhibit, and Monday night lectures. Persons with special interests also seek out the Academy of Science Museum, 4642 Lindell blvd., the Museum of Transport on Barratt Station road, the universities, the churches, the hospitals that make up our great medical center.

Sports-minded visitors often plan their St. Louis vacation trip to include the Lake of the Ozarks or other fishing resorts.

ONE point which arouses curiosity and inquiry has never been properly exploited as a tourist attraction and that is the actual meeting of the rivers Missouri and Mississippi. Closest visitors can come to it is the Carl Milles statuary in front of Union Station depicting the confluence. But this, too, has appeal to visitors as do such other taken-for-granted-by-natives spots as Memorial Plaza, and the sunken garden just behind Central Public Library.

"Why do people go to Europe," asked the man from San Jose, "before they've seen all there is to see in this country?"

The same might be said to many St. Louisans of seeing the rest of the country when they've never seen St. Louis.

Japanese Team Sets Record for 400-Meter Swim

U.S. Squad Trails by 8 Points

TOKYO, Aug. 6 (AP)—Japanese swimmers bettered the world record in the 400-meter relay tonight, beating the United States in the second night of the United States-Japan championships.

The United States team, finishing one length back, also bettered the old world record.

The Japanese quartet stroked the eight lap event in 3:46.8, topping the old mark of 3:47.9 set by Yale University in 1951. The American team was clocked in 3:47.6.

The victory wound up the second night of competition and gave Japan an imposing 30 to 22 lead in team scoring in the three-day event.

The old relay mark was set over a 25-meter pool. Tonight's record came in the Meiji Shrine 50-meter pool.

The Japanese won three of the five events on the second day's program which produced new meet records in the 100 meter backstroke and the 200-meter butterfly events.

Betters Meet Record.

The predominantly Japanese crowd roared approval as world record holder Yoshi Oyakawa, a Hawaiian Nisei, was given a gold cup for his backstroke victory in 1.05.9. It bettered the meet record of 1:07.2 set in 1950 by Jim Thomas of the United States.

Oyakawa did in the hard way, coming on with a burst of speed in the final 30 meters to overtake Ohio State's Al Wiggins and Japan's Keiji Hase, who wound up second and third.

Ford Konno of the Hawaii Swim Club won, as expected, in the 400-meter free style, but only after a tough race. He had to spurt on the gun lap to overtake Japan's Tsukasa Ohno. The time was an unspectacular 4:35.6.

The race provided a big surprise, however, when Ohno and teammate Yuki Sjohi, both young university students, nailed down second and third places to blank Hawaii's Bill Woolsey. The finish gave Japan a stand-off in points, 3-3.

The Americans pulled an upset of their own in the 200-meter butterfly with George Harrison, a 16-year-old newcomer from Orinda, Calif.; and Bill Yorzyk of the New Haven Swim Club clinching second and third.

Harper Diving Winner.

Takashi Ishimoto, another swimmer from Nihon University, surprised with a victory in 2:29.5, a new meet record. To gain his cup, he had to outdistance teammate Jiro Nagasawa, the world record holder, who came fast at the end, but out of the money.

Don Harper of Ohio State, the National A.A.U. springboard champion, took the high board from Japan's Yutaka Baba.

Tomorrow's events include the 800-meter and 100-meter free-style races, the 100-meter butterfly, the 200-meter backstroke and the 80-meter relay.

Council Flying High in Ducks Recommendation

CONSERVATION experts in the 14 states in the Mississippi flyway expect a bumper crop of wild ducks this fall. That became evident last week when the Mississippi Flyway Council decided what it would seek from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service in the way of a hunting season and bag limits.

The council wants a 60-day season—five days more than last year—and a daily bag limit of seven ducks, with a possession limit of 14.

Although the council stipulated that the seven-bird daily bag limit should include two pintails, its recommendation still represents a considerable increase over last year's limit of four.

Even if a hunter this year should fail to bag a pintail (sprig), he would still be permitted, under the council's plan, to take five ducks daily, or have 10 in possession. Most ducks bagged in the Mississippi flyway are mallards, with pintails second.

If the council's recommendation is adopted, a sportsman could bring home 14 ducks on a two-day trip this fall, provided he included four pintails in his bag. Last year, he could possess no more than eight ducks of all species.

State Officials Optimistic.

Many of the state conservation officials who attended last week's meeting at the Statler Hotel here were optimistic that the Fish and Wildlife Service would liberalize, at least to some extent, the hunting rules for the Mississippi flyway.

Whether the federal agency will go along with the council's recommendations is a question, however. The desires of all flyway councils, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be presented to the Fish and Wildlife Service tomorrow and Tuesday in Washington.

Some time later this month, the officials rules will be announced.

Since an increase in ducks has been reported for each of the last three years, conservation officials of states in the Mississippi flyway, which includes Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas, feel that an extended season and increased bag limit are justified this year.

The latest report is that the number of nesting ducks in the Canadian provinces that supply the United States with birds is 9.1 per cent greater than last year.

"Hunting regulations should be closely tied in with the supply of ducks," one state official told Outdoors. "If there are more birds, liberalize the rules. If less, then tighten them."

Anti-Depradation Move.

The theory behind giving a bonus of two pintails daily to Mississippi flyway hunters is to help reduce depradation caused by ducks of this species on the West Coast. Some of the pintails that use the Mississippi flyway eventually find their way over to the Pacific coast, it was said.

The Mississippi Flyway Council rejected a proposal by the Fish and Wildlife Service which would give states, especially those with zoning difficulties, an option on determining the length of the wildfowl season.

Under a formula suggested by federal officials, a state could have a longer or shorter season than that fixed by the Government agency. If a shorter season were chosen, the bag limit would be increased for the particular state. On the other hand, an extension of the season—one method of eliminating zoning problems—would mean a reduction in the bag limit.

The council said that, for this season at least, it did not wish to adopt the federal agency's proposal.

However, the council did recommend that the seasons for the various states in the flyway be set between Oct. 1 and Jan. 20, and that any state should be allowed to have a split season without a penalty on length.

I. T. Bode, director of the Missouri Conservation Commission, said he would seek special hunting dates for the Bootheel area in Southeast Missouri.

Because of certain environmental factors, ducks move into this section much later than other parts of Missouri, usually after the season ends.

If the season is extended on a state-wide basis this year, Missouri will tack the extra days to the end instead of the beginning of the shooting period.

Other recommendations made by the Mississippi Flyway Council for this year's hunting season include: Fixing of daily hunting hours at one-half hour before sunrise until one-half hour before sunset, instead of one-half hour before sunrise to one hour before sunset, as last year; permitting one wood duck in the daily bag, and retaining the rule pertaining to motorboat shooting.

Chance to Voice Views.

A meeting at which all St. Louis county sportsmen will be invited to express their views on fish and game regulations for the forthcoming seasons will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at the county courthouse in Clayton, in the jury assembly room on the second floor.

The public meeting has been called by Dennis Connor, state conservation agent for the county. He said: "I shall point out the present wildlife situation, as we know it, and hope that interested parties will make suggestions on regulations, which I can report to our commissioners."

Similar meetings, presided over by conservation agents, will be held as follows: Thursday at Hillsboro, Jefferson county; Aug. 19 in Franklin county, place to be announced later; Aug. 16 at St. Charles courthouse, St. Charles county.

Lions to Sponsor Grid Clinic Here For Teen-Agers

The Detroit Lions will hold a football clinic for St. Louis-area high school teams two days before their Sunday night, Aug. 28 benefit game with the Chicago Cardinals, it was announced last night.

Joseph F. Dwyer, chairman of the pro football exihibition to be played for funds to be used in connection with the Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital, said the Lions would hold their clinic for teen-age players at Washington University's Francis Field, Friday, Aug. 26. More than 50 teams and coaches will be invited.

The Lions, Western Division champions the last three years and national titleholders in 1952-53, will break camp at Ypsilanti, Mich., and play two earlier exhibition games before arriving here in time for a heavy workout in connection with the clinic.

Dwyer, assisted by Joseph F. Holloran and Edward G. Marsh, game co-chairmen, and by two veteran coaches, Carl Snavely of Washington U. and Dukes Duford, formerly of St. Louis U., said the Chicago Cardinals might arrive from their Lake Forest (Ill.) camp in time for the demonstration.

Although Coach Buddy Parker of Detroit and Ray Richards, new Chicago mentor, expressed greatest interest in rookie players at this time, Parker told Dwyer that Paul Christman, who handles the Lions' quarterbacks during the training season, had been working with Harry Gilmer, a seven-year professional veteran with the Washington Redskins. Gilmer was obtained to understudy Bobby Layne at Detroit and receive instruction on offense from Christman, former Missouri U. All-America and Chicago Cardinal ace.

The ticket chairman for the benefit exhibition, E. L. Kaiser, added Joe Lenneman as a new member to his committee and reported progress for the contest that will be played at Public Schools Stadium.

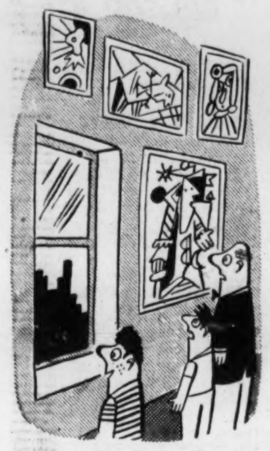
At Paris Exhibition

Two Small Boys Get A Load of Picasso

By Art Buchwald

PARIS.

THEY say it's easier for children than for adults to understand Picasso's paintings. On a hunch we took two children with us when we went to see 50 years of Picasso Exhibition which is being held at the Louvre this summer.



The youngsters rounded up from friends were Michael Barry, aged 7, who isn't sure whether he wants to be an artist or a policeman when he grows up, and Christopher Torem, aged 4½, who finger paints at home when he isn't riding a mean bicycle down the Rue Marbeuf.

Both Christopher and Michael were quite excited about going to an art exhibition particularly since they didn't know what an art exhibition was. When they discovered that they were required to look at paintings the elation wore off immediately.

On entering the first room of the exhibition which featured paintings of Picasso's blue period, both children showed some interest. But as we moved into the cubist period, things started to get confused.

● "WHAT DO YOU LIKE BEST in this room?" we asked Christopher.

"The window," he said. "Let's go outside and play."

Michael was studying one of the cubist village scenes. "What is it?" he asked.

"It's a bunch of houses." Christopher said, "Let's do something else."

We stopped in front of another cubist painting. "Michael, what is that?"

"I can't see it very well."

Christopher, who was hopping on one foot, said "It's a girl with a guitar." Which it was.

Michael looked at a large surrealistic painting titled "Woman in a Shirt on a Couch." "What is it, a jigsaw puzzle?"

"Look carefully. What do you see?"

Michael looked carefully. "I see a fat woman and a couch."

Only then did we realize Michael had caught on to the game and was reading the titles next to the pictures. Christopher couldn't read, so he was our only hope.

"What do you see there?" we asked him in front of a "Portrait of a Young Girl" painted in Avignon in 1914 and described in the catalogue as Cubisme rococo.

● "I SEE A LADY, but I don't know what she's doing," Christopher replied.

"Neither do I," said Michael. "I don't even see the lady."

"Let's have a Coca Cola," suggested Christopher.

We stopped at another painting of a still life.

"Could you paint that?" we asked Christopher.

"No," he said, hopping on his other foot.

"Why not?" we asked him.

"Because I don't have any purple paint at home."

Michael had gone on and up ahead we found him staring at a picture titled "Nude Woman on a Couch."

"I really don't get it," he said. "I really don't get it. She's all mixed up. Her head looks like it's split in two."

"It's a lady sitting on something," said Christopher. "Gee whiz, let's do something else."

The paintings became more complicated as we continued. Christopher was now holding his throat and complaining he needed a Coke desperately. Michael had become very quiet and even a little angry.

● WHEN HE CAME to three paintings of women whose eyes were not exactly lined up and who had two noses and two mouths each he said, "Why did he do that?"

We said Picasso was trying to show the side of the face and the front at the same time. This did not satisfy him.

"That's funny," said Michael, "that's real funny. I never heard of having eyes like that."

"I like it," said Christopher, "because she's got a blue face and yellow fingernails. I like blue faces."

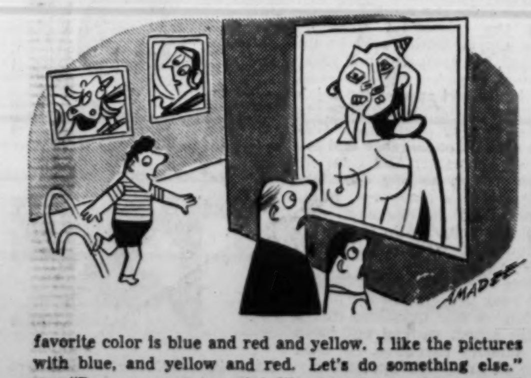
"I don't like green faces," said Michael. "That woman there looks sick."

"She looks like an alligator," said Christopher. "Come on, let's do something else."

In the last room of the collection there were seats and we all sat down to discuss the exhibition.

"You know why they put the names next to the paintings?" Michael said, still mad. "It's because if you don't understand it you can read what it is. That's why."

"I wish there were more cows," said Christopher. "I like the cows and the horses, but mostly the cows. My favorite color is blue and red and yellow. I like the pictures with blue, and yellow and red. Let's do something else."



"Do you want to paint like Mr. Picasso?" we asked Michael.

"I don't want to paint at all," he said, "if you have to paint people the wrong way."

"Would you like to paint like Mr. Picasso?" we asked Christopher.

"Yes, I'd like to paint cows like that."

"Do you have any objection to where Mr. Picasso puts people's eyes or noses?"

"No," he said, "only I like blue faces. Let's go have a Coke'"

"Let's go to the movies," suggested Michael.

We left the museum with Christopher running up ahead of us while Michael walked beside us still mad and leaning more and more towards wanting to be a policeman.

This May Be a Surprise to Some Hometowners, But Thousands of People Who Come Here Every Vacation Find Varied Sights Stimulating

By Clarissa Start

"I'VE been through St. Louis on the train lots of times," said the man from San Jose, Calif. "Thought this trip I'd stop off and see it. People tell you there's nothing to see in your town but I've been very much impressed. This, for instance, is beautiful, simply beautiful." He paused and mopped his brow. "Just don't see how it can rain and still stay hot."

The man from San Jose, S. W. McCarley, of the Southern Pacific Lines, was emerging from the orchid greenhouse at Shaw's Garden as he spoke. He and his wife were among the full house aboard the Gray Line afternoon grand tour of the city, some of the many thousands of out-of-town visitors who tour the points of interest of our city throughout the year.

While St. Louisans flee to Oregon and Texas, sightsee in Boston and Philadelphia, visitors from Oregon and Texas, Boston and Philadelphia, vacation in St. Louis and find the prospect not at all unpleasing.

It is perhaps our greatest native failing that the average born-and-bred resident of St. Louis finds is incredible that anyone would find anything fascinating to see here. But they do. And some of them, like McCarley, feel we should abandon some of our overweening modesty and civic deprecation and do a little more boasting—Texas and California style.

WHAT are the big attractions visitors want to see when they come to St. Louis? Gray Line Tours recently reported that the three most asked about are the Anheuser-Busch Brewery, the Zoo, and the Lindbergh trophies at Jefferson Memorial.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, which screens requests from many would-be sightseers, reports that there are more than a dozen categories which are regulars in their correspondence files. These include, in no special order of importance:

Art Museum
Municipal Opera
Steamer Admiral
Forest Park
Zoo
Cardinals
Old Court House and Cathedral
Jefferson Memorial
Jewel Box
Eugene Field home
Campbell house
Forest Park Highlands
Shaw's Garden
Golden Rod Showboat and boats other than the Admiral
Cherokee Cave
Cinerama

Visitors who come in large groups or attend conventions are most likely to be interested in industrial tours, such as the trip through the Anheuser-Busch brewery, which is visited by 70,000 to 100,000 people a year. During the summer months, conventions sometimes include another sample of Busch hospitality, an evening at Grant's Farm.

This year the Chamber of Commerce, through its Visit St. Louis office, is sponsoring a special offer to out-of-town week-end visitors. This is called "St. Louis Holiday," which, for $7, provides tickets to the Municipal Opera, a trip on the Admiral, a Gray Line Tour, and "Cinerama Holiday." On Sundays when the Cardinals are in town, a ball game replaces the tour.

Advertised in out-of-town papers within a radius of 250 miles, the weekend holiday is proving popular, according to Haig Toroian of the Chamber of Commerce.

APPROXIMATELY 15,000 people each year get a capsule version of St. Louis sights via The Gray Line Tours. There are two of these a day, a two-hour tour each morning and a three-and-a-half-hour grand tour each afternoon, which includes a comprehensive survey of the city's architecture, foreign flavor, industrial and residential area from the riverfront to Clayton. It is a tour which leaves most visitors pleasantly surprised.

"It happens over and over again," says Dan Meyer, manager of Transit Service Corp. which operated The Gray Line here. "People tell us that they considered St. Louis a big country town, that they never realized it was such a beautiful city and had so many attractions until they took our tour."

Meyer's letter file bears out the enjoyment of the average tourist, and also provides an interesting cross-section of reaction. There is a childishly scrawled letter of comments from every child in the Dorsey School, Dorsey, Ill. Sample: "Thank you for taking us to the Zoo. What I liked best of all was the little black bear."

A man from a town in Iowa known for a certain product, showed concrete appreciation by sending some of the product—five rings of bologna sausage.

Several years ago a boy from the West coast and a girl from the East coast purchased tickets at Union Station for the grand tour. somewhere between the Old Court House and the bear pits, romance flourished, and the couple came back the next year on their honeymoon with a promise to return each anniversary.

In five years, Meyer can recall only four complaints from sightseers. One was from a man who disapproved of the attention paid the Old Cathedral. Another was from a member of the W.C.T.U. who wrote that the time spent at the brewery stop could better be spent in church.

The tour we took seemed to make everybody happy and although it was a middle of the week, muggy day, every seat was taken in the glass-topped air-conditioned luxury bus. We boarded it at the second stop, at Hotel Jefferson; the bus also takes on passengers at Union Station and Hotel Statler.

Bill Beck, our driver, spoke into a microphone extending over the steering wheel; in a smooth, mellow voice he delivered an impressive flow of statistics, history and occasional wisecracks while managing the intricacies of no-left-turn traffic. In the downtown area he pointed out the Union Electric Building (birthplace of the American Legion), the Post-Dispatch, Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney (established in 1850), the Frisco lines home office, the old Federal Building, Jaccard's Jewelry Co., and various other stores and businesses. First spontaneous reaction came at the sight of the Stix-Baer-Fuller parking garage.

"Isn't that wonderful?" a woman passenger marveled.

"THE enjoyment of the tour depends on how comfortable you are, so make yourself comfortable," Beck advised passengers. "Take your shoes off if you like. I'm not going to guarantee getting them back on."

"St. Louis is the ninth largest city in the United States," he announced as we rolled down to the riverfront. "It is one of the few major cities that does not count its suburban population. Population within the city limits is slightly over 900,000. Counting the suburbs there are over a million and a half people. It is the leading industrial center of the South and the third largest industrial center in the United States."

The Rev. R. H. Toole, retired Methodist minister from Indiana, who was stopping over with his wife and cowboy-clad son on their way back from El Paso, Tex., leaned across the aisle.

"How many bridges span the Mississippi at St. Louis?" he asked us.

With typical native ignorance, we looked blank. Was it three or four?

"We are now approaching two of the eight bridges which span the Mississippi river," Beck advised us. "The river is at its narrowest here except for its source. Across the river is East St. Louis, population 90,000, largest mule trading center in the United States. Ahead is the Admiral, finest riverboat afloat recently made famous on Cinerama. Next is the Golden Rod, one of the only two river showboats still in operation. This structure to the right is the old Rock House, oldest standing structure on the banks of the Mississippi, built in 1767."

Our seatmate was Mrs. J. N. Watson, of the suburb of St. Johns, who told us she had lived here all her life but had never seen the historic sights. When the Rock House information was given, she nudged us and whispered, "See what I mean?"

Beck explained the proposed riverfront park, the existing parking lot, the Old Cathedral, Courthouse and Dred Scott case, the new inter-regional highway, the Merchants Exchange and the drug and chemical companies on Fourth street. He called attention to still existing examples of French architecture in this area, wrought iron balconies and open courtyards, to Soulard open market, the Welsh baby carriage company (largest in the world) and St. Peter and Paul's church, one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in this country.

There is an old story to the effect that sightseeing drivers used to say of Anheuser-Busch brewery, "We are now passing the largest brewery in the world," and that some wag invariably called out, "Why are we passing it?"

The grand tour doesn't. It stops there and passengers get free literature, a view of the 70 blocks and 95 acres of plant, and the equipment that puts out 4,500,000 bottles of beer a day. They also get a bottle of beer and pretzels.

Our group rode the escalators and climbed stairs for a view of the bottling plant and lined the balcony rails to take in the magnitude of the machine world.

"Purtiest sight I ever did see," one man sighed.

DURING our stop, we questioned some of the other passengers as to their reactions to St. Louis.

Mrs. Augusta Harms of Baltimore who works for Calvert distilleries was interested in the Busch plant. Mr. and Mrs. Willard Gold of Ford City, Pa., were here because he had been stationed around St. Louis during the war and wanted to see how much things had changed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schlueter of Caruthersville, Ind., "just came down on a shopping tour and decided to take the afternoon off and see the city." Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carire of Harrisburg, Pa., were interested in Shaw's Garden.

This was our next scheduled stop. On the way we passed Concordia Turner Hall (where the German soldiers who joined up with the Union Army were trained before the Civil War), Benton Park and lotus flowers in the lake, through the German area where the driver pointed out shining scrubbed front steps, past Missouri School for the Blind, Tower Grove park, to the botanical gardens.

"Isn't it lovely?" said one woman. "Such beautiful trees. But there are beautiful trees all over St. Louis."

From the garden, we went over Kingshighway (once the King's High Road, built for the King of Spain), past the fringe of the Italian area "affectionately termed "The Hill" (home of Yogi Berra and Joe Garagiola), past the Fouke Fur Co. (St. Louis is the fur center of the United States), on to 1400-acre Forest Park, "big even for Texans." The ohs and ahs for the park, the Jewel Box, and the scenery we take for granted would have warmed the least enthusiastic native.

The tour makes a brief stop at Jefferson Memorial, where the Lindbergh trophies interest tourists, and at the Zoo. The Zoo stop is never long enough for the children and those who want to see the daily chimpanzee or elephant shows usually make plans to return another day if time permits.

OTHER special attractions for visitors include a baseball game and a Municipal Opera performance. A spokesman for the Cardinals estimates that more than 50 per cent of the crowd at Sunday games comes from out of town, week days about 40 per cent. The Municipal Opera estimates that 25 per cent of its audiences, or about 175,000 to 200,000 persons a summer, come from out of town.

According to Captain Joseph Streckfus, president of Streckfus Steamers, about 25 per cent of the Steamer Admiral's patronage comes from outside the St. Louis area. Chartered busses have brought groups from Kansas City, Indianapolis, Little Rock, and Terre Haute this season, and a recent check of license plates on cars on the dock found a total of 24 states represented.

History-minded visitors often are interested in spending time at the Missouri Historical Society at Jefferson Memorial, at the Campbell House, sole surviving mansion of Lucas place with its original furnishings of the 1850s, or Cherokee Cave at 3400 South Broadway, with its 1000-year-old Damascus palace and pre-historic skeletons.

The Art Museum is visited by tourists as well as local residents during its summer exhibit, and Monday night lectures. Persons with special interests also seek out the Academy of Science Museum, 4642 Lindell blvd., the Museum of Transport on Barratt Station road, the universities, the churches, the hospitals that make up our great medical center.

Sports-minded visitors often plan their St. Louis vacation trip to include the Lake of the Ozarks or other fishing resorts.

ONE point which arouses curiosity and inquiry has never been properly exploited as a tourist attraction and that is the actual meeting of the rivers Missouri and Mississippi. Closest visitors can come to it is the Carl Milles statuary in front of Union Station depicting the confluence. But this, too, has appeal to visitors as do such other taken-for-granted-by-natives spots as Memorial Plaza, and the sunken garden just behind Central Public Library.

"Why do people go to Europe," asked the man from San Jose, "before they've seen all there is to see in this country?"

The same might be said to many St. Louisans of seeing the rest of the country when they've never seen St. Louis.

Mortal Agony After Hiroshima A-Bomb

By Dickson Terry

TEN years ago yesterday, at 8 o'clock in the morning, the drone of a B-29 was heard over Hiroshima, a Japanese manufacturing city of 344,000 people which had never been bombed and which knew the horrors of war only from the firing at Kural Naval Base, 20 miles away.

Curious citizens who happened to be outside looked up at the plane and saw what they thought was a parachute. At that instant there came a blinding flash of light and in a fraction of a second Hiroshima was bathed in a radioactive flame as hot as the center of the sun.

Official counts made soon after showed that the bomb had killed 78,150 persons and injured 37,425. Another 12,083 were listed simply as missing. No trace of them could be found.

Today there are in Hiroshima some 100,000 persons who survived that awful blast. Among them was Dr. Michihiko Hachiya, director of the Hiroshima Communications Hospital. Although seriously injured and burned, Dr. Hachiya made his way from his devastated home to the hospital where, after a short period of recovery, he started ministering to others.

● AT THE SAME TIME he kept a diary, writing on such scraps of paper as he could find. It covers the period from the moment the bomb fell until the arrival, two months later, of American occupation forces. The diary has been translated into English, published by the University of North Carolina Press, and is the first book-length, eye-witness account of this period of mortal agony. Coming as it does on the tenth anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima, it serves as a terrible reminder to a world which is becoming increasingly concerned with the human implications of atomic warfare.

The morning was still, warm and beautiful when Dr. Hachiya, trying to rest after a night's duty as air raid warden, was started by a flash of light—and then another. His first thought was to reach his hospital. Bleeding profusely from several deep wounds, he fought his way through the streets. He tripped over something and fell sprawling. He discovered he had tripped over a man's head. In his hysteria he cried, 'Excuse me! Excuse me please!" This was the doctor's introduction to a series of days and nights filled with sights and sounds he will never forget.

● "THERE WERE the shadowy forms of people, some of whom looked like walking ghosts. Others moved as though in pain, like scarecrows, their arms held out from their bodies, with forearms and hands dangling." He soon discovered they were so horribly burned they couldn't stand the painful friction of raw surfaces rubbing together.

But this was comparatively mild in the light of things the doctor was to see and hear from other eye witnesses during the days that followed. The long lines of people, moving like ants, not knowing where they were going, their faces and hands burned and swollen and "great sheets of skin peeled away from their tissues to hang down like rags on a scarecrow." . . . The thousands of dead who had rushed to the river, "and a few live people still in the water knocking against the dead as they floated down the river." . . . The sight of the soldiers who had no faces. Their eyes, noses and mouth had been burned away and it looked like their ears had melted.

"Parents, half crazy with grief, searched for their children. Husbands looked for their wives, and children for their parents. One poor woman, insane with anxiety, walked aimlessly here and there, calling her child's name."

● ONE OF THE MANY tragic stories in the book, told to Dr. Hachiya by a friend, concerned four small boys whom the friend found sitting huddled in a circle beside a road. They were badly burned, desperately ill and forlorn. The man asked one where his home was. He replied that this had been his home, "and asked that if I should encounter his mother or sister would I tell them not to waste time looking for him or his companions, because they were all going to die. The others nodded in agreement. The lot of the boys was all the more tragic because nothing could be done for them, and so there they sat, in the hot dust and rubble."

One of the boys asked the man if he could make some shade for them. He borrowed a few straw mats and sheets of iron and made a crude shelter. The man had some tomatoes for his lunch. He cut them and squeezed juice into the boys' mouths. They could hardly swallow, but they mumbled "oishii"—delicious.

The man left them with the promise he would try to find aid. But search as he might, he couldn't find a first-aid squad. "All night the thought of those poor little boys was on my mind. Then I left home next morning I took some things I thought might add to their comfort, and searched until I found them. I found them all right, but they were dead, huddled in the same small circle as I had left them the night before."

It is interesting to note that not until six days later did the survivors know that the bomb was an atom bomb. They had called it the "pika don." Pika means brilliant flash, don means terrific explosion. And the days that followed they called "kurushii." Which means mortal agony.

RECREATION FOR CHILDREN

Ideas for Keeping Small Fry Occupied During Summer's 'Dog Days'

DECEMBER IN JULY . . . MAKING CHRISTMAS WRAPPING PAPER AT THE HOME OF MRS. WILLIAM N. FRASER, 218 OAKWOOD AVENUE, WEBSTER GROVES. WORKING UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THEIR MOTHER ARE, FROM LEFT, ANN, 10; JEAN, 11, AND LAURIE, 7.

By Mary Kimbrough

JUST as surely as the return of Christmas, Halloween and the swallows to Capistrano, there comes to the American calendar a time when mothers, with one giant sigh toward the heavens, give thanks that the opening of school isn't too far distant, and may their weary nerves hold out just a little longer, please.

Unless our memory of the maternal sigh in our own childhood home betrays us, and unless we misread the harried looks on parental brows around the office, that time is at hand. Dog days, we called them down in Oklahoma. Hot, steamy, the neighbor's child away visiting Grandma, the family's own vacation already past, swimming pool closed for cleaning, sidewalk too sizzling to play hopscotch, the latest Bobbsey Twins book re-read for the seventh time, and, what can we do now, Mother? Even the dog was too lazy to chase the cat.

So, as our contribution to healthier nerves among American mothers, we hereby offer some ideas to help make the late summer days pass more quickly. We found them in an afternoon's visit with Mrs. William N. Fraser, of 218 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves, who has made a hobby of recreation for children, successfully trying out her ideas on three busy and happy daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, Jean, 11, Ann, 10, and Laurie, 7, live in a cool, tree-shaded house which looks as though the welcome mat had been built right in along with the chimney and the windows. It was a hot, sultry afternoon, but it was no day for boredom. While their mother displayed some of the summer projects they had already completed, the three young Frasers were upstairs, busy with another summertime activity.

Tours, crafts, nature study, reading and games are recommended by Mrs. Fraser for vacation time. But projects must be thoroughly planned, and the parents can—and should—enjoy the planning and participation as much as the youngsters.

These are some of the principles which guide the projects she plans:

1. Take advantage of the community resources — museums, galleries, libraries, points of historical interest.

2. Use materials you find at home, leaves from the backyard trees, kitchen utensils for special crafts.

3. Make craft articles that can be used. Avoid "busy work."

4. Don't ask a child to do something in the way of crafts that you yourself think is silly.

IN the Fraser household, the three children already have made or decorated many of their Christmas gifts, as well as the paper to wrap them in. Preparing for Christmas in July is one of Mrs. Fraser's family projects. In addition to easing the last-minute strain and frazzled Christmas Eve nerves, it fills up quite a few empty afternoons during school vacation with a worthwhile activity.

The gifts are simple ones, well within the scope of even young children. There is a suede brush, gaily decorated in red and white poster paint, with the recipient's name written in paint. There is a wooden stamp box, covered with dozens of stamps and shellacked for a smooth, shiny finish. There is a copper cowbell—such as many families now use to summon the youngsters to dinner—bearing a painted figure of a little girl.

The Christmas paper, made from white shelf paper and brown wrapping paper, has been given an attractive modern motif with such everyday articles as a potato masher and a wooden block bearing a striped design. The potato masher and the block were first coated with poster paint which had been transferred to the paper in rhythmic pattern.

Mrs. Fraser, a part-time teacher of art at The Principia Lower School and assistant secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association Board of Directors, believes that all recreational activity should be a learning and growing process. Otherwise, much of its value is lost in meaningless "busy work."

That has been the philosophy back of her copyrighted manual, "Treasure Hunt," which sends groups of children, accompanied by adults, to places of interest in the community in search of a "treasure." The treasure may be a book by a certain author, or some special knowledge that will enrich the child's day. It may be something to be learned, not an object to be acquired.

After a visit to the Eugene Field House, for instance, a child may be directed to the nearest Public Library to find something written by Field.

Mrs. Fraser recommends reading as a summer activity but she believes it should be meaningful, not just helter-skelter. It should be a pleasure and not a check-off of required reading.

"A child can lose from one to two years of reading skill in a single summer," said Mrs. Fraser, "if he loses all contact with books. Of course, he picks up that skill again in the fall, but if he had been reading during the vacation period, he would be that much further ahead."

IN addition to wholesome reading and tours of sites of interest—which she believes the entire family should take together—Mrs. Fraser also suggests nature study and crafts as means of entertaining youngsters during the summer months.

"Children love to make scrapbooks and that helps them learn," she said. "Let them sit down with magazines and find pictures of various objects which interest them.

"Many parents don't appreciate the value of collecting things. Children can start stamp collections, and can be encouraged to learn the stories behind the stamps, the biographies of the individuals or the history of the countries they come from.

"Trees and birds offer wonderful source material for study. Let the children collect leaves and learn something about the trees, and about the birds that are right in their own backyard."

ANOTHER suggestion, this one especially for the youngest member of the family, is to buy a tiny metal skillet and cover it with glossy white enamel. When it dries, the child can paint on it with poster paint which can be washed off and the skillet used again and again.

"Do as many things as possible in groups," she said. "One idea is to make a number of cookies, cut in various shapes, and place a bowl of powdered sugar icing before each child seated around the table. Each bowl of icing is a different color. As the cookie is passed around, each child dips it into the bowl of icing before him, and vari-colored designs are the result.

Exuberant, energetic and never bored herself, Mrs. Fraser is convinced there are no "really bored children, only stranded children" whose parents won't take the trouble to direct their play.

"Parents too often fail to realize how important that direction is," she said. "Creative activity builds responsible people because they are interested in what's going on around them and they're observant.

"A youngster who has become interested in nature by studying birds or leaves may find a new career field as a botanist. But even if he doesn't, you know that he'll never be the type of adult who will start a forest fire."

Signs Show That Summer Is on the Wane

By Leonard Hall

ONCE July is over and we turn the corner into August, there are signs by which we know that summer is on the wane. The first goldenrod begins to bloom along the roadsides, and in the corners of old barn lots we see the ragged flowers of Joe Pye weed, boneset and white snakeroot. On the yellow buckthorn, berries turn red, and the elderberry starts to ripen. Although it is a long time until the southward migration starts, many of the more gregarious birds gather in flocks: cowbirds and grackles, meadow larks and robins, and red-winged blackbirds. The sunny hours are still filled with the ringing whistle of bobwhite, though I suspect the nesting season is over except for a few persistent pairs whose early clutches of eggs were destroyed.

OUT IN THE FIELDS THERE ARE MANY THINGS WHICH DIRECT THE FARMER'S THOUGHT TOWARD AUTUMN.

OUT IN THE FIELDS there are many things which point the farmer's thoughts toward autumn. Small grain has been harvested and the few farms which still thresh their crop are about finished. Haying is almost over, with only a last cutting of alfalfa and perhaps the Korean lespedeza to go into the barns. Corn is long since laid by and now the ears are well-formed and the silks starting to dry. Early plantings are pretty well "made" from the summer rains and another shower or two will guarantee a good harvest from even the late corn. Silos are being filled, though this season we decided against putting up silage. In a beef cattle operation it is, after all, just another way of making hay and we find we can put up our hay crop at less expense and feed it out with a lot less labor during the winter months.

There's another sign of autumn. Our little helper, Ricky, left us last week to fly to California with his family and I expect we won't see him again until next summer, since our lecture trip this winter takes us to the Southeast and the West Indies. The farm seems strangely silent without his young voice calling to us or Mike and Tiger or Peggy, Junior, the dairy calf. The rope swing in the maple tree hangs still until a breeze stirs it, the checker board where we played our game each evening before supper is idle, and no Davy Crockett shirts or small blue jeans decorate the clothes line in the yard. Certainly a farm in summer needs a small boy to make it complete.

THERE ARE OTHER SIGNS of autumn harvest, too. Roasting ears have passed their prime and now we're hoping for a good rain to bring in a late planting of Golden Bantam. Tomatoes ripen at the rate of a bushel or more a day, faster than we can handle them and bigger than any we've seen since coming to Possum Trot. Much of the garden is finished, but there are still squash, okra, green peppers and cucumbers by the basket, not to mention three rows of big potatoes that need digging and several sacks of onions to harvest.

INEVITABLY, when you live on the farm, things happen which give real meaning to the word "neighbors." Three weeks ago our man Matt went to the hospital with a painful case of sciatic rheumatism and we'd have been in a bad way without the folks who live up and down our road. On Friday when we go to the city for our TV program, Harry and Ethel Russell come take care of Mike and Tiger and Veronica and Peggy, the dairy cow, and the young bulls which we're readying for the Farmington sale in October. Ern Stricklin and Lovell Hatridge drop by early, before their day's work starts, to see whether any emergencies have come up with the cattle. And last week when I drove back long after midnight so as to finish up a job of haying on Saturday, they said, "Why, you didn't have to do that. We'd have gone right ahead and gotten in the hay."

This combination of independence with inter-dependence is one of the things which makes country living worthwhile and, with all the goodwill in the world, exists in cities only on an impersonal basis.

Modern Marriage

Duties of Counselor

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

MANY unhappy couples, whose marriages could be saved by the help of competent marriage counselors, drift apart because they have no idea of how much assistance is theirs for the asking. What does a marriage counselor do? Mrs. N. thinks she could use the help of one, but her husband refuses.

"I'm not going to have somebody tell me I'm crazy," he informs her. She asks if I can give her a picture of how these trained people operate.

They do whatever seems to be necessary to help people straighten out their marriages, Mrs. N., and no two proceed in just the same way, but let's take a very simple illustration.

What is a successful marriage like? All studies show that the successful marriage, in general, is one in which husband and wife have the most in common, the most similarities. Then we might proceed by examining an unsuccessful marriage, finding the points of difference between husband and wife, and re-educating them in order to change the differences into resemblance. That would put them in the same position as people who have made successful marriages.

WHERE do these differences usually occur? In one or more of seven areas: (1) social and recreational life, (2) handling the finances, (3) handling the children, (4) handling the in-laws, (5) housekeeping or home management, (6) sexual adjustment, and (7) the wife's need for self-expression.

Talking with an unhappy wife, the experienced counselor knows where to look for the difficulties, and usually finds them quickly. He can then help her to bring about greater resemblance between her attitude and behavior, and that of her husband, at the point of friction. When they begin to think and act alike in regard to the in-laws, for instance, they no longer quarrel about the in-laws. In short, it is merely a process of education.

This description probably makes the job seem simple. Actually, it is often very simple. Sometimes, of course, it is extremely complicated. Sometimes there are conditions that can't be changed, and husband and wife simply have to accept them and adjust to them. But the counselor's main job is to build up similarities in place of differences.

I HAVE a "rating scale for successful marriage" which many couples have found helpful in taking stock of themselves. I'll send a copy with the compliments of the Post-Dispatch to any reader who incloses a stamped, self-addressed envelope with the request.

Answers to Questions.

Q. Wife and I belong to different religious faiths and can't agree about children's Sunday school. Would it be all right for them to go to each church on alternate week?

A. Is this not likely to confuse them, and also to interfere with the friendships and associations they should be forming? You might let them try each one for a while and see which one they prefer to stick to.

Q. Do you think love at first sight is really possible?

A. No—if you have any deeper idea of love than mere attraction. There are plenty of cases of strong attraction at first sight. Given an opportunity, some of these might develop into love; others evaporate.

Q. In all the jokes, the little brother makes trouble for young lovers during courtship — but isn't a little sister just as bad?

A. Worse, in one study, by psychologists Michael Cassidy and Helen Gay Pratt. They say little brothers could be bribed successfully; but little sisters, even though bribed, would run and tell everything to mama.

Cabinets as Toy Chest

By Elizabeth Hillyer

TOY chests must take a beating—and so must the rest of the furniture in a lively youngster's room. Thus, a kitchen cabinet is quite an idea, not only for toy storage but for other storage in a child's room as well.

A special, but easily found, type of kitchen cabinet is used for toys here, one in metal with sliding doors that come ready-to-decorate. The first step is to up the cabinets from the floor, and for this, hairpin metal legs come in sets. The doors then can be painted circus bright, papered to match the walls, or sparked with decals. Made to meet a kitchen's high standards of efficiency, the doors glide on steel runners and the cabinets are of heavy metal with smooth, rounded edges and corners, and they wear a sturdy finish. The butcher block wood tops, too, put up plenty of resistance to small fry wear and tear. (By Tracy Kitchens, sketched in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago.).

MRS. P. B. "I had slipcovers on my living room furniture in a large floral pattern, but would like a change to plain color. You wrote that all surfaces in a room should not be plain, so where is a good place for the pattern the room needs? The walls are a light grayed green and the rug is a darker green. Furniture woods are dark mahogany. Will you suggest a color scheme?"

Textures often have the effect of restrained pattern, and there are also many color mixtures which are somewhat patterned but are very different from the type of pattern you wish to change. With the start of two shades of green, the choice is too wide for a single color scheme to be the only right one, so look for slipcover fabrics that include colors that you especially like and go well with the greens, those which have textures, or soft mixtures of several colors that harmonize. Plain colors with less texture can be used if furniture shapes and/or accessories provide pattern. That is, if they have the interest value of pattern. Pattern does not necessarily mean a print, figures or applied decoration.

MRS. F. C. "My everyday dishes are the remains of an old set of china of my grandmother's. Do you approve the use of stainless steel flatware with it?"

Stainless steel flatware is so often beautifully designed, when it isn't imitating silver patterns. Even so, it belongs with dinnerware heavier than delicate china. It's wonderful, but not appropriate. I'd be tempted to have it and change the dinnerware. You may have something there more valuable than you know in the old china.

Secrets of Charm

Career Girls' Yardstick

A GIRL seeking a career has to be on her toes every minute from the minute she enters the personnel director's door. Opportunities may be unlimited, but competition is greater.

When a girl applies for a job, no matter what her training, she wants to take along more than just a smart appearance and fastidious grooming. She wants as much charm as she can tote. Charm plays a major role in big success and advancement. An employer immediately senses the attitude and personal attraction of an applicant.

Here is a general yardstick to rate your preparation for an interview—a few questions that a charm school worked out for a big industry executive. He used them to grade his applicants.

1—Does she have a pleasant voice and speech? 2—Does she show the consideration needed for harmonious association with business associates? 3—Does her conversation indicate wide interests and an awareness of the world around her? Does she seem to recognize and accept her responsibilities as a member of her community, nation, and world? 4—Is she well-groomed from head to toe (neatness carries over into work . . . if her hair is neat, her letters are neat). 5—Does she have a happy, positive attitude and a pleasant personality? Happy people are best liked by their associates. 6—Is her bearing graceful? Gracefulness indicates self-assurance and poise—important assets. 7—Is she predictable under pressure? 8—If her figure reflects health and beauty routine—you can be sure she is self-disciplined and probably reliable. 9—Is her appearance one of good taste and fitness?

Sunshine and Shadow

Catches Fish by the Thousands

MRS. WOODS AND THE WOODS CHILDREN WRAPPING AND PACKING FISH IN DRUM ON CHRISTMAS MORNING, 1954, IN SALINA CRUZ.

By John Keasler

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.

IT'S easy to understand the feelings of that man in the glass-bottomed boat. Here he had a nice, solvent group of sight-seeing tourists in his craft off the coast of Acapulco, Mexico, one morning some months ago, and he fared forth happily to give them a peek at the denizens of the deep.

He steered his glass-bottomed boat out over his favorite sight-seeing area and everybody looked down. The area was strewn with dead fish, which made nobody happy, particularly the boat operator who sped back to shore shrieking imprecations and calling upon the skies above to witness this disaster.

In less time than it takes to construct a tortilla, all the local glass-bottomed boat operators, plus a few of the local gendarmes, descended upon Loren P. Woods. Their countenances were not kindly nor were their hearts aglow, for word had it that this individual had been poisoning fish. Would he care to confirm or deny this?

Well, yes, admitted Woods, who, talking considerably faster than his usual quiet and thoughtful pace, held up a restraining hand and in several hundred well-chosen words said whoa! He said he could explain. He did, too.

He was poisoning fish, true, he told them. However, it was purely a temporary poison, it was all in the interest of science and, anyhow, eventually everybody concerned would benefit from such research. Everybody went away happy.

ANYBODY who can explain such matters to a group of excited Mexican tourist-boat operators obviously would have no difficulty in explaining to a more objective interviewer how it was he happened to go down to Mexico and obtain 10,000 fish, and sure enough Woods didn't.

Seated in a basement level of the Chicago Natural History Museum here the other day among a million fish—literally, a million—in jars, Woods gave us an insight into what goes into a typical collection trip for a museum.

He is curator of fishes at the museum. As such, he has gone many places in the job of obtaining fish to expand the collection. This latest trip, with his entire family, was the largest such operation, a three-month expedition along the Mexican Pacific coast—a journey during which he, his wife and his children, Loren Jr., 13 years old, and Lucy, 12, had one prime goal.

They wanted to get as many fish as possible. If some of the natives down around Acapulco and Salina Cruz were puzzled, nobody could blame them. The Woods family weren't after fish to eat them or sell, like sensible people. They took them back to Mexico City and shipped them north, express. It is to shrug.

But the native fishermen understood Woods's explanation: "We want to learn more fish things to tell the people."

Over the long haul, he said, knowledge of fish would mean conservation of fish—maintaining a plentiful supply, and that was good enough for the fishermen. So they helped Woods any way they could, whether he was netting fish, luring them with a lantern, collecting poisoned fish, picking them up bare-handed in inlets or skin-diving after them frog fashion.

MOST visitors to the Acapulco area, a famed resort, go for fun, and what fishing they do is strictly for the snapshot collection. Curator Woods wouldn't walk across the street to catch the biggest fish in the ocean simply for sport, inasmuch as he doesn't like to fish, oddly enough, as the term is usually meant.

Nevertheless, it's safe to say he came back with more fish than anybody ever brought back from Acapulco and, although there was drudgery and hardship, had a lot of fun in the process.

The Woods family left on their three-month expedition the day after last Thanksgiving, driving a museum-owned automobile all the way down to Salina Cruz, south of Acapulco. (At one point during their collecting the car was so loaded with Woods and fishes that the tires, one after another, blew out on mountain roads.)

THE Chicago Natural History Museum, like other large museums, sends its staff members everywhere; to Siam for tapirs, to the Himalayas for birds, to Central America for flora study, all over. This was not Woods's first trip. He had been previously to various other waters. But this was the biggest and the first on which he took his family.

His wife, Adele, is schooled in zoology—she met her husband-to-be at Northwestern where she was taking post-graduate work to become a laboratory technician and where he was teaching general zoology on a fellowship.

Woods's interest in fish stems back to his freshman year in a small Quaker college, where he helped conduct a local fish survey, and even further back to the days when as a boy his ambition was to be an explorer. What he meant as a kid was to explore strange lands, like Tom Swift or Zsa Zsa Gabor, but this evolved into a different form of exploration; pushing through the undergrowth of research, exploring in the islands of human knowledge, and seeking new findings.

He came to the Chicago Museum as a lecturer in 1938, became assistant curator in 1941, served in the Navy during World War II as a fisheries officer in Japan for the military government.

He is a tall, tanned, friendly, 41-year-old man with an athletic build, which last is an asset when one is engaged in diving into oceans after such items as bonnet-head sharks and the like.

During such endeavors down in Mexico, Woods overcame the language difficulties in various ways. He spoke no Spanish; the fishermen, by and large, spoke no English, making it patently impossible for him to get across his purpose by stating: "This project ties in with previous study of fishes of the Gulf of Mexico and the Panama region—the research is directed to determine the degrees and kinds of relationships between the fishes of the Gulf of Mexico, Gulf of California and both coasts of Mexico."

They would have just looked at him. So, establishing his family in an apartment, Woods embarked on a shrimp boat for 12 days, using photographs and an army Spanish-English phrase dictionary. He would hold up a picture of, say, a sea bass and get across the idea he was looking for that fish.

"Cabrilla," the fishermen would say happily.

And when the huge seines were dumped on deck with their writhing catch, Woods would leap in and grab his sea bass or needlefish or whatever he wanted. Mucho fish-finded yanqui, he.

"Some spear fishing was done," Woods said, "but this didn't work out too well." The trouble is when you're after fish 10,000 at a time, skin-diving with a spear is a slow process.

By far the bulk of the fish were obtained through poisoning them, then picking up the dead or paralyzed fish.

THIS poisoning process in its modern form utilizes a chemical called rotenone, but the origin of fish poisoning goes way back and the practice has been widespread for many years.

American Indians seeking fish as an important food supply used solutions made from such things as polk berries, or false jasmine, Indian turnips, devil's shoe string, soaproot and other plants. In the Amazon natives used, and use, cube root.

Rotenone paralyzes the gills of the fish. It comes in powdered form and is mixed with water to the consistency and color of a chocolate malted milk, although it is less tasty. Woods, his wife and children, would choose likely tide pools—areas between reefs and the shore—and busily pour in the solution.

The poison takes effect almost immediately, knocking the fish out of action although rotenone is harmless to human beings in the same water.

The work of picking up the fish was wearing; the entire family would work for hours at a time. Mostly, the expedition collected small fish although they got fish on up to several feet in length, including sharks. (Only the heads of the large fish were sent back, to save packing space.)

Also, each fish had to be placed in a preserving agent, for shipping by air, wet-wrapped, in containers.

Diving around in strange waters to pick up fish brought the expected quota of cuts and bruises and finnings, although Woods, himself, set the record with six bandages on one foot after surf deposited him atop a sea urchin—which is the aquatic equivalent of a porcupine.

SOME 250 kinds of fish were represented among the 10,000 collected—that's over half of the 450 kinds known to be in those waters, and that's a mighty good haul.

"I think our most frustrating experience was trying to get alligator gar," said Woods. (The garfish that live down there aren't the same kind as those which fishermen hate in the southern United States, although they look just as mean.)

What happened was the Woods tribe drove to a tiny fishing village, Cabeza del Toro, where reportedly gars were brought in all the time by the fishermen. By every means short of telepathy, Woods eventually got across the point he would be delighted indeed to buy some gar.

That was nice, said the natives, and promptly lost interest. No gar. First he offered two pesos, per gar. (16 cents). No gar. Then he offered five pesos, or roughly, a day's pay. No gar.

He went up to 20 pesos! No gar today, senor. Maybe manana. It finally dawned on Woods that the trouble lay in the fact money simply was no incentive to these folks, who lived their own placid life and filled almost all their own needs without scrambling too much for shekels. Isn't that downright uncivilized?

Anyhow, a couple of kind souls leisurely ambled off one day and came back with three alligator gars—but it required three days to get them to do it.

"I would have liked to have more," said Woods, "but felt I couldn't spend all year there."

The village turned out to wave adios, and then everybody went on about their unhurried business in Cabeza del Toro, which means head of the bull, where even 20 pesoes won't buy garfish in a hurry and where there's plenty of pleasant shade. (It never hurts to get a plug for Cabeza del Toro—we might move there any time now.)

For the museum's purposes, the expedition was an outstanding success. For the Woods family, the three months was a lot of fun. If any Acapulcan glass-bottomed boat operators in the audience are still worried about the world's largest Mickey Finns, and the after-effect of rotenone, they may unfurrow their brows—the effects wear off after only 24 hours.

NOW. Inasmuch as we are in the midst of the fishing season, we felt it incumbent to ask Woods, who catches fish 10,000 at a time, for a few angling tips. He said he didn't have any; sports fishing leaves him stony cold. However, he did note that all the successful native fishermen he had seen from the Galapagos to the Mexican coast and everywhere else use a bare minimum of equipment and baits. No frills and no geegaws.

What's the idea of collecting all these fish anyhow? That's what we asked Curator Woods as we sat with him in the fish department, which is hard by the Egyptian mummy department and not far from the African elephants upstairs.

The answer—the fish constitute a library. In this, as in all branches of science, constant classification and re-classification is done. To study anything you must have a definition of precisely what you're studying; that is the foundation.

The logical, ideal conclusion of the work underway would be to have every sort of fish in existence classified completely, 37 ways from Sunday. As for the more than a million fish in the museum collection, they are referred to just as a book would be in the library.

"Except if you don't really believe the book," Woods said, smiling, "you go get the fish itself." In brief, the idea of all these collected fish is to add to the gradual accumulation of human knowledge.

WOODS, who wanted to be an explorer, is a man obviously fascinated with the kind of work he's doing. He will talk fish as long as you want to. He was busy unpacking them from their milk-can-looking containers, and he was looking forward to the detailed and painstaking work of classification; the research, the exploring.

"Now the fun begins," he said, eyeing a pompano, with interest.

He's spent a lot of time in the caves of this country compiling data about cavefish, which are blind.

"What were fishes doing in rivers deep in the earth?" he asked in a Museum bulletin article. "How did they sustain life? Why had they entered caves? What surface fishes were their relatives? Why had their eyes degenerated? How did they find their way about?"

A lot of questions. Woods, who had just completed a typical museum expedition, of the sort usually unpublicized, asks a lot of questions. He and his fellow scientists go about their work quietly, without fanfare, but they come up with a lot of answers. They do a lot of exploring. Their colleagues are all over the world.

"Just air-mailed a lung fish to a fellow in India. He was curious about it," said Woods, as he put on his hat and coat to go catch his prosaic commuter's train and go home.

Sitting On Top Of World

By Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO.

I HAVE taken a look at assets and liabilities and concluded that this has been a good month. I'd almost go so far as to say that I'm sitting on top of the world.

Income is one stride ahead of Debt. The race is not over, but Income had become so used to looking at the back of Debt that it is very hopeful.

There has been no attrition of livestock. The Siamese kitten is in good health. The boxer is recovering from the itch that has kept him whimpering and scratching in the night.

I am at peace with my neighbors and sleep soundly. My appetite is good. Social life has been social. I think my swimming is improving. I go twice up and down the pool without having to lie on my back and breathe.

The other night I did a card trick after dinner which turned out successfully. This leads me to believe my hand is steady.

It has been a good month. Gradual and substantial improvement, as they say in the hog market.

The young woman who shares my improved condition is approaching her twelfth year. This has led to improvements in her general appearance. I can see that there are prospects of good material.

I DO NOT THINK this child will become a starlet. A financial joy to her parent's declining years.

It was my thought this child would enter the movies. She should invite her starlet friends to our home. I would whip up taffy pulls and put on my sport jacket and entertain them on the mandolin.

The child would draw large sums of money which the movies love to pay to gifted young women. I would be an agent for her so she would not have to bother her head on finances. I would invest her money wisely and plunge small investments for her at the track.

I would give up my job and put all my effort into her future.

I see now that this probably will not come about. However, perhaps she will marry a millionaire. I will visit them regularly and entertain the young man with card tricks and witty stories.

It will be very peaceful. Just the three of us. If they desire to be alone, the young millionaire can send me on a long trip to Paris. I think that would be a nice gesture.

MY VACATION turned out strangely. By some miscalculation, I counted the days wrong and came back to work a week too soon. There is nothing that can be done about it.

It is a good deal like my checkbook. The bank keeps accounts and I keep accounts. Although we went to the same schools, we rarely agree. For some reason I think I have more money, they think I have less.

Once a month we get together and argue it in a friendly fashion. Usually they convince me. But only because I have other things to do. If they are that hard up for a few dollars, let them have it, I say.

HOGS & DELAPLANE —FIRM, STEADY..

We are a little apart right now. My banker writes me sorrowful, chiding notes: "Your account is overdrawn . . ."

I do not see why he should worry. I will put more money in. Anyway, he has tons of money in the bank. I have seen it behind the cages. Stacks of it. Once he told me it was a matter of keeping books balanced. I never heard anything so silly. Is this the banking business or a balancing act?

I THINK this shows a fairly firm and bright prospect. Money in the bank (whether it is mine or the banker's, no matter). Livestock in good shape. Health of family, excellent; prospects, pleasing.

The lost vacation week I discount. It proves I have bigger things on my mind than taking time off. Same with my bank account. I add and subtract in round numbers. Keeping things in a general balance, you might say.

A good deal like the hog market report: Firm, steady, future brightening.

A Lot of Bounce in Her Career

Janet Blair Goes From Band Singer to Movies to Stage to TV

By Charles Mercer

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP).

"TELEVISION has a cold screen," says Janet Blair, "and you have to make it warm."

She has been doing just that these recent months. As a man (not her press agent) said the other day, "It seems that every time I turn on the set, there's Janet Blair—and it's a pretty sight."

The frequency of her appearance was slightly exaggerated. But the description of her appearance was not. She is, indeed, beautiful—and also blonde and brown-eyed. The fact she has two arms instead of none has not prevented NBC-TV from casting her as Venus when the Broadway hit, "One Touch of Venus" comes to the screen as a 90-minute extravaganza on Aug. 27. She was, you might say, built for the part—especially since the Venus of the show has two arms, unlike the Lady De Milo.

Most recently Miss Blair appeared as that hard-working office girl, Kitty Foyle, on CBS-TV. Just before that she was dancing on a piano for Jimmy Durante on NBC-TV. She has appeared on two Max Liebman spectaculars and more shows than there's room to list here. At the moment she's down in Dallas at the state fair musicals where "One Touch of Venus" is having a two-week run before its television debut.

BEFORE she left, however, she was cornered tete-a-tete in the penthouse she shares with her director husband, Nick Mayo, and two dogs and a four-foot deep swimming pool and some genuine pear trees growing on perhaps the biggest penthouse terrace overlooking the East river.

One of the most interesting things about this young lady from Altoona, Pa., is that she's a triple-threat girl: singer, dancer and actress. It makes her, as they say in show business, "a valuable property."

JANET BLAIR . . . COLD SCREEN NEEDS WARMTH.

There's been a lot of bounce in her career. As a singer she bounced from nowhere to a job with Hal Kemp's band. Then she bounced to a Hollywood contract. In her fourth movie she played Eileen in "My Sister Eileen."

"What happened to me then happens to so many people in Hollywood," she recalls. "I got typed. I was always 'Eileen.' They wanted me to play the little princess roles and I couldn't bring out the pixie in me. Actually, I didn't think I was ready for Hollywood then. I had no experience and I couldn't get good direction.

"Then, when I had a chance to re-sign at $2500 a week, I turned it down. Oh, I was young and green. I wanted to get on the stage. So I ended in summer stock."

The experience was invaluable, she feels. There followed some guest TV and radio appearances. "But I have the feeling an entertainer should entertain. I wanted live audiences."

She found them by putting all her savings into a nightclub act—singing, dancing and skits—with The Blackburn Boys. They hit most of the high class saloons from coast to coast. She was a great success. But she couldn't forget her longing for good dramatic roles.

THEN Josh Logan offered her the role of Nellie Forbush in the road company of "South Pacific," telling her, "if you do this, Janet, you'll get your Ph.D. in acting." She played 1267 performances under every conceivable condition without missing a show. At the end, true to his word, Logan presented her with a framed "diploma"—and Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II, creators of the musical, gave her a diamond "handcuff" as a gesture of their binding respect and affection.

You often hear it said that TV trains actors and actresses for the movies. But it's a two-way street.

"My experience in the movies was wonderful for television," says Miss Blair. "I like to work to the camera because it's my friend now. It offers a performer the chance to be spontaneous. Television has a cold screen and you have to make it warm."

What of the future? Beause of her steadily increasing success, her dream street is more solidly paved than that of many actresses. There are tentative plans for a television series in the fall. She's on the lookout for a first-rate Broadway musical comedy, figuring—wisely enough — that now she's ready for it.

"But," says Janet Blair, "I'd give it all up tomorrow if it ever interferes with my home life. And I'm not kidding."

Television Letter Box

I WISH to list my complaint with the many others who object to loud music all through a story or play. If all the fanfare could be limited to the announcements of the feature, then one could concentrate quietly on the program. My family enjoys Western pictures, but how silly when horses are galloping across the plains and an orchestra is blaring away. Are we to imagine that they have juke boxes strapped to their horses? Less music, please.

MRS. MARTIN.

Here's to Russ David: versatile, talented, wholesome, a nice all-around guy. St. Louis can well be proud to call this boy their native son. Also enjoy his group of musicians, vocalizers, etc. Other favorites we hope to see on TV regularly are Tennessee Ernie, Bob Crosby, Mr. Sweeney, This Is Your Music, and Ames Brothers. Thank you for this wonderful entertainment.

MR. AND MRS. PETER GATZA.

I want to express my deepest thanks for the Robert Montgomery presentation of "Decision by Morning," telecast July 25. I enjoy this program very much and especially enjoy seeing Charles Drake in the plays. He made a perfect doctor. Please, let's see more plays like "Decision by Morning," and starring Charles Drake.

QUITE PLEASED.

Why do we have to look at stupid foreign films on TV? It just doesn't make sense, with all the good American films we have.

MRS. G. SUMMERS,

More of Lawrence Welk, please. A wonderful program, fast and entertaining and lots of pep—still soothing. That's what we need. More of it.

We enjoy so much the Lawrence Welk program on Monday nights, but wish it was on a little earlier so the whole family could see it.

TV Tough Taskmaster

No Time for Fishing For Advertising Men

(John Crosby is on vacation. Substituting for him today is Bruce Barton, chairman of the board of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, Inc.)

By Bruce Barton

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.

IT is big hearted of John Crosby to invite an ad man into his editorial sanctum. While Crosby has been fairer to us in the advertising business than some of our other critics, even he occasionally implies that Madison avenue is a huckster's paradise, that its habitues are well-dressed, 15 per cent heeled parasites who have contributed little or nothing to TV or radio except a new language called "Madison Avenuese."

Agencies seemingly do nothing, according to his reports, but hold conferences — all-day conferences—carried on with expressions such as "Kick this around the top of your head, Mannie"; or "Finalize this up and also down, Mannie"; or "We need to gimmick up the gimmick, Mannie." I sit in on daily conferences at our Madison avenue offices, and it may be that we are backward or something, but the language we still speak there is English.

In the old days advertising could be quite an enjoyable business. It was possible to plan a campaign, write the copy, buy the art, make the plates, get the client's O.K., and then go fishing. The creative work on the account was done; no special effort or worry would be required for quite a while. Then came radio and TV. Our offices now are beehives; they are open, and someone is working in them at almost any hour, with telephones ringing, messengers darting in and out, and one of a team of three lawyers on call all the time. Nobody has been fishing since the coaxial cable was laid.

THE TV AND RADIO and other creative departments of advertising agencies are staffed with highly talented people. Among my own associates are men who have written and produced hit shows on Broadway; artists who have exhibited here and abroad; composers of song hits; former college professors, newspaper and magazine editors, and even ex-columnists. Plus a flock of diplomats who would qualify for the Court of St. James's, since they must continually play the part of interpreter and mollifier to producers, playwrights, actors, musicians, artists, and clients—all of them temperamental and highly sensitive to costs.

Probably the most put-upon folks are those known variously as agency producers, agency supervisors, or just plain agency guy (or gal). These toilers behind the scenes of practically every important TV program are among the nation's hardest workers.

The agency producer must know advertising, which means knowing why people buy or can be persuaded to buy. He must know the client's product. And he must know TV, which means the theater, motion pictures, and radio, all wrapped up in one. He must know every detail of costs, budgets, union requirements and codes, talents, sets, props, art work, camera technique, music, trucking, sound effects, costumes' lighting. If he introduces humor into the commercial, he must know to what extent the client's wife's sister-in-law has a sense of humor, if any. If the client's advertising manager likes blondes and dislikes brunettes, he must not forget that important fact is his casting.

EVEN WHEN every detail has been planned, there are accidents and crises. Only recently one of our producers arrived at the studio with a box of carefully selected tobacco leaves to be used in a cigaret commercial. When the box was opened and the leaves exposed to the hot studio lights, they began instantly to dry and curl and flake. What to do? He grabbed the box and fled to a near-by Turkish bath where both he and the leaves steamed successfully until air time.

When credits appeared at the end of show, the names of these people are never listed. They are not out receiving applause, bowing or blowing kisses. Their hours are murderous.

Take an early morning program, for instance, one that goes on from 7 to 10. The agency producer may be out of bed as early as 4:30 and in the office by 5:15. He must gather up the "props"—one of them perhaps a cake or a pudding baked in the agency's test kitchen the night before—and report to the studio by 5:45. He sets the props, checks shots and camera movements with the studio technical staff, and is ready for camera rehearsal at 6. When the show is over at 10, he consults with the studio, and the agency's copy writers and artists about the commercial for the next day.

In the afternoon he visits the client, receives the comments, compliments and complaints, and promises to do better next time. If the agency producer is on an evening show his routine is about the same, except that his day starts in the afternoon and lets him get to bed long after midnight.

Why any man or woman wants to be an agency producer is not definitely known. But, thank Heaven some do. For without them there would be no commercials, and without commercials no radio or TV. Just as without printed advertising there would be no newspapers and no John Crosbys.

THOMAS BROCKMAN . . . PIANIST GUEST ON KSD CONCERT TOMORROW NIGHT.

'The King and I' Next R & H Hit at Muny Opera

THESE ARE THE PRINCIPALS FOR RODGERS AND HAMMERSTEIN'S "THE KING AND I" WHICH WILL BE GIVEN BY MUNY OPERA FOR THE WEEK STARTING TOMORROW NIGHT. SOME OF THE ORIENTAL CHARACTERS DID NOT HAVE TIME TO DON PROPER MAKEUP FOR THESE SHOTS. FROM LEFT, TONY BAVAAR AND STEPHANIE AUGUSTINE AS THE ILL-STARRED LOVERS, LUN THA AND TUPTIM; TERRY SAUNDERS AS LADY THIANG; ERIK RHODES AS KRALAHOME; SANTY JOSOL AS THE CROWN PRINCE, AND IN THE BACKGROUND, ANNAMARY DICKEY AS ANNA LEONOWENS AND DARREN McGAVIN AS THE KING OF SIAM.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

THE DAM BUSTERS—A low-keyed, intensely graphic and taut English film about a true happening in World War II—the destruction by skip bombing of two hitherto impervious Ruhr dams. With fine performances by Richard Todd as Wing Commander Guy Gibson, who trained the squadron and led the raid, and Michael Redgrave as Dr. B. N. Wallis, the scientist who conceived the idea and invented the round bomb used. The tension of the raid is terrific. SHADY OAK.

LONG JOHN SILVER—A sequel to "Treasure Island," the second half of which practically repeats the Stevenson classic. The spirit of high adventure of the original has been adulterated into a rather childish comic strip conception. Robert Newton repeats his masterpiece of hamming as Long John. Made in Australia in CinemaScope. PAGEANT.

IT CAME FROM BENEATH THE SEA—A giant octopus from the Mindanao Deep, with a head about eight stories tall, attacks San Francisco before a heroic atomic sub commander and ditto scientist defeat it. The good technical work is defeated by a mediocre script and acting. Also CREATURE WITH THE ATOM BRAIN, some more horrible scientific horror stuff. ORPHEUM.

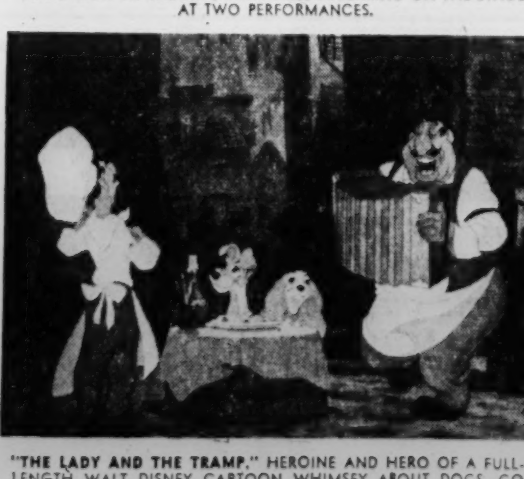
MISTER ROBERTS—Although the deletion of the ribald stuff of the play has cut out a dozen belly-laughs, this is still an awfully funny account of a bored crew aboard a Navy cargo bucket in World War II. Henry Fonda gives Lt. Roberts heart and poignancy in an outstanding performance. Jack Lemmon is very amusing as the brash and feckless Ensign Pulver, and William Powell is just right as Doc, but James Cagney makes the captain unbelievably vitriolic. In CinemaScope. ST. LOUIS.

THE SEVEN LITTLE FOYS—An entertaining musical with Bob Hope as the famous vaudeville comedian, Eddie Foy. It allows Hope plenty of wisecracks, but has an astringent side in its dim view of Foy as a father. Milly Vitale is sweet as Mrs. Foy and Jimmy Cagney is perfect in his old role of George M. Cohan. FOX.

NOT AS A STRANGER—The Morton Thompson best-seller about a dedicated doctor has lost its punch and its clinical detail has been watered down in a Stanley Kramer's weakly directed screen version. Robert Mitchum makes an indifferent Dr. Lucas Marsh and Olivia de Havilland is miscast as Cristina. LOEW'S STATE.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—A travelogue of Paris, Switzerland and America in the depth process. AMBASSADOR.

JACK WEBB AND JANET LEIGH IN "PETE KELLY'S BLUES," A STORY OF A JAZZ CORNETIST IN THE BOOTLEG ERA. IT OPENS TOMORROW AT THE FOX, WITH WEBB APPEARING ON THE STAGE AT TWO PERFORMANCES.



"THE LADY AND THE TRAMP," HEROINE AND HERO OF A FULL-LENGTH WALT DISNEY CARTOON WHIMSEY ABOUT DOGS, GO DINING. IT OPENS NEXT AT THE ORPHEUM.

"THE KING AND I," the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit which ran for 1246 performances, or nearly three years, on Broadway, will be given its first Municipal Opera production during the week beginning tomorrow night. It will be the fourth attraction in the six-week Rodgers and Hammerstein Festival which will conclude with a two-week run of "South Pacific," starting Aug. 15.

The touring company of "The King and I" with Yul Brynner and Patricia Morison, played Kiel Auditorium Opera House for two and a half weeks last fall. The book by Oscar Hammerstein II is based on Margaret Landon's novel, "Anna and the King of Siam," and relates the adventures of Anna Leonowens, an Englishwoman, in the 1860s as school teacher for the numerous children of the King of Siam. It relates the clashes between the spirited Anna and the obstinant King as she attempts to inculcate into him some idea of Western liberalism and democracy.

The songs, with music by Richard Rodgers and lyrics by Hammerstein, include "Hello, Young Lovers!", "We Kiss in a Shadow," "I Whistle a Happy Tune," "Getting to Know You," "I Have Dreamed," "My Lord and Master," "Shall We Dance?" and "March of the Siamese Children." There will be an elaborate second-act ballet, "The Small House of Uncle Thomas," a quaint Siamese version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

ANNAMARY DICKEY, who began her professional career as a stock player at Muny Opera in 1937, will play Anna. Darren McGavin will play the King. Terry Saunders will repeat her role of Lady Thiang, the King's head wife, which she had in the Broadway and touring productions. Stephanie Augustine and Tony Bavaar will play the ill-fated lovers, Tuptim and Lun Tha. Erik Rhodes will be the Kralahome, the prime minister. Santy Josol will play the Crown Prince.

Norman MacKaye will play Sir Edward Ramsay. Joe Cusanelli will appear as Phra Alack, and Lewis Bolyard as Captain Orton. Raimonda Orselli, Joan Bowman and Marvin Kranter from the chorus, who will replace Robert Pagent, will be the principal dancers. There will be a special children's chorus.

Miss Dickey, a soprano, starred in Muny Opera productions in 1938 and 1939, and, after winning the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air, sang for four years with the Met.

McGavin played Bill Starbuck in "The Rainmaker," and was seen here in the play at the American. He was featured in the Broadway productions of "My Three Angels," and "Death of a Salesman." He appears in the current motion picture, "Summertime," with Katharine Hepburn. Miss Augustine played for two and one-half years in the Broadway production of "The King and I." Bavaar sang in "Paint Your Wagon," "Hazel Flagg," and "Almanac." Josol played the Crown Prince in "The King and I" for a year on Broadway.

Jack Webb to Appear At Fox Tomorrow

Jack Webb, who rose from an obscure actor to national fame with his "Dragnet" TV series, will appear at the Fox Theater on the stage at 4:10 and 8:25 p.m. tomorrow in connection with the opening of his motion picture, "Pete Kelly's Blues." It will be his first movie for theaters since "Dragnet" was released a year ago. He is making a month's tour of cities by airplane to exploit the film.

"Pete Kelly's Blues," made by Webb's own Mark VII company and directed by Webb, will be in CinemaScope and Technicolor. It is the story of a jazz cornetist in a Kansas City Twelfth Street speakeasy in the prohibition era. Mixed with the Dixieland jazz and popular song hits of the time is a gangster melodrama. In the film are Janet Leigh, Peggy Lee, Ella Fitzgerald, Edmond O'Brien, Lee Marvin and Andy Devine.

Russia's Treasury of Moderns

By Howard Derrickson

A MOSCOW art gallery's promise of more prominent display for Russia's unrivaled collection of modern masters' paintings was reported last month from Berlin by Raymond P. Brandt, chief Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

In the art world, this development is of interest to all who know about the 700-painting collection, assembled before 1914 by two merchant princes, S. I. Shchukin and I. A. Morosov. In international politics, fulfillment of the pledge would be significant because of the unequivocal fear and hatred of modernism that Nazi and Soviet dictators have alike evinced.

Hitler despised creative art as only a frustrated academician could hate it. Lenin condemned every advance of modernism as bourgeois degeneracy.

Russia's impending about-face in art, however, would accord with last week's minimizing of anti-American propaganda in Krokodil, Soviet satire magazine. It would fall in line with encouragement just given Russian farmers to sell extra produce on the open market. It would even lend color to Communist Party Boss Nikita Khrushchev's bland assertion: "Things are different now."

In addition, public showing of Russia's moderns could be a formative influence in growth of world art. As proved by attainments of such men as Kandinsky, Gabo, Pevsner and Chagall, Russia made dynamic contributions to the contemporary movement until the dogma of static Soviet realism took its stultifying effect.

CREDIT FOR NURTURING these brilliant innovators is given the Shchukin-Morosov collection. In his book on Russian art of last year, historian George Heard Hamilton declared:

"That the future held the promise of Russia's increasing participation in the formulation of modern art as we have since come to know it and in the development of a particularly Russian revision of that art, there can be no doubt.

"In Moscow itself the promise of that future could then be seen. The outstanding examples of contemporary European painting collected by Shchukin and Morosov had already inspired members of the younger generation. . . .

"After the brief but important triumph of Constructivism in 1919-20, most of these distinguished artists went into exile. Their magnificent talents are indisputable proofs of the continuity of Russia's artistic heritage."

AFTER THEIR expropriation by the state in 1919, the Shchukin - Morosov paintings were first housed in Moscow's Museum of Modern Western Painting, formerly Shchukin's home. But they soon began to be dispersed, over his objections, throughout the U.S.S.R. In 1931, 65 paintings were sent to Leningrad's Hermitage. Pravda's enunciation of Soviet realism, putting Russian art back about a century, came in 1932.

Public acclaim for Russia's moderns was then hardly possible before the Museum of Modern Western Painting was closed at the outbreak of World War II. Like art treasures in other countries, the paintings were stored for safekeeping.

Unlike other prized works, Russia's were kept from the public even after the war ended. Most were removed to Leningrad and hidden at the Hermitage.

There last August, in implementation of a policy formulated a year earlier, many of Russia's and "the world's finest Picassos, Matisses and Cezannes" went on general public view, the New York Times reported.

RAYMOND BRANDT'S informant last month beamed over her assertion that the Dresden Gallery, where she is an official, had obtained a rich part of the collection.

Others whom Brandt queried in Leningrad and Moscow were less knowledgeable about value of the paintings, so that the contemplated display may not be promptly appreciated. It is to be enlarged late this month after the Dresden Gallery returns to East Germany the art the Russians looted from their defeated foe.

So comprehensive is the modern collection that there is no telling exactly what may be shown. Reproductions on file at Central Public Library include three Monets, five Manets, three Renoirs, five Van Goghs and six outstanding works by Gauguin, who was so close in feeling to Russian novels' pervading sadness.

Perhaps in time Soviet leaders may be induced to reassemble in one place all their long-neglected beauties for maximum enjoyment and usefulness. The fabulous collection deserves no less.

Writing in International Studio for October 1930, Harry Adsit Bull describes the Museum of Modern Western Paintings' possessions at length. He concludes:

"On the whole, the development of (Western) painting from the middle of the nineteenth century cannot be better illustrated anywhere else."

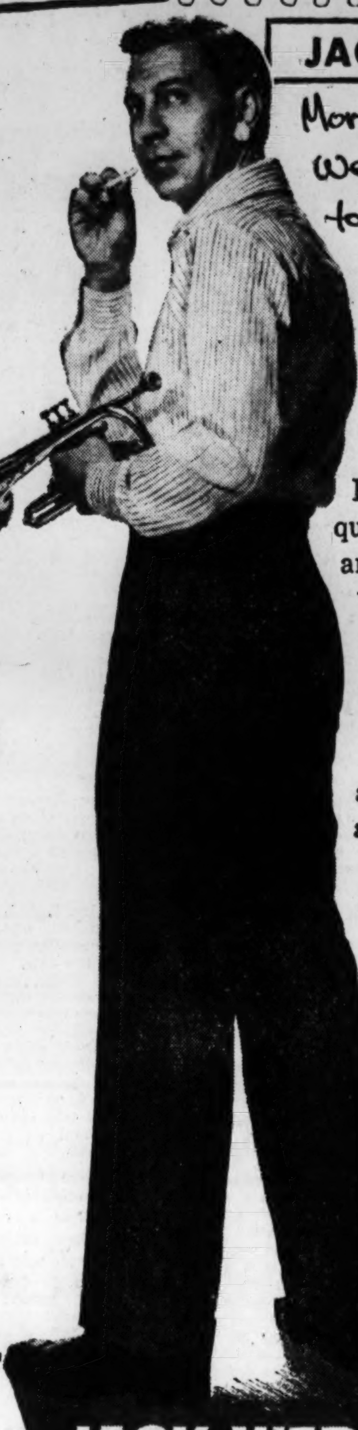
JACK WEBB IN PERSON!

ON STAGE AT 4:10 P.M. AND 8:25 P.M.



JACK WEBB speaking:

More than a year ago—
We began research on a Movie to be called "PETE KELLY'S BLUES"

On July 19th the Technicolor lab delivered the final print. It was a busy thirteen months.

The movie concerns a small jazz band which plays in a Kansas City speakeasy in 1927, so we had to look into 1927. We had to document the story with the accents of the Roaring Twenties: Prohibition, the Bootleg Wars, quick money and jazz. We had to look around and find the right people to do the music.

We managed to get a half dozen of the best of the side-men in jazz and last February we got lucky. Peggy Lee and Ella Fitzgerald signed on the same week.

We had two difficult parts to cast: Ivy Conrad, an over-stimulated child of the Flapper Age and Fran McCarg, a brutal symbol of a brutal period. Janet Leigh fit the bill as Ivy and Eddie O'Brien, who had just won an Academy Award, agreed to take on McCarg.

And finally, we had to photograph the movie. We had to use the CinemaScope lens in a way that would suggest the excitement, the restlessness, the supercharged gaiety of 1927.

The movie is ready to be shown.

I hope you'll see it—
I hope you'll feel that we did a few of the things we set out to do. J.W.

Young Man's Problem

Says His Girl Friend Is Too Demanding

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

MY girl friend and I have been engaged for a year, but she is getting so jealous and demanding that I don't know whether I love her or not. If I happen to speak to another girl on the street, my fiancee gets mad. If I happen to get a telephone call while I'm at her house, she accuses me of talking to some girl. I love her, Martha, and I don't want to lose her, but it's getting so I'm scared to speak to anyone. She will like friends of mine for a few weeks, then get mad at them for some silly reason and refuse to see them. That puts me in an awkward spot. What can I do to cure her of this?

WORRIED.

I don't know whether you can cure her or not, but now that you know how much unhappiness she can cause, you'd better think it over before you get married. If she's this jealous now, think what she will be like later. You won't be able to call your soul your own.

Dear Martha:

● I AM ENGAGED TO A MAN I have been going with for nearly two years. The other night we were supposed to go out on a date but he called and said he had to meet some men who are working with him on a committee and he couldn't see me. About an hour later a friend of mine called and asked me to go to the movies with her. I saw my fiance there with a girl he used to date before I met him. He doesn't know I saw him. Should I say something to him about it? I'd hate to lose him and I don't want to make him mad.

WORRIED.

How about getting mad yourself instead of worrying about hurting his tender feelings? The guy just plain double-crossed you and I'd suggest that you find out right now where you stand. What kind of marriage can you expect with someone who doesn't even respect you enough to be honest and play fair?

Dear Martha:

● I HAVE BEEN MARRIED AND DIVORCED and I am dating a man who is married but says he wants to get a divorce soon and will marry me then. We've been going together three years but every time I ask him about it he tells me to be patient and wait and some day we will get married and have a home. He's beginning to get mad at me now when I bring up the subject. Do you think I'm just crazy to waste my time on him? I love him, Martha. He's a wonderful man and I know we could be very happy together.

IMPATIENT.

You don't give your age, but if you're over 21 you should be smart enough to know that you're being taken for the old runaround. He's not about to get a divorce and marry you and it doesn't make any sense at all for you to be sitting around waiting for that rose-covered cottage he's supposed to build for you. What do you mean, a wonderful man? Do you call someone wonderful who treats his wife the way he's treating his? What gives you the happy illusion that you'll fare any better—assuming, of course, that by some slim chance he does go through with his promises? Make up your mind right now that you'll get out of this shabby situation. If you want to get married, find someone who doesn't have to kick out one wife in order to give you a home.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 17 and in love with a boy the same age, but the trouble is that he seldom asks me for a date and maybe I won't see him for weeks at a time. Then I can't help myself. I sit around and cry and brood and hang over the telephone, hoping he'll call. My family is unhappy and I don't like that, but what can I do?

PEGGY.

I don't blame them for being unhappy if they have to listen to your wails and groans for weeks at a time. You're acting even younger than your 17 years. You can't force this boy to come calling, so take your choice: ruin your looks and your disposition by bemoaning your fate, or have enough pride to hold you head up and get out and meet others when he doesn't call. Think about how your family feels.

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND AND I are unhappy about our daughter. She married a divorced man with three children and he completely dominates her life. We never have liked him and he doesn't like us, so we seldom get to see our daughter. He refuses to let her come to see us except on rare occasions, and when we go there he is rude to us. Our daughter says she is happy, but we know she isn't. What can we do?

MOTHER.

As long as your daughter says she is happy and doesn't fight for a little freedom in her own home, there's not much you can do. She made her choice of a husband, willingly taking on the responsibility of three children and willingly walking under the thumb of a domineering man. Try not to argue or quarrel with him. The wider the breach between him and his in-laws, the more miserable your daughter will be. If you can possibly become a little more friendly in your attitude toward him, you can be closer to your daughter.

Dear Martha:

● I WAS GOING with a real nice boy and my parents liked him a lot. But when my father found out that he was supposed to be going steady with another girl. Both this boy and I are 20 and we have been talking about getting married. Now Dad and Mother won't let me have anything to do with him. They say he's no good because he deceived me. I still love him, Martha, and I want to go with him. I think I could get him away from this other girl but they won't even listen to me. Please help me.

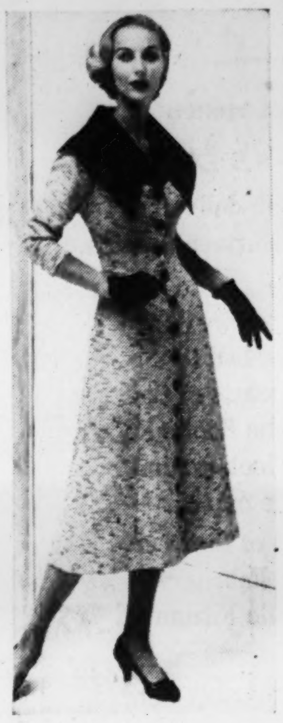
MARGIE.

I'll have to agree with your parents, Margie, that he doesn't sound like a very desirable character. If he had been playing fair, he would have broken with the other girl before he started talking marriage with you. I don't think a boy like that is worth fighting for. But remember, plenty of others are.

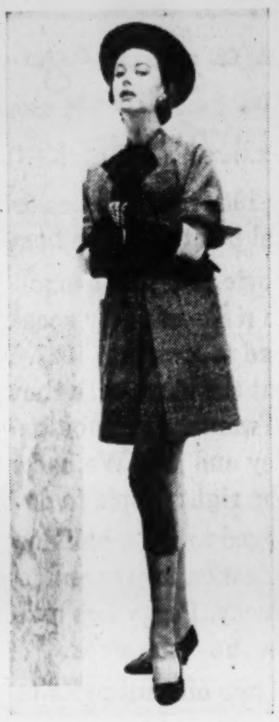
Martha Carr is glad to answer your problems. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot discuss questions of a medical or legal nature.

California Contributions to Fall Fashions

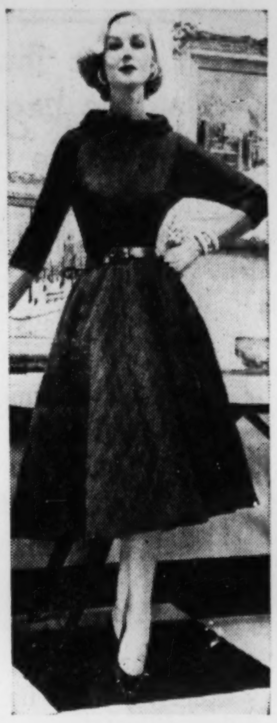
New Styles From West Coast, in Handsome Fabrics, Are Simple in Line and Form



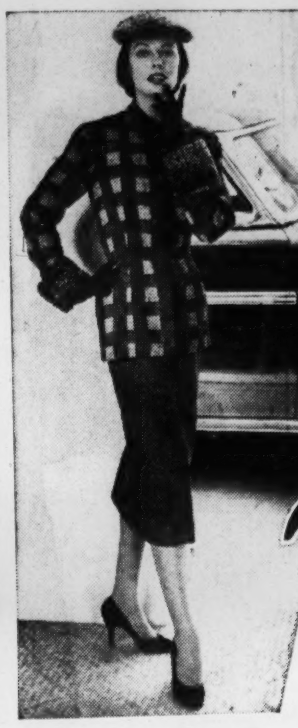
PAT PREMO'S COAT DRESS OF IMPORTED FRENCH COTTON AND ACETATE IN A TWEED PATTERN HAS LARGE COLLAR AND BUTTONS OF VELVET.



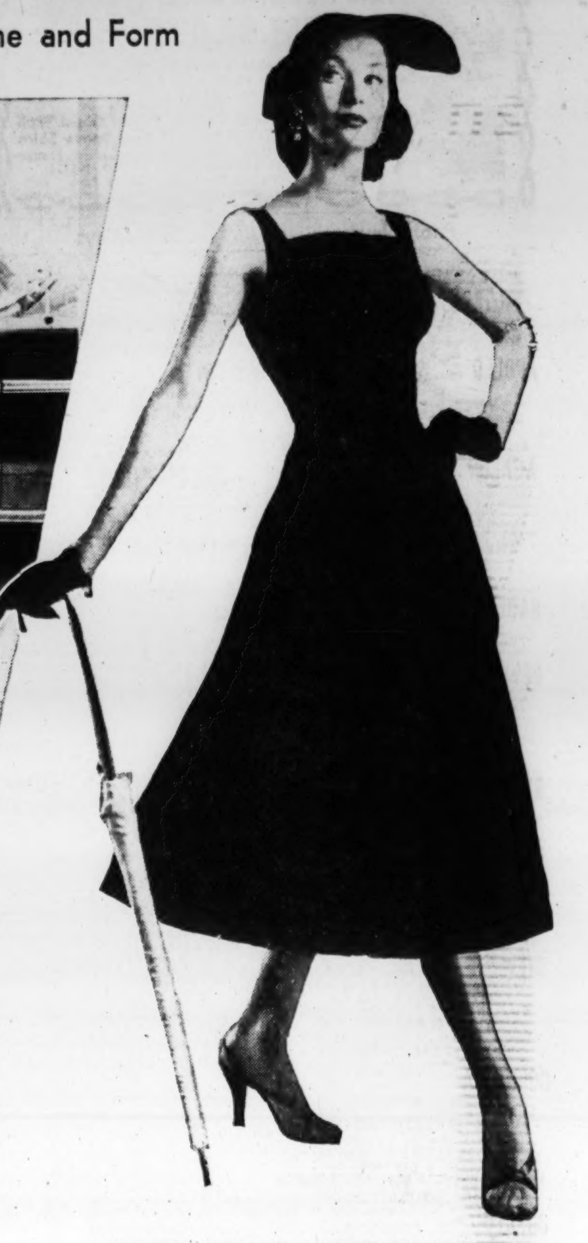
THE TUNIC LENGTH JACKET IS ALLIED WITH A SLIM SKIRT IN A TWEED SUIT FOR FALL BY JERI HOLMES. SHORT SLEEVES HAVE DEEP CUFFS.



ALEX COLMAN COMBINES A FULL CIRCLE SKIRT OF QUILTED NEEDLEPOINT CORD WITH A WOOL JERSEY BLOUSE IN MATCHING SHADE.



DE DE JOHNSON'S DRESS AND JACKET ENSEMBLE IS MADE OF AN IMPORTED SHADOW BLOCK RAYON AND A PLAIN JERSEY-LIKE RAYON.



JEANNETTE ALEXANDER DESIGNED THIS PARTY DRESS OF WORSTED FAILLE WITH A SEPARATE TUNIC TOP WORN OVER A DEEP PLEATED FULL SKIRT.

By Sylvia Stiles

CLASSIC fashions that are simple both in line and form but are enriched by handsome fabrics typify the California contributions to the coming season. At a time when even Dior seems undecided as to whether skirts should be wide or narrow at the hemline, it is interesting to observe that the West Coast designers are content to strike a happy medium. Their creations which are beginning to arrive in the St. Louis stores stress a fluid fullness. There is conservatism, too, in the covered look of shoulders.

Famous for its "separates," California now takes greater pride in the blending of these individual pieces to give the effect of a single costume, rather than in mixing colors and fabrics. Instead of the "wear-with-all" trademark that was responsible for the separates originally skyrocketing to popularity, the newest ones are dyed to match and co-ordinated even to the accessories, to give complete unity of line and color.

The matched costume is a feature of the entire collection, appearing in types for sportswear, general daytime use, and for evening. Coats and jackets have an obvious relationship to the dress or suit with which they are worn. The related tweed costume with full length coat is typical. One of these designed by Stanley Sherman for Spectator, Ltd., has a loosely woven coat that looks as if it were knitted and a slim dress of flecked tweed. Combinations of pink and brown and turquoise and brown illustrate the color harmonies. Among other tweed ensembles is a featherweight model in black and white. Tunic length jacket has elbow length sleeves, cardigan neckline finished with a big bow, and four patch pockets. De De Johnson introduces a slim, short-sleeved dress made of a charcoal gray fabric that looks knitted and a 28-inch length jacket having a bold check of the dark gray and gold. The jacket has a pleated back, and a boyish turnover collar.

Coat dresses and versions of the shirtwaist are representative of the classic types that predominate. Pat Premo uses an imported French cotton with acetate for a daytime dress that has the appearance of tweed. A large black velvet collar and a row of large velvet buttons from neckline to hemline provide handsome contrasting trimming. The skirt has a slight flare. A featherweight wool flannel in royal blue shade is attractive for a pencil slim casual dress that buttons down the front. Double rows of stitching trim the front closing and the large patch pockets. Two fabrics are used together in the design of another tailored dress by Addie Masters. Skirt is of chiffon weight tweed and the blouse is of wool jersey.

Young fashions with the fuller skirts include those dyed-to-match skirts and blouses, and one-piece dresses with the long torso silhouette. Alex Colman matches the color of wool jersey blouses to full circle skirts of quilted needle-point cord fabrics by Crompton. Jewel tones such as garnet, amethyst, amber and turquoise are included. A similar idea is developed in orlon sweaters and pleated wool flannel skirts by the same designer. Among the one-piece dresses is a Pat Premo late-day type combining two materials. The bodice which extends to the hipline is of a jersey fabric made of 50 per cent wool and 50 per cent vicara yarn. The skirt has fullness arranged in cluster pleats and is made of pure silk taffeta.

Noted among the more sophisticated dresses are draped silhouettes. Dorothy O'Hara has designed an afternoon dress which has figure-molding drapery at the side. The material is wool crepe, and there are several shades available including bronze green, copper, purple and American beauty red. A short formal dress designed by Peggy Hunt also features side drapery. This is provided by a nylon tulle pouf attached to an imported lace sheath. Tiny cap sleeves and an oval neckline are of tulle.

California designers believe in the importance of accessories to complete a costume, and choose their millinery, gloves and footwear with care. A satin faille cocktail dress with slim skirt and square, low-draped neckline calls for bare-backed suede sandals, a pouchy envelope bag of suede and a tiny black satin hat that has crisp feathers at the side. Leslie James created the hat especially for the costume. Another California milliner, Rex, suggests a red felt hat with upturned brim for a boucle striped dress combining gray and red.

To get the best haircut in town spend only 10-15 minutes at Ragsdale's . . . if your hair-do doesn't stay in or doesn't comb out right it isn't always the fault of the hair styling technique. Shaping will give you maximum satisfaction with your particular hair style. Let Ragsdale's highly experienced operators shape and style your hair to your individual personality.
We have pleased thousands—we will please you.

PROPER HAIR CARE

Brushing . . . your hair should be brushed thoroughly at least once daily, preferably twice. Use long, firm strokes with a stiff brush.
Shampooing . . . One GOOD shampoo a week with all of the soap completely rinsed out of the hair is normal. If your hair is oily or inclined to have dandruff, a good shampoo every five days is better.
Dandruff . . . Most cases of dandruff is simple scale shedding of dry, dead skin. A good shampoo will remove this type of dandruff and more frequent shampoos often cure it.
Ragsdale guarantees to use the best shampoo soaps obtainable.
Permanent Waves . . . The best permanent wave will grow out in three to six months, depending upon how fast your hair grows. For best results your permanent should be shampooed and styled every week. If it is impossible for you to get a professional shampoo and style weekly and you do your own hair, then we suggest the following:
You will get better service from your permanent if you pin up your hair after each shampoo. Normally you will need one or two light hair shapings between each permanent. This will keep your hair at the proper length.
A Snap Curl Wave is the best for all types of hair because there is no heat to dry your hair. The curls are one to one and one-half inches closer to scalp than many types of permanents and the final result can hardly be told from naturally curly hair. Your hair, like your skin, requires proper care and treatment if you wish it to look its glistening best. If you want your hair to look right, and be easily managed, it should receive proper hair shaping. If your hair is tinted or bleached it takes only a little extra care to keep it looking natural.
It takes 3 to 10 years of practical beauty work to become an expert hair dresser. Our average operator has between 8 and 9 years' experience. For the last 15 years we have given many, many thousands of permanents each year, so it is just natural that we would have more knowledge of permanent waving than someone who gives one or two permanents a week—Got a hair problem? Go to Ragsdale Beauty Shop.
P.S.: For the best hair results get Professional treatment as often as you can, and give yourself the best possible home care. . . . A professional permanent wave or hair style will improve your appearance and morale more than any other one thing can possibly do . . . When you do get a professional permanent wave (and you will) go to a Ragsdale Beauty Shop.

Bright-Colored Berets

Bright-colored berets made of several different shades of velvet are typical of the gay trend in millinery. Autumn shades including tones of brown and green are combined in the sections of one of these small berets. Another has tones of blue and red blended harmoniously. Some of the hats are accompanied by matching scarfs.

Draped Turbans

Draped turbans of fur felt follow profile lines or are draped high and wide to stress the vogue of larger hats. One of these hats in a moss green shade exactly matches a shade being featured extensively for autumn suits. Another of the turbans is bright red and is shown with a one-piece wool dress of the same hue.

The Humidity

Housewives Find Mildew Big Problem

By Dorothy Brainerd

CONSIDERING the weather for the past several weeks, it is not surprising to find many questions concerning mildew in the mail. And apparently this arch foe of homemakers strikes in all sorts of places.

Two letters, one from Mrs. H.N.P. of Glendale and one from Mrs. A.C.S. of Harrison, Ark.—obviously St. Louisans have not been suffering alone—report that the humidity has caused their bamboo drapes to mildew.

An expert on such matters assures us that soap and water are as effective as anything else in this instance.

Several white cotton blouses were the victims in the case of Miss M.J.H.

You are fortunate that they were cotton, and that they were white, Miss H.

If the stains are slight, moisten with lemon juice and salt and place in the sun. If they are old, it may be possible to bleach them out with Javelle water. Stretch the stained part of the blouse over a bowl filled with cold water and drop the Javelle water on the stain with a medicine dropper. If the stain is large you may dip the entire garment in the Javelle water. Do be sure not to let the Javelle water remain on the stain for more than one minute. Rinse in clear water. Then apply a few drops of a solution made of one-half teaspoon of sodium thiosulfate and one to two teaspoons of vinegar in one pint of water. Rinse immediately in clear water. Repeat the entire treatment if necessary.

A word of warning: Do not use Javelle water on silk or wool, or on colored fabric.

Sometimes mildew can be removed by dampening the stain with water and springling sodium perborate powder directly on the stain. Rinse immediately.

"I PLACED a set of walnut furniture in the basement of our home just a few weeks ago," writes "Homemaker," "and now I find that it has accumulated a green mold. What can I do about this?"

Wash it with benzine and naphtha, about half and half. Allow to dry thoroughly, and then rewax the furniture.

AND MISS A.A.W. is distressed to find mildew on her leather luggage.

Equal parts of denaturel alcohol and water probably will remove this, Miss W., and put that luggage back in good condition for your vacation. Wring a cloth out of this solution, wipe off the mildew and dry the leather quickly in a current of air. Use an electric fan if there isn't a good breeze. Don't use the undiluted alcohol on the leather, or it may affect the color.

A LETTER from Mrs. H. S. reads: "A white chenille bedspread was given me as a wedding gift, and I stored it away in the basement to keep it until we moved into our new home.

"Now I find that the spread has yellow and mildew spots all over it. I am heartsick about this; have you any suggestions?"

I assume that both the chenille and the background are cotton. If so, wash the spread through the regular laundry process, then use household bleach or Javelle water to bleach the spread.

Madonna Fitzgerald, home management specialist of the University of Missouri's extension service, advises that it is always better to use two or three mild bleach solutions, rinsing thoroughly between each, rather than to make one application of a very strong bleach.

WE PURCHASED an older home and have a problem with our metal cold air draft grate. How can this metal grate be refinished?" asks Dolores G.

Just paint it with any metal enamel, such as you would use on metal furniture.

MRS. L. S. recently moved into an old home which had stood vacant for many years. She wants to know how to clean windows that have been untouched for all this time.

"The screens have been in, but this seems more dirt than a 'screen stain,'" she explains. 'Steel wool and razor blades remove it but it is such hard work and takes hours."

The foreman for a glass outfit tells us that a strong solution of ammonia is your best bet. Has anyone else any suggestions for Mrs. S.?

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answer for you.

Quilted Skirts

Quilted skirts are continuing their popularity. Calico prints are among the fabrics introduced in back-to-school fashions. Some of these skirts have matching blouses designed along shirtwaist lines. White blouses with tucked details are shown with the skirts which are full and usually pleated at the waistline.

'The Harder They Fall' to Pull No Punches on Screen

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 6

BOXING, the dead end kid of sports, may as well brace itself for another going-over from Hollywood.

"The Harder They Fall," a book that was a striking indictment of at least one phase of boxing, is going to be put on the screen.

"I don't think boxing is a sport in any sense of the term." So said Philip Yordan, who is producing the picture and writing the screen play.

Yordan's sentiments erased any thought that the movie version will soften the blows punched out by the author of the book, Budd Schulberg.

"The Harder They Fall" is supposedly fiction but it is a story that not uncuriously parallels the boxing career of Primo Carnera. The huge Italian occupied the world heavyweight throne for one year until he was battered into a dreadful mess in 1934 by Max Baer.

The era of Carnera—the fantastic and phoney build-up of a hulking giant who was anything but a champion fighter, and the gangster atmosphere that dominated the spectacle from its origin to its finish—is indeed a vulnerable one for boxing. Yordan obviously does not intend to miss any chances to jab and gouge where it will hurt.

Nodding in agreement to the producer-writer's observation was Mark Robson, who will direct the film. He, too, has no illusions about the glamour of the business.

Robson directed the powerful, realistic picture, "Champion," another story of the prizefight game that attracted wide attention several years ago.

Yordan said he does not anticipate the warmest co-operation from the fight people when actual filming gets underway, with Humphrey Bogart as the star.

He hopes to shoot scenes in New York's Madison Square Garden, and Stillman's Gym, rusty-musty training site for the fighters, as well as some of the pubs along Eighth Avenue where the Gotham boxing crowd gathers.

He indicated he will not be floored with surprise if the International Boxing Club, which owns the Garden, proves to be reluctant in granting use of the big arena.

Thus far, he said, he has had difficulty acquiring old movies of some of Carnera's fights. Once they were easy to obtain.

The character to play the giant boxer has not been selected.

"We want a type who really is big, naive and innocent," Yordan noted.

Red Two-Piece Dress

Bright red velveteen is used for a striking two-piece dress which has the popular long overblouse. The blouse is shirred at the low waistline and is beltless. Neckline is low and round. Skirt is slim and has a deep pleat at the center back. Velveteen also is used for a one-piece dress which has the appearance of a two-piece model because of its elongated bodice that is set on to the slim skirt with a deep tuck.

The Night Spots

STARLIGHT ROOF—The Four Joes, four boys who met while in service in Korea about two years ago and formed a vocal and instrumental quartet. Their first big break came when they played the Copa, and they have made two M.-G.-M. platters. Bobby Swain's orchestra for dancing.

Cork-Like Leather

Leather that has the appearance of cork is being used for low-heeled pumps as well as for casual shoes. The leather is mottled and also has the natural cork shade. Some of the pumps are cut out over the instep. Others add bow trimming. Layered leather heels are noteworthy, too.

Dark Green Suits

Dark green is among the shades being revived for autumn. It is seen in some attractive two-piece suits. The casual type of suit with pleated skirt and belted jacket is among those being featured. Suits for dressy occasions have slim skirts with jewel-trimmed jackets and satin blouses.

'The Tempest' at Stratford Only Visually Striking

Stratford, Conn., Aug. 6 (UP).

THE American Shakespeare Festival Theater this week officially took the wraps off its second production of the season, "The Tempest."

Like its predecessor, "Julius Caesar," with which it is now being given in daily alternation, "The Tempest" has been mounted as more of a feast for the eyes than for the ears.

The company, virtually the same for both plays, is certainly not an ideal one for any given Shakespearean play for a season of repertory, although not too much should be made of this beyond the mere reporting of an obvious fact because the whole Stratford enterprise for this first abbreviated season must be accepted in a spirit of make-do.

Obviously things will be better casting-wise—and possibly direction-wise—next summer and in those to follow.

Scholars find in "The Tempest" some of Shakespeare's best and most mature writing, but as a piece for the theater—beyond a few isolated passages—it is a tedious bore to this reviewer no matter who does it or in what fashion.

Certainly Horace Armistead with his scenery, Robert Fletcher as costume designer and Jean Rosenthal as lighting expert have done about all that can be asked of anyone to make this production attractive. Miss Rosenthal's work is especially outstanding.

It is in the speaking of some of Shakespeare's most beautiful verse that the attraction diminishes. Although a better Prospero than a Brutus, Raymond Massey still falls well short of what one would like to hear in a leading Shakespearean role.

Jack Palance also is seen to better advantage as Caliban than he is as Cassius. His monster has a pathetic quality that is appealing, and his scenes with Rex Everhart and Jerry Stiller, who are excellent as Stephano and Trinculo, respectively, are well played comedy bits even if somewhat out of joint with the rest of the production.

Lake Lorraine

Only 30 minutes away from St. Louis a beautiful new Lake Vacationland is rapidly coming into existence. Drive out today.

The LAKE VACATIONLAND St·Louisans have always wanted

Among the beautiful hills of Jefferson County there will soon be a lake of clear, sparkling water, with picturesque lodges, where busy men and their families will enjoy life as they have always hoped to do. . . . even as the nearby city swelters under Summer's simmering heat.

Here lake-cooled breezes will gently fan you to sleep at night—and by day, give zest to the finest fishing, swimming, sailing, canoeing and motor-boating this section has ever known.

The same men who developed Lake Montowese and Fond de Lac are building Lake Lorraine, near Goldman, Missouri, less than 30 miles south of Affton on Highway 21 (Tesson Ferry Road). One small lake is now stocked and ready for fishing.

Lodge sites vary in size from 50x150 feet to half-acre and acre tracts. Modern conveniences are available. Lodge site prices start at $750, and may be bought on convenient terms.

Lake Lorraine will NOT be open to the general public. It is being developed—and will be maintained—for Lodge Site owners and their guests.

Miss Briggs Married to R. E. Quandt

St. Louis Relatives of Bride Among Guests at Fashionable Midsummer Wedding at Gates Mills, O.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WILLOUGHBY, O., Aug. 6.

WELL KNOWN St. Louisans were here today to attend the wedding of Miss Jean Hamilton Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton Briggs of Waite Hill, to Richard Emeric Quandt. The bridegroom, a native of Budapest, is the son of Richard F. Quandt of Washington and the late Mrs. Quandt.

Among the guests were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley; her uncles and aunts, Dr. and Mrs. E. Lawrence Keyes and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley Jr.; her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Otto, Miss Emily Catlin Keyes and Air Force Lt. Edward Lawrence Keyes Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. John Kennard Wallace. Mrs. Arthur Shepley Jr., landed in New York only a few days ago from Europe and flew here in time for the ceremony. The bride's mother was Miss Mary Merwin Shepley, a former St. Louisan.

The wedding, an important midsummer event, took place at the Church of St. Francis of Assisi in Gates Mills, O., a few miles away, the Rev. William Gallagher officiating.

Geranium blossoms, seldom used in wedding decorations, were important in the decor today. Pale pink blossoms adorned the church and, surrounded by their own foliage and combined with ivy, provided bouquets for the bride's attendants. The bride herself carried white geranium clusters and ivy.

Mrs. Otto, the former Miss Mary Shepley Keyes, was matron of honor and Miss Alexandra Quandt, the bridegroom's sister; Miss Cynthia Towell, Cleveland; Miss Susan Winslow, Providence, R.I., and Miss Ann Olstein, Miss Elizabeth Low and Miss Jane Ferguson, all of New York, were bridesmaids.

They wore crisp white cotton organdy dresses with tucked, off-the-shoulder bodices, cap sleeves and full ballerina skirts. Except for Mrs. Otto, the girls had tailored pink velvet sashes in geranium pink to match their satin slippers and velvet bandeaux. Accessories for the matron of honor were moss green.

Silk taffeta was fashioned into a bridal gown which was lavishly trimmed with exquisite old rose point lace. The bodice and cap sleeves were lace appliqued and the skirt flared bell shape into a cathedral train. A rose point lace veil was caught to a cap and cascaded over tulle to the end of the train.

Edward Tiryakian of Cambridge, Mass., was best man for Mr. Quandt, whose ushers were Arnold Ricks, Richmond, Va.; John Petropulos, Lewiston, Me.; Thomas Finn, Cam-

Craig has been first to recognize the growing need for a furniture store catering specifically to the needs of young homemakers—and older home owners who are young at heart. When we built our new store in Clayton, we converted 4901 Washington into a furniture store embodying this important new idea:

To bring young homemakers true quality furniture at prices, and on terms, that young budgets can afford, with the Craig name behind every piece.

Craig is offering (for the first time) low cost easy terms never before available on fine furniture.

MRS. RONALD E. HART

Donius-Burdzy Church Wedding

MISS Constance Irene Burdzy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Anthony Burdzy, 4470 Dryden avenue, was married to Walter August Donius yesterday morning at St. Engelbert's Church. The candlelighted altar was decorated with white and pink carnations and banked at each side with greenery. The Rev. John P. Abels officiated.

The bride wore a white marquisette gown over taffeta, the bodice and bouffant skirt trimmed with chantilly lace panels. Her fingertip illusion veil was held in place by a lace and seed pearl crown and her flowers were white orchids and stephanotis fastened to a prayerbook.

Miss Mary Agnes Shock, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Her sister, Miss Jeanne Marie Shock, and Miss Marilyn Donius, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They wore terrace-length pink silk shantung dresses and coronets of small white daisies, centered with rhinestones, and carried crescent-shaped bouquets of white carnations and ivy. Another cousin of the bride, Mary Ann Binko, was junior bridesmaid. She was in a white silk shantung frock and held a miniature crescent bouquet of pink carnations and ivy leaves.

Mr. Donius, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Donius, 6077 Wanda avenue, had Edwin Doering as best man and Victor Luetchfield Jr., Thomas Wolff, William Hooper and Robert Ebel as ushers.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Burdzy gave a reception at the Gatesworth Hoteel.

Mr. and Mrs. Donius will spend several weeks in Miami Beach, Fla., and will live in North Hills Gardens, St. Louis county.

Miss McDonald Bride Of Ronald E. Hart at Morning Ceremony

MISS CLAIRE McDONALD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. McDonald, 535 North Twenty-second street, East St. Louis, and Ronald E. Hart were married at St. Elizabeth's Church there yesterday morning. After the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Francis A. Beykirch, guests motored to St. Louis for a reception in the Tiara lounge of the Park Plaza Hotel. Mr. Hart's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hart, 1029 North drive, Warson Woods, Ladue.

The main altar of the church was decorated with large bouquets of white gladiolas and clusters of lighted white tapers. The center aisle was set off by pink asters and greenery fastened to pews with white satin bows. Bouquets of pink asters and greenery were repeated in decorations for the bridal and buffet tables for the reception.

Mr. McDonald gave his daughter in marriage. She was attended by Miss Marjorie Hogan, maid of honor, and by Miss Ann McGill, bridesmaid. Joseph G. Tighe was best man for Mr. Hart whose ushers were Lt. Edwin S. Gibson Jr., Roswell, N.M.; Edwin Benton and Richard Gumersell.

The bride's gown was designed with a short-sleeved chantilly lace bodice, the scalloped neckline filled in with illusion to a mandarin collar sprinkled with sequins. The bouffant tulle skirt, which swept into a chapel train, was edged with lace. The bride wore a fingertip illusion veil gathered to a shirred pearl-trimmed cap and carried a spray of stephanotis and ivy centered with a white orchid. Her attendants wore ballerina ice blue crystallette dresses, trimmed with lace, and matching bandeaux finished with short veils. Their flowers were crescents of pink asters and ivy tied with ice blue bows.

Mr. Hart and his bride will live in Des Moines, Ia., on their return from their wedding trip to Florida and New Orleans. A graduate of St. Teresa's Academy, East St. Louis, the bride received her A.B. degree from St. Louis University. She belongs to Kappa Beta Gamma sorority. Mr. Hart, an alumnus of St. Louis University High School and St. Louis University, received his M.S. in journalism at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. He was stationed for 17 months in Tokyo where he worked on the Pacific Stars and Stripes.

Ruth Ann Ball Plans Wedding To W. R. Haymes

News of the engagement and forthcoming Oct. 29 wedding was revealed Wednesday evening, July 13, at a wine and cheese party given at Miss Ball's home, 7827 Walinca Terrace, Clayton.

TRAINING SESSIONS FOR SCOUT JUBILEE

St. Louisans Going to World Jamboree to Prepare at Meetings This Week.

Training sessions for Scouts and leaders from Missouri and five other states, who will attend the 1955 World Jubilee in Canada later this month, will be held tomorrow and Tuesday at Beaumont Scout Reservation, U. S. Highway 66 and Antire road, St. Louis county.

The jamboree will be held from Aug. 20 to 28 at Niagara-on-The-Lake. Six Eagle Scouts from the St. Louis Boy Scout Council will attend. They are John Sharp, Ronald Evens, Irl Solomon, Sheldon K. Stock, Robert H. Allen and Larry Lynch.

The St. Louis contingent will leave by train Wednesday on a pre-jamboree trip through the eastern United States and Canada including stops at Washington, D. C., Arlington and Alexandria, Va., Annapolis, New York City and Montreal and Quebec, Canada.

Canadian Scout officials estimated 10,000 Scouts from 46 nations would participate in the encampment. Contingents also are expected from several Iron Curtain countries.

Scouts, Explorers and leaders of Suburban District were to arrive at Irondale Scout Reservation today for two weeks of camping ending Aug. 21, last day of the camping season.

Suburban District includes Richmond Heights, Brentwood, Webster Groves, Rock Hill, Maplewood and Shrewsbury. Units to attend include Troops 300, 301, 304, 306, 308, 315, 318, 320, 333, 335, 336, 339, 362, and 368.

Units camping for one week are Troops 303, 314, 350 and 361. Troops 307, 334 and 387 will camp the last week of the season along with Troop 55 of North Star District.

Nine units of Old Trails District were to begin camping at Lions' Den Scout Reservation today. They are Troops 288, 349, 368, 369, 383, 526, 529, 532 and Explorer Post 288.

Troops scheduled to take over Camp May, Beaumont reservation, for the final week of the season were Troop 357, Daniel Boone District; Troop 261, Council Grove District; Troop 234, Northwest District; Troop 331, Suburban District; Troop 17, Midland District and Troop 345, 458 and 523 of Pioneer District.

Reservation fee of $25 must be forwarded to the council by tomorrow by Sea Explorer units planning to participate in the 1955 Lake of the Ozarks Regatta, a Scout official said yesterday.

The regatta will be held for one week begining Aug. 21 at Camp Pa-He-Tsi, a state-owned Scout camp at the Grand Glaize arm of the lake near Osage Beach.

Program for the regatta will include sailing, canoe and swimming races, land based competitions, camping activities, movies and a formal dance.

Individual fee of $17.50 will be payable on arrival at the camp, a Scout official said.

Wilbert F. McKinney, former member of the professional staff of the South East Missouri Council, was named to the council staff here, it was announced yesterday. McKinney will be district executive director for Pioneer District.

CITES MIDDLE-INCOME APARTMENT SHORTAGE

Adviser to Redevelopment Group Points Out Exodus to Suburbs.

Too many apartments in the big cities are designed either for the wealthy or the poor, and middle-income housing has been neglected, in the opinion of Paul Tishman, New York builder who has been employed as consultant to the Urban Redevelopment Corp. of St. Louis.

Much of the exodus to the suburbs from St. Louis, Chicago and New York is due to a shortage of apartments suited to the needs of families with income between $5000 and $8000 a year, says Tishman, who has been urging saving banks, insurance companies and other large-scale investors to go into the middle-income housing field.

Properly financed and managed, housing could rent at $30 per room per month and still bring a return of 5 to 6 per cent on investment, he asserts. Tishman helped develop Concord Village, a housing project in Brooklyn, for a group of 18 savings banks, and built Electchester Housing, a similar project at Flushing, N. Y.

The Urban Redevelopment Corp. of St. Louis will enter a bid for acquisition of five and one-half blocks now being cleared in the blighted Plaza area. If its bid is accepted, it will erect approximately 1150 air-conditioned apartments for middle-income tenants, with Tishman serving as technical adviser.

FATHERS GRUETER AND PARRY TO BE HONORED BY GROUP

The Rev. Albert B. Grueter and Rev. William F. Parry will be honored for their 50 years' service in the Society of Jesus with a buffet dinner next Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Sheraton Hotel.

The dinner will be given by the combined alumni of schools, since amalgamated into St. Louis University High School, at which the two priests previously taught.

Since 1928 Father Grueter has been engaged in missionary work among Indians in South Dakota. Father Parry has been associated with him in the same work for the last 15 years.

WASHINGTON U. SUMMER ENROLLMENT INCREASES

Enrollment in Washington University's current summer school has increased 13.9 per cent over last summer, Stephen C. Gribble, director, announced yesterday.

First semester registration totaled 2231 students and registrations for the second semester total 1375. Gribble attributed the increase in enrollment to a general trend throughout the country.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Twelve members of Girl Scout Intermediate Troop 849, Woodson Terrace, will spend Tuesday camping at Snug Harbor, Meramec Bottom road. The girls will participate in a program of nature study and outdoor activity.

Mrs. Ottilie C. Means, district director of Overland Trails and Three Rivers Districts, will attend an initial training course for Girl Scout staff members beginning tomorrow and continuing through Sept. 5 at the Edith Macy Training School, Pleasantville, N.Y.

Two three-day camping sessions are to be held at Girl Scout Camp Cedarledge, near Pevely, Mo., beginning Aug. 28 and ending Sept. 3. The sessions will be attended by six Intermediate and Senior Scout Troops.

KANSAS CITY GETS READY TO OPEN 1206-CAR GARAGE

Downtown Underground Facility Will Be Big Step in Solving Parking Problem.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 6—A big step toward solution of the downtown parking problem here will be taken next month when a three-story underground garage with space for 1206 automobiles goes into operation.

The $4,100,000 facility, built by the city for lease to a private operator, should do good business by night as well as by day, officials believe. It is only three blocks from the heart of the department store area, and is right across the street from the Municipal Auditorium.

A landscaped park will top the Auditorium Plaza garage, which underlies the block bounded by Twelfth, Thirteenth, Wyandotte and Central streets. Customers will park their own automobiles, and moving stairways will take them back to the surface from the three parking levels.

Rate Schedule.

The following rate schedule has been recommended by consulting engineers:

Between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m., 35 cents for the first hour; 10 cents for each additional hour up to seven hours; $1 for more than seven hours and less than 12 hours. Parking between 6 p.m. and 1 a.m. would cost 50 cents, and the overnight rate from 10 p.m. to 10 a.m. would be $1.

These charges are only tentative. A final decision on the rate schedule will not be made until the management contract is let. The city will open bids Wednesday, and the garage is scheduled to go into service Sept. 15.

To build the garage cost $4,100,000, not counting cost of the site. The land has been assessed at $2,000,000. Construction was financed by bonds which bear 4⅛ per cent interest and are payable from garage revenues. The bonds will mature in 30 years, but the city hopes the enterprise will be so successful the bonds, callable at any time, can be paid off in 15 years.

3260 Cars Daily.

It is believed that use of the garage will average 3260 vehicles a day. A survey distributed to bidders on the bonds estimated that gross income will be $555,000 annually during the first five years of operation and $580,000 in succeeding years. Annual operating costs were estimated at $146,000.

The underground garage is on the western edge of the business district. Another big parking project is under development on the northern side of the shopping area. This involves demolition of five blocks of old buildings by the city, and sale of the cleared ground to a private redevelopment corporation organized by civic and business leaders. The group plans to invest $3,000,000 to provide parking for 1000 machines on lots and accommodations for an additional 1500 in open-deck garages of two to six floors.

BENSON DISLIKES CONTROLS BUT FARMERS DON'T

Referendums Usually Support Crop Curbs —18 Pct. of Growers Control All.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson has stated repeatedly that he dislikes federal crop controls. However, circumstances are requiring that he employ them more than any of his predecessors.

He has invoked rigid marketing quotas this year on wheat, cotton, rice, peanuts and major types of tobacco. Before the year is over, he will have to impose them on the same crops for next year.

Although farmers themselves may or may not like the controls, they have been writing a pretty good record of approving them. The farm law of 1938, authorizing marketing restrictions, requires that they be approved by at least two-thirds of the farmers voting in a referendum.

Since then, the department has held 68 such referendums. In 50 of them, growers approved quotas while in 18 they disapproved.

Law's Requirements.

The circumstances that require Benson to use quota restrictions are the accumulation of surplus crops and a requirement of farm law that the limitations be invoked—subject to grower approval—when oversupplies develop.

By the time this year's harvesting has been completed, upwards of 12 billion dollars-worth of farm surpluses are likely to be stored under government farm programs.

Farmers themselves are under great economic pressure to approve quotas, whether they like them or not. If the quotas are approved, the Government will support grower prices of the affected crop at a relatively favorable level. But if they are rejected, the support levels are cut to a very low level. In the case of tobacco, price supports are withdrawn completely if controls are voted down.

Inasmuch as market prices follow closely the support level, many farmers hesitate to vote against controls lest prices drop to depression levels.

In most cases where Benson has invoked controls, he has in effect apologized, explaining his dislike of the idea that farmers be controlled from Washington. Yet, he has never once suggested that the law be changed to eliminate the controls. He has said that he realizes they are needed until war-expanded farm production has been adjusted to peacetime demands.

Benson feels that once this adjustment has been achieved, farm production can be guided simply by varying the level of Government price supports. Under the Administration sponsored flexible price support system, price guarantees are high in times of shortages to encourage production and are low in times of surplus supplies to discourage production and to encourage consumption.

The department has conducted three referendums this year on quotas. Referendums for other crops produced under controls this season were held last year.

One this year was for quotas on the 1956 wheat crop. It was approved by 77.5 per cent of the growers voting. Another was on a proposed reduction in previously announced quotas for this year's crop of burley tobacco. It won by a majority of 96 per cent.

The third referendum was on the question of authorizing quotas for the 1956, 1957 and 1958 crops of flue-cured tobacco. It gave an overwhelming majority of 97.3 per cent of controls until the 1959 crop.

Other Votes Coming.

Before the year is out, Benson will hold referendums on quotas for next year's crops of cotton and rice as well as on future crops of such types of tobacco, burley, Virginia sun-cured, Maryland and two cigar varieties.

Since 1938, the department has held five referendums on quotas for wheat and all won grower approval. There have been nine on cotton quotas, all winning approval. Two have been held on rice controls. The first, which would have covered the 1939 crop, was defeated. The second, held for this year's crop, was approved by a 90 per cent margin.

Four have been held on peanuts — each for a three-year period. All gave quotas approval. Two have been held on quotas on extra long staple cotton, a specialty type. They were favorable.

Quotas on tobacco have had somewhat harder times winning grower approval. The department has held 46 tobacco referendums. In 17 of them, farmers turned down the controls. The rejections came chiefly on quotas on minor types of tobacco in northeastern parts of the country, principally those used for making cigars.

In the beginning authority to use quotas was limited to crops described as being "basic" to agriculture. These were cotton, wheat, corn, rice, peanuts and rice. None was ever proposed for corn, although there have been times when the supply approached the point where it would have been necessary to invoke quotas.

Last year Congress amended the law to exempt corn from quotas. This action was taken on the generally accepted contention that it would be impossible to enforce corn quotas because such a large portion of this crop is used as livestock feed on farms where it is grown. The other crops covered by quotas are largely market crops.

On the whole, farmers have given quotas on cotton and flue-cured and burley types of tobacco larger majorities than have growers of other crops.

Whether the referenda give a true picture of how farmers feel toward the Government controls is a matter of conjecture. Often less than half the effected growers go to the trouble to vote now.

In the referendum held a few weeks ago on quotas for the 1956 wheat crop, only about 330,000 of the estimated 1,400,000 eligible farmers voted. This was less than one-fourth. In this case only 18 per cent of the eligible farmers approved the controls. Yet they were able to put the control on all the growers.

Benson's immediate predecessor as farm secretary, Charles F. Brannan, proposed while he was in office that authority to invoke marketing quotas be extended to virtually all farm commodities, including livestock, poultry, eggs and milk.

A bill to carry out his recommendations was sent to Congress, but it was never given serious consideration.

2 WOMEN PAPERHANGERS ON JOB IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP)—New York City's only professional women paperhangers call their craft "the silk stocking of the building trades."

It takes a three-year apprenticeship to belong to the union, said Mrs. Burkhart, but "it's better than scrubbing floors."

EXPANDED BLUE CROSS PLAN WILL BE AVAILABLE SEPT. 1

An expanded form of Blue Cross hospitalization insurance, called Blue Cross Preferred, will be available on a limited basis to employes of business and industrial concerns beginning Sept. 1, it was announced yesterday by the Group Hospital Service.

The new program will cover in full all laboratory services, diagnostic X-ray, anesthesia, physical therapy, shock therapy, basal metabolism tests and electrocardiograms billed by hospitals to Blue Cross members covered by this program when they are patients in a Blue Cross service hospital. Benefits will apply for some radiation and electric shock therapy treatment given out-patients.

Cost of the additional coverage has not been definitely determined, but a spokesman for the insurance group said that it probably would not increase average monthly coverage cost more than 10 to 15 per cent.

RECORD TOTAL OF BOOKS LENT IN UNIVERSITY CITY

A record total of 222,092 books was borrowed from the University City Library in the last 12 months, Miss Constance Grier, librarian, said in the annual report yesterday. This is an increase of 75,971 books above the number borrowed in the preceding 12-month period.

The increase was attributed by Miss Grier to the inauguration of a bookmobile service, which makes regular calls in 17 neighborhoods outside a one-mile radius of the library.

Miss Grier also cited in her report the increased number of children using the library. She said this resulted from a program in which more than 3600 school children in class groups visited the building.

Air-Condition Installations Require Permit

Air conditioning installations in the City of St. Louis require one or more permits from the City Administration, Director of Public Safety Joseph P. Sestric cautioned yesterday, pointing out that some negligence is being uncovered on the part of property owners and installing contractors in meeting city requirements.

"Many refrigeration and air conditioning installations are made without securing approval and permits from the Building Division," Sestric said." It behooves purchasers and owners to insist upon permits from their contractors on all refrigeration and air conditioning installations as an assurance that such equipment is installed in accordance with City of St. Louis Safety Code.

"In the Fall of 1954, a local corporation had the foresight to let contracts for the installation of an air conditioning system for a part of its plant. The contractor installing the equipment, unfortunately, neglected to secure the necessary permit. Late in the Spring of 1955, an alert inspector discovered the work in progress, and in checking it for the compliance with the code, discovered that a number of errors had been made in providing the necessary fire safety devices, and some other matters which need not be detailed here.

"The owner was thereby placed in an embarrassing situation in which the necessary corrections had to be made very quickly, or have his equipment sealed so that it would be useless for the purpose originally intended, namely, to provide comfortable working conditions for his officers and his employes during the summer months.

Necessity This Area.

"Situations such as this are brought to our attention constantly.

"Air conditioning is a modern convenience which has now become a necessity in the St. Louis area, for comfortable working conditions, particularly, in business, commercial and industrial establishments. Home-cooling, too, is becoming more and more popular. Like all new things, people must learn to operate the cooling machines, know their capacities and capabilities. In addition to the requirements of becoming acquainted with the physical qualities of the machines, there are

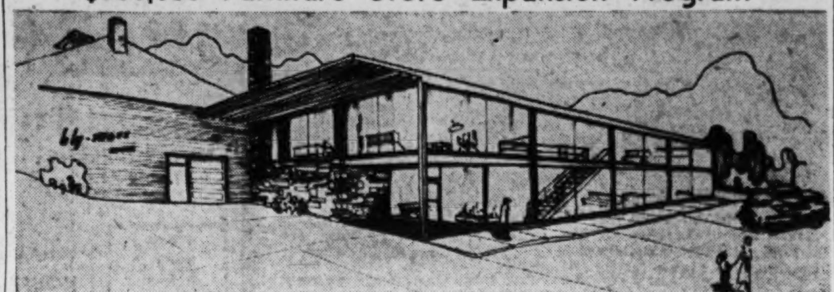
$350,000 Furniture Store Expansion Program



CLAYTON-LINDBERGH PROJECT—Sketch of addition and existing Bly-Moss West, furnishings and decorator store, as it will look (from the north along Lindbergh boulevard) when $350,000 expansion, now in progress by the E. C. Mikkelson Construction Co., is completed. Louvred canopy will blend new-style architecture with that of old brick schoolhouse out of which original store was developed. Completion by next Dec. 1 is anticipated.

Ground Broken For Bly-Moss, West Expansion

Ground was broken early last week for the first phase of a $350,000 expansion project for Bly-Moss Furniture Co., 10301 Clayton road. The current activity is centered around a new stone and glass building, being erected along the west and north sides of the existing structure.

The groundbreaking marked the end to more than a year of planning and designing by Bernard Bloom, architect, and Norven Bly, president of Bly-Moss.

"We wanted a building designed from a sterile point of view—one that would compliment the merchandise, not overpower it," stated Bly.

"We had to have plain, simple facilities for displaying the modern furniture and accessories in good proportion and good taste," he added.

Bly had reason to chuckle when the crawler tractors lifted the first buckets of earth from the site, for it was just 29 months ago, when Bly-Moss West was opened, that "people said I was unbalanced for moving so far west." At that time two filling stations were the only commercial enterprises at the now-busy intersection of Clayton road and Lindbergh blvd.

The 75-year-old ex-schoolhouse, to which addition is being made formerly was occupied by A. Ziern, proprietor of a now adjacent antique store. The expansion program will place the new building within 18 inches of one of the Ziern buildings.

The new structure will have

Westmoreland Apartments Sold

OVERLOOKING FOREST PARK—Eight-story, fireproof apartment building of 80 units (mostly efficiencies, some bedroom units) at 5330 Pershing avenue, where some of the apartments overlook Forest Park, sold last week for the Westmoreland Apartments Co., of which W. B. Harrison is president, to the Continental Development Corporation of St. Louis, through the Glick Real Estate Co. Rentals were reported as totaling $72,000 a year. Consideration was said to be in excess of $500,000. Financing was arranged through Williams-Kurrus & Co. and legal details of the transaction were handled by Karold Korngold, lawyer.

Gaylord Leases More Space for Offices Here

The Gaylord Container Corp. has increased its office space in the Cotton Belt building at 111 North Fourth street and renewed its lease for a period of five years, it was reported yesterday by Charles H. Christel, president of Rodemyer-Christel & Co., managing agents.

Gaylord has had its headquarters in the Cotton Belt building since 1940 and has occupied the entire second floor, which comprises approximately 25,000 square feet, and a small part of the third floor. Under the terms of the new lease, it will now occupy 9000 square feet of space on the third floor.

The new space will undergo extensive alterations and, like the corporation's present space, will be air-conditioned.

Clarence M. Turley represented Gaylord in the lease negotiations.

Commenting on the lease renewal, Edwin J. Spiegel, president of Gaylord, stressed the desirability of the firm's downtown location.

"Having our headquarters in downtown St. Louis," he said, "provides many advantages that we would not have if we were to move to a suburban area.

"With our offices in the Cotton Belt building, we are close to many of the firms we deal with every day, and we enjoy the benefits of downtown shopping and good public transportation from every part of the city, which is important to many of our employes. We are close to the industrial and suburban communities on the east side; we can make good use of riverfront parking facilities, and we have at our disposal the great variety of goods and services that can be found only in the heart of a large metropolitan area."

Gaylord's newest converting plant also was built within the city limits of St. Louis recently, at 5300 Bircher boulevard.

Christel, speaking for the owners of the building, said, "We are delighted to be able to continue our long-standing relationship with the Gaylord Container Corporation. The corporation's decision is, of course, good for our building. But, more than that, it is good for St. Louis. It is one of many recent indications of the continuing importance and vitality of the downtown business district, which is the heart of our local economy."

BUYS RESIDENCE LOTS

Edward R. Walker, Inc., has purchased two parcels of residential land in Tuscanny Park, one 138 by 120 feet at the southeast corner of Tuscanny Park and Big Bend boulevard and the other, 70 by 192 bfeet, at the northwest corner of Maryland avenue and Big Bend, the Henry R. Weisels Co., agent, reports. Walker plans to build on them, the agent said.

Olive Street Building Sold

BOUGHT FOR SUPPLY COMPANY—Fireproof type building of 20,000 square feet at 3821-25 Olive street, which has been sold for Sam Rich (St. Louis county builder) to Herman J. Hinsman and his wife, both officers of the T. Matthews Upholstering Supply Co., for use by the firm. The entire building will be altered, occupied by the company, a distributorship in the upholstery industry. Expansion is company's third in 12 years. Hinsman was represented in the deal by Norvell Kunz, the seller by the Chauncey P. Heath Realty Co.

Roof Parking Planned for Olive Building

Work is to get under way immediately, the Sleco Construction Co., reported last week, on the building of a one-story building at 2029 Olive street, with parking on the roof, to house offices of the St. Louis Housing Authority and the St. Louis Land Clearance for Redevelopment Authority.

The new structure will adjoin the Sleco Building (formerly Rothschild Hat Building) and will be designed to harmonize with it architecturally. Housing Authority personnel also will occupy remodeled fifth and sixth floors of the Sleco Building.

The new building will have 10,000 square feet of floor space, all of which, together with the space in the older building, has been leased by the "Authorities."

Other tenants who recently have taken long term leases in the Sleco Building are the Victor Adding Machine Co., on the ground floor, and the Repro Color Lithograph Corporation, in the basement. Agents said an insurance company is considering two of the remaining floors of the seven-story building in which extensive remodeling is under way, including air-conditioning and the installation of automatically dispatched elevators. Sleco acquired the tall building from Rothchild Hat Co. last March.

580-Acre Farm In Pike County Changes Hands

A property called the Sharpe Farm, 580 acres with frontage of three-quarters of a mile on Highway 61, about four miles north of Eolia in Pike county, Missouri, has been purchased by John Costello and wife of St. Louis, the Wilson Realty Co. of Washington, Mo., reports. Costello is with the J. H. Costello Co. of St. Louis, makers of cheese products, the agent said.

Consideration was said to be approximately $70,000 for the property, which has a nine-room frame house, a tenant house, a barn and silo, several Govern-planned ponds.

Sellers of the property were the Davis brothers, Ray, Ralph and Herbert.

Details of the negotiations were handled by Walter Botkin, farm agent and representative of the Wilson agency in the Eolia area.

Wilson said he understood the buyer plans some further improvement of the property, including the drilling of a well or wells, and that the development of a herd of pure bred Angus beef cattle was in prospect.

Tighter Money Moves Slow To Affect Realty

By ROBERT F. MORISON
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 6—Effects of the stiffer government guaranteed housing loan requirements recently promulgated are not likely to be felt for some time.

Officials of both the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration are watching the market to see what happens to new home building once the reduction in maximum loan maturity from 30 to 25 years and the 2 percent hike in down payments is felt.

Officials explained that the twin moves were aimed at "slowing things down a little bit." But none would estimate how deeply the tightening will cut into production.

One government official said no "significant decline" is expected probably only after the current house building season is over can any estimate of the effect be made, he said.

He thought January would be a good indicator month.

Want No Creeping.

Officials explained that the move was not directed against the volume of new building—top administration officials have said they see no evidence of overbuilding—but rather to forestall inflationary trends. Prices "have been creeping up" the last few months in various items used in construction. Although these rises have been largely absorbed, officials said, "that can't go on indefinitely."

The National Association of Home Builders disagreed with the government's move and flatly predicted an annual cut of 100,000 new units in housing starts next year, once the present backlog of mortgages already approved is gone through. The NAHB fixed the value of these units at $1,000,000,000.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards, too, condemned the moves and said the government's "expressed fear of future shortages in certain building materials . . . is likely to have the effect of an invitation to hoarding building ma-

Loft Factory On Washington Air-Conditioned

A downtown St. Louis loft factory, perhaps the first of its kind (or at least one of a few) has just been completely air conditioned. It is the 28,000-square-foot operation of the Waber Shoe Trimming Co., with an average personnel of 250, in the third and fourth (top) floors of the building at 2128 Washington avenue.

Many downtown St. Louis office buildings already are completely air conditioned, as are many retail stores, and some partial air conditioning has been done in connection with loft-factory operations, but not many complete jobs have been developed so far. Air conditioning is extended to factory areas in many of the newer. one-floor operations in outlying areas, but loft-factory operations have been slow to switch over. Part of this has been due, no doubt, to the fact that both DC and AC current are prevalent in the downtown area and that the switch from old DC operations to AC is a somewhat slow process.

Waber Shoe, whose home office is in New York City, sent out the authorization for air conditioning of the factory here to the St. Louis general manager, I. G. Gaghey, and the job has just been brought to completion. The conditioners were turned on right in the middle of last week's hottest period, pulled temperatures in the factory areas from somewhere in the top nineties to comfortable seventies.

Installation in the old Washington loft building involved insulation of ceilings with fiber glass, caulking of windows, the installation of two new power lines to carry 208-volt current (the downtown power grid doesn't get up to 220) from the building's basement up to the factory floors (a line for each floor). Cooling towers were built on the roof, since the system installed uses water. Installation was by the H. H. Emmerson Co.

Gaghey said equipment rated for 25 tons of cooling was installed on the third floor and for 28 tons on the fourth floor. The fourth floor has some extra high ceiling (18 feet) at one point.

In connection with the air-conditioning work, Gaghey also said that all DC electrical service to the factory is being discontinued, with wiring for AC taking over the load. Many electric-motor powered machines are used in the factory.

A Union Electric Company spokesman estimated that the Waber installation will use approximately 60 kilowatts per hour of power during the time it is operated. The company generally figures the major air-conditioning load to run from May to October inclusive, with peaks in July and August, a total (roughly) of 1000 to 1200 hours.

CONVENTION EXPECTS 5000

The forty-eighth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards is expected to attract more than 5000 realtors to New York City from Nov. 6-10, 1955.

Realty Board Signs Many to Eastern Trip

With the forty-eighth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards still more than three months away, the St. Louis Real Estate Board has signed up 115 persons as delegates to the convention, C. C. Lang, executive secretary of the local board reported last week.

The convention is scheduled for the week of Nov. 6-10, with headquarters in the Commodore Hotel. Lang said hotel reservations anywhere in the city will have to be made early to assure accomodations and will be handled for local real estate dealers and their wives by the local board. The St. Louis delegation will go east on a New York Central special, leaving Friday, Nov. 4. Officially, the St. Louis delegation will be housed in the Roosevelt hotel.

Side trips to Bermuda and Nassau will follow the convention and some of the St. Louis group probably will take the steamer trips.

Delegates so far include:

Air-Condition

also some legal requirements to follow.

"Although there has been a requirement in the building code since 1945 that a permit must be secured for the installation of air conditioning equipment, too many units are being installed without the necessary permits. All air conditioning installers placing equipment into buildings are jeopardizing the full use of the equipment by the owners, because illegal installations are subjetc to being sealed and the owners and contractors made liable to possible fines in courts.

Nothing to Fear.

"Any installer having a properly designed air conditioning plant or refrigeration equipment has nothing to fear in presenting adequate plans and specifications to the Section of Mechanical Equipment in the Division of Building and Inspection, and securing a permit to place the machines, ducts, piping and safety gadgets.

"One might ask, why is it necessary to secure a permit to install something with which the installer is perfectly familiar?" This might be a good question if all installers were equally competent. Unfortunately, this is not the case. We in the Building Division have found too many omissions and incomplete installations made by some of the best air conditioning and refrigeration talent.

"Further, air conditioning units are mechanical devices, as are boilers and elevators. Permits and periodical inspections are required on these, too, just like permits and inspections are necessary for the hundreds of physical and structural items entering general building construction.

"Air conditioning and refrigeration units use gases under high pressures, some noxious; connections are made to water and sewer systems, electrical connections are needed and duct systems are employed to distribute cooled air to many parts of the buildings. Inspections are therefore required by mechanical, plumbing and electrical inspectors to see that all of the necessary and required precautions have been taken to make the use of the air conditioning equipment safe for the public.

Some Involve Plumbing.

"The Building Division is not concerned with the size, type or cost of an installation, provided it is safe to the citizens and has been installed in accordance with the laws enacted by the Board of Aldermen.

"Prior to the adoption of the Building Code in 1945, the sections on ventillation, air conditioning, and refrigeration had been carefully reviewed and revised by a group of the best known engineers in the industry.

"Some air conditioning and refrigeration units need water for cooling purposes, therefore, water lines and sewer connections require the services of a licensed master plumber. Plumbers, too, must follow the provisions of the building code, and therefore plastic pipe cannot be used for these connections. Plastic pipe is a new material and has not had the test of time to determine its safe use for all conditions; therefore, it is not yet permitted to be used, and no permits for its use can be issued until the proper amendment has been been made to the Plumbing Code.

"These thoughts and observations may be summarized as follows:

"1—Air conditioning and refrigeration installations require the contractor or owner or his agent to secure a permit from the Section of Mechanical Equipment.

"2—Those installations having electrical connections require also a permit from the Electrical Section of the Department of Public Utilities.

"3—Those installations having water and sewer connections require a permit from the Plumbing section in the Division of Building and Inspection.

"4—Before the air conditioning installation is approved, evidence of plumbing and electrical permits will have to be produced.

"5—No air conditioning or refrigeration plant may be put into operation until an operating certificate has been issued by the Section of Mechanical Equipment.

"6—All refrigeration equipment over one ton capacity requires a permit and annual inspection.

"7—Air conditioning equipment, duct work and electrical safety controls are subject to biannual inspections by the Section of Mechanical Equipment.

"8—Any violations of these provisions subject the installations to being sealed, and thereby made useless to the owner.

"Installers of this type equipment can save themselves and their clients a great deal of grief, and maintain much better public relations, if all work is done in accordance with the code requirements. The city is not interested in profits or losses, only safety to its people in the places in which such equipment is used," Sestric concluded.

Single-family house building accounted for nearly nine in 10 of all the 1,220,400 new permanent nonfarm dwellings started in 1954, the news letter of the National Association of Real Estate Boards reports on the basis of figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

26-Acre Site On Goodfellow Is Assembled

B. L. Bearman, who is reported planning the promotion of an industrial subdivision, has purchased 26 acres of ground on the west side of Goodfellow boulevard about 1000 feet south of Natural Bridge road for the project.

The tract was assembled for Bearman by Real Estate Dealer Edward Glik from three owners, Oscar E. Buder, the City of St. Louis and Roy Ardrey.

The tract runs west from Goodfellow to Hamilton avenue and also has frontages on streets called Chevrolet avenue and Greer avenue on the south. The property is near the St. Louis city limits, not far from where St. Louis joins Pine Lawn and is said to be one of few still unused and undeveloped pieces of property within the city zoned for industrial purposes.

S-A-V-E! ON AIR CONDITIONING WITH aluma kraft ALUMINUM AWNINGS

Made Here in St. Louis!

The addition of "ALUMA KRAFT" Aluminum Awnings to your home means you'll require an air conditioning unit of smaller, less expensive size than would otherwise be necessary since the heat load it will have to offset will be smaller. If you already have air-conditioning in your home . . . "ALUMA KRAFT" Awnings will cut down the cost of operating your cooling system considerably. In an awning shaded home, there is less inside heat. The air-conditioner does less work with a consequent reduction in cost of operation.

Bender Buys Mallory Motor And Property

Ken Bender, who was with the Mallory Motor Co., (Lincoln-Mercury dealership) at 2807 Olive street, has purchased the company's business and real estate, he reported to the Post-Dispatch last week.

Bender took over, effective last July 1, and the company now is called the Bender Motor Co. The action comes just about simultaneously with the Ford Motor Co.'s move to develop separate Lincoln and Mercury dealerships and the new Bender company will handle Mercury only.

The property consists of a high-ceilinged one-story sales and service building (including a body shop) on the north side of Olive (2807) on a 137 by 102-foot lot, and a used car lot 92 by 102 feet on the south side of Olive, just about across the street from the building, and west of Leffingwell avenue.

Ground Broken

canopies jutting 12 feet from both the Clayton road and Lindbergh blvd. sides.

Most unusual part of the building will be the ceilings—both of which will be the open web type, where joists, beams, conduit, and other materials will be exposed. Spotlights, clamped to the overhead ironwork, will play upon merchandise.

According to E. C. Mikkelsen, general contractor, this will be the first utilization of the open web type ceiling in a finished display area in the United States.

Also to be exposed are the steel columns, both inside and outside the building. Colors for these, as well as the ceiling, will be selected by Bly from a field of colors used in the business.

The east elevation (facing Lindbergh, just north of the existing structure) will have a half-wall of Colorado red stone, set in a random ashlar pattern. The upper half of the wall will be glass. Stone work will continue into the interior, past the double glass doors. This entry will have a monolithic green slate floor, also continuing inside the building.

In direct contrast to the open web ceiling will be the pure white terrazzo floors. A six-foot-wide open staircase, also of white terrazzo, will be located along the north wall.

An eight-foot sidewalk will separate the north wall — a solid expense of glass broken only by supporting members—from a 60-car parking area.

The wall facing Clayton road, just west of the old building, will also be of glass, with a sidewalk impregnated with carborundum (to give a sparkling effect) separating it from a smaller parking area.

The total new construction will approximate 22,000 square feet of floor area, bringing the total area of Bly-Moss West to nearly 30,000 square feet.

"The expansion plan will enable us to effect a more complete showing of both upholstered and case goods," Bly stated. "The older building will house our gift shop and the decorating department."

The basement of the existing structure will be used for receiving, and will also house the heating and 50-ton air conditioning plants.

"We're building with expansion in mind," Bly stated. "Within a few years after this work is finished, we intend to split the north wall down the middle, pivot it to add more frontal area, and add another 15,000 square feet with the resultant tri-level expansion," he added.

CARONDELET AVENUE PROJECT—Sketch by William J. Neumann of new Beck Building, which Walter Beck is erecting at 7811 Carondelet avenue, Clayton, to house some 45 suites of air-conditioned offices. The building will be owned by Beck Building, Inc., a corporation of which Walter Beck is president, Miss Louise Knaup vice-president and treasurer. A three-floor structure, the building will be of concrete, steel, brick, glass in steel and aluminum, with a poured gypsum roof. The lowest floor will be seven feet below grade at some points, due to the nature of the terrain, providing a "split-level effect" and eliminating the need of elevators. Design and engineering are by C. E. Smith & Co. Plastering is in progress and completion by Nov.1 is anticipated.

terials and boosting their prices."

For a $15,000 home, the FHA said, a buyer will now have to put down about $2300 and pay $75.73 a month, including principle and interest, for 25 years. Under previous terms, he would have to make a five per cent minimum down payment or about $2000 on the same house any pay $71.20 for 30 years.

For the same home, the VA said, a prospective G.I. buyer must now pay two per cent, or $300 down and $81.70 a month, including principle and interest, for 25 years. Before last week the buyer could, if the lending agency was willing, put nothing down and pay $76.05 a month, including interest and principle, for 30 years.

Typical conventional loan terms, according to the U.S. Savings and Loan League are now 20 per cent down and, in the case of the hypothetical $15,000 home, pay $79.20 a month, including interest and principle, for 20 to 25 years.

Last week's order did not effect VA or FHA interest rates. VA interest is still 4½ per cent and FHA insured loans are for 4½, plus one-half per cent for the agency's insurance fund to cover losses. The rate on conventional loans is five per cent.

Water Company Lets Contract For Addition

The construction contract for a $150,000 office and garage addition to the service building of the St. Louis County Water Co. has been awarded to Woermann Construction Co.

The addition, to be started later this month, will provide about 10,000 square feet more of garage space and another 6000 square feet of office space; more than double the size of this unit of the water company.

The office addition will be a second floor to the present office area with matching exterior finish of tan brick and aluminum and glass sandwich panels.

A new and larger garage of concrete, brick and steel will be constructed on slightly higher ground next to the present garage.

Scheduled for completion early next spring, the service building is headquarters for all customer services of the water company, including pipeline construction, maintenance, installation, inspection and emergency crews and equipment. More than 100 cars, trucks and pieces of construction equipment operate from the garage, while the office area houses the meter repair department and is central radio control for all company radio-equipped vehicles.

Murphy & Mackey, architects for the entire building, designed the office so that a second floor could be added, and the need for it has come quickly.

Other facilities currently under construction for the St. Louis County Water Co. include a new south county plant, near Gravois road and the Meramec river, also by Woerman, and a new office building on Delmar boulevard near McKnight road, by Vollmar Bros. Construction Co.

Your Lawn Stays Green . . . . . When Other Grass Burns Brown!
Amazing New Grass Thrives Best When Planted in Hot Weather
RESISTS DROUGHTS!
ORIGINAL ZOYSIA FARM NURSERIES AMAZOY MEYER Z-52 ZOYSIA GRASS
As featured in LOOK Magazine Editorially August 1, 1955
GROWS SO THICK IT CROWDS OUT CRAB GRASS • Requires 2/3 less mowing • Grows well in any soil • Even Grows On Steep Hills!
Now's the perfect time to plant this amazing new grass discovery. Genuine AMAZOY Meyer-52 Zoysia Grass forms a thick velvety turf which goes weeks without water and actually thrives in this hot weather. Not grown from seed, genuine AMAZOY comes to you only in two-inch round plugs which can be put into your present lawn or newly prepared ground on 12-inch centers. Goes off color after extreme frosts, regains its color in the spring. As they grow and spread AMAZOY plugs choke out old grass and weeds . . . giving you a beautiful green, velvet-smooth lawn.
This superior grass has been developed and approved by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture and Greens Section of the U.S. Golf Assn. Supply is limited, so send for genuine AMAZOY, the wonder grass, today. Please enclose check or money-order. Sorry, No C.O.D.
ATTENTION!
Here's why turf experts recommend that Zoysia Grass be planted in round plugs. Sprigs die easily and when you cut sod, you lose material and damage the roots.
1. ROUND PLUGS are easier to plant. It's always easier to dig a round hole than a square one. The round plug fits right into the round hole just like a cork goes into a bottle—makes a surer transplant.
2. ROUND PLUGS contain many more square inches of thick underground root system.
3. ROUND PLUGS reach you in better condition—they're compact and don't fall apart.
4. ROUND PLUGS offer more rapid growth.
IT'S EASY TO PLANT AMAZOY. Use any tool or our handy Plugger. Simple and complete instructions with each order.
EACH AMAZOY PLUG SUPPLIES 50 TRANSPLANTS YEARLY
Once you plant all your AMAZOY plugs and they grow to the point of covering your planted area solidly, you can transplant plugs. Simply take 20 to 25 plugs per sq. ft. twice a year, from the original planted area, and place them in the new area to be planted.

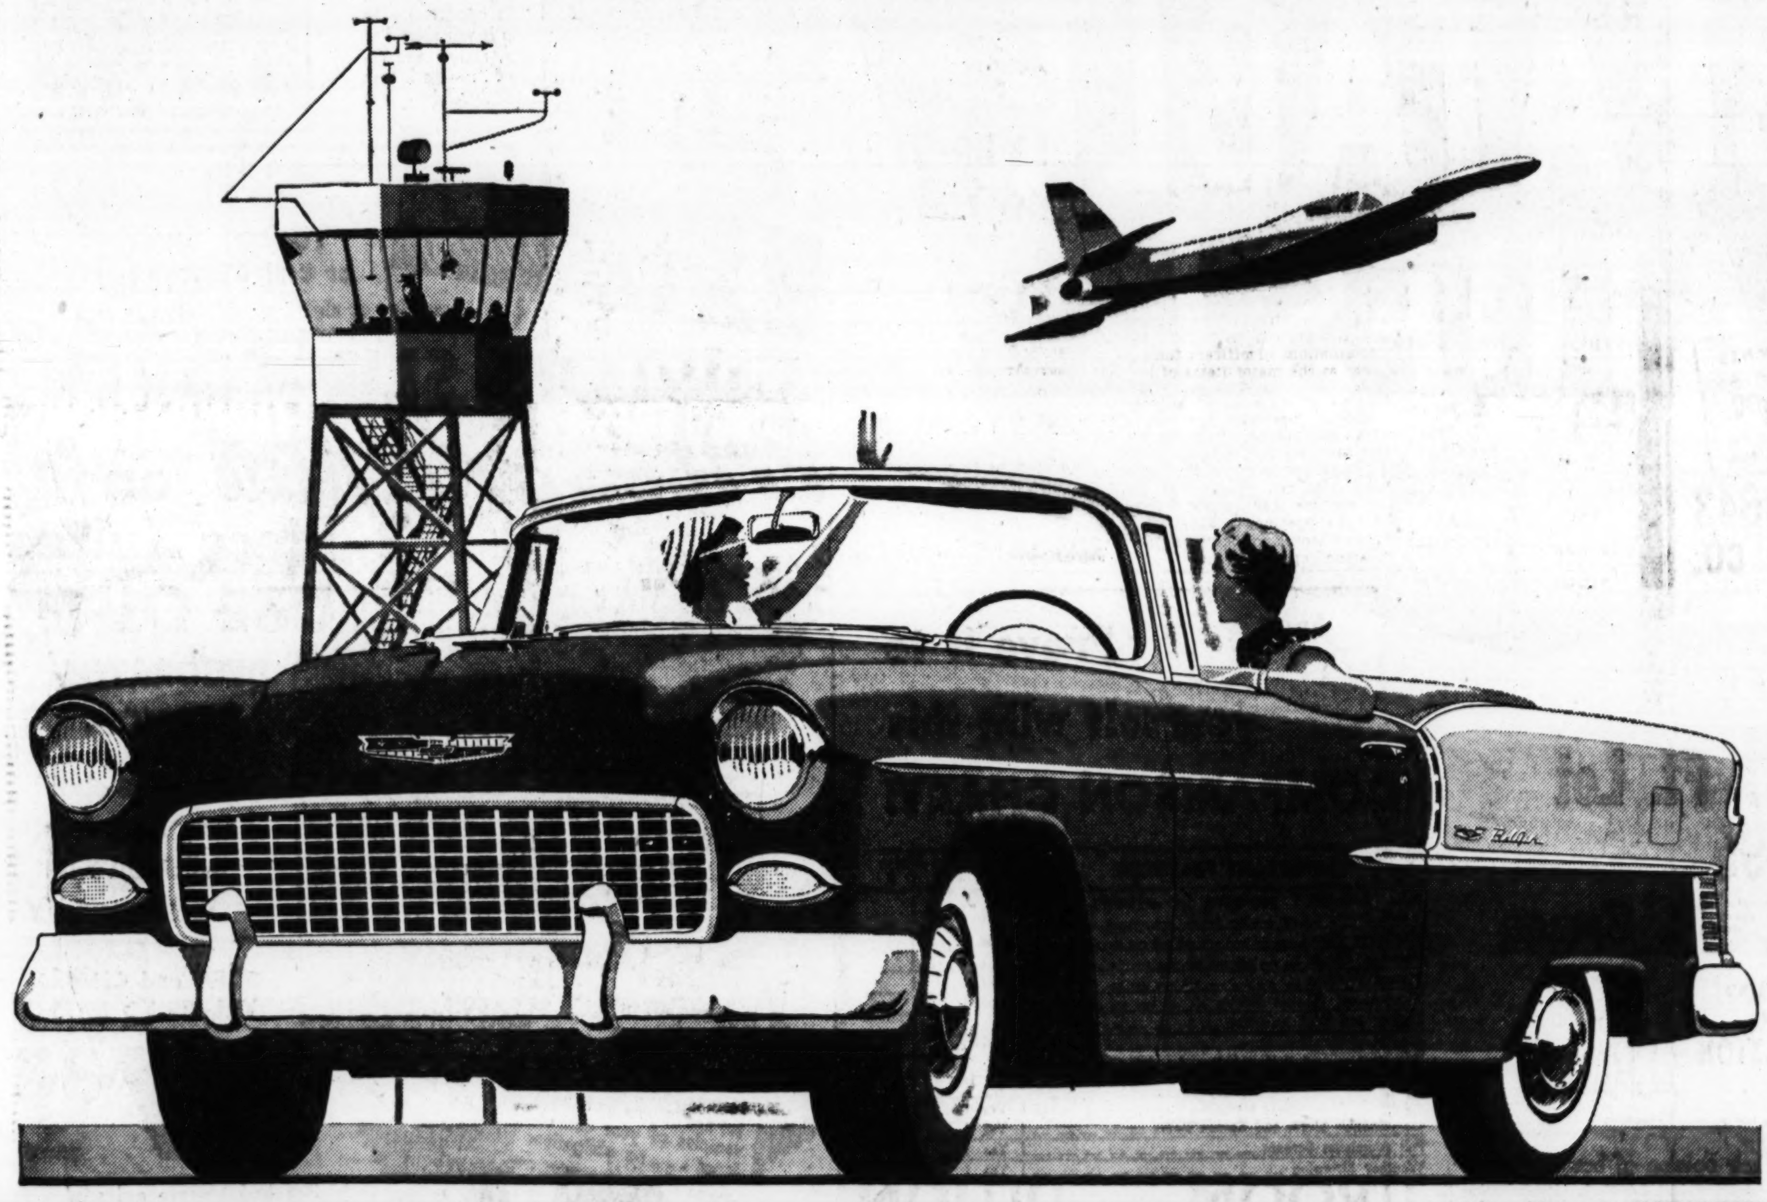
Nothing GOES like a Chevrolet V8!



Drive with care . . . EVERYWHERE!

It's the new winner in stock car competition . . .

and it's winning new, young-minded friends faster than you can say America's hottest V8.

Because of its liveliness, its looks, and because it holds the road like it loves it—which it does.

Come try it, won't you, if only for the fun of it!

See Your Chevrolet Dealer

NOTHING
(not even the high-priced cars)
HAS GOT SO MUCH TO GO WITH!

The most up-to-date V8

Chevrolet "Turbo-Fire" — that's the quick way to say "the most modern, and the goingest, V8 on the road"! So advanced in design and so efficient in operation that it needs only 4 quarts of oil instead of the usual 5. Shortest stroke of any V8 in the industry. Delivers more horsepower per pound than any engine in Chevrolet's field. Take your choice of the 162-h.p. "Turbo-Fire" or the 180-h.p. "Super Turbo-Fire," optional at extra cost.

Two Sizzling 6's

If you go for 6's, Chevrolet offers two that will really go for you! They're the most powerful 6's in Chevrolet's field — with all the advantages of Chevrolet's long leadership in valve-in-head engine design. And like the V8's, they give you the extra punch, performance and reserve power of the only 12-volt electrical system in Chevrolet's field.

Powerglide, Overdrive or Synchro-Mesh

OVERDRIVE

Chevrolet gives you the drive to suit your driving. A new and finer Synchro-Mesh transmission, or, as extra-cost options, oil-smooth Powerglide automatic transmission or Touch-Down Overdrive. It all adds up to nine engine-drive combinations available on all models—the greatest choice going!

New engineering advances on steering, springing, suspension

Special ball bearings in the steering gear roll with the turn of the wheel to reduce friction. Special spherical joints in the Glide-Ride front suspension roll the bumps smooth. Outrigger rear springs straighten the curves. This new Chevrolet rides, handles and corners like no Chevrolet ever did before!

WHEN'S FURNACE NOT A FURNACE? SOME ANSWERS

When is a furnace not a furnace?

Well, that depends on whether you're a steel maker, petroleum refiner, glass producer, baker, foundryman or tile manufacturer.

A furnace figures prominently in all those operations, but a furnace is a furnace only to a man who makes steel or heat-treats other metals. The petroleum people, on the other hand, mean furnace when they say "cracker," the equipment in which crude oil is divided into its various components.

In the glass business you say "lehr" if you mean furnace. What is known as glass blank is annealed as it moves in a continuous ribbon through the lehr at high gas-heat and emerges ready for polishing.

No matter how big a furnace the large-scale bakers use, they all call it an oven, although technically, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association insists it is a furnace.

Foundrymen use gas furnaces, too, but they know them as "hearths." The hearth, of course, is the part of a furnace on which the ore is laid to be subjected to the action of gas-firing.

Then, by way of pursuing the inconsistency of nomenclature in the furnace business, the brick and clay tile industries call their furnaces "kilns." The kiln is used for baking, burning or drying and, in the case of tile production, creates an internal atmosphere in which the fuel itself—natural gas—becomes an actual ingredient of the tile.

And just to complicate the thing still further, there is the coffee company's "roaster" and the United States Mint's "annealer." They're furnaces, too.

But GAMA wants you to know that, if you think the gas furnace in your basement is called a furnace, you're right.

MISSOURI RHINELAND

River Valley Near Hermann Reminded German Settlers of Home

By CHARLES MENEES of the PICTURES Staff

IT WAS SCENERY LIKE THIS, much like that of their native Rhineland, that played a major role in attracting the German founders of Hermann, Missouri, 118 years ago. Scouts of the German Settlement Society of Philadelphia felt nostalgic reminders of fatherland countryside when they saw the peaceful, blue-hazed hills along the Missouri River. The brown loess soil of the river bluffs was so much like that of Rhine River hills that grapes were certain to thrive.

Between 1844 and the Prohibition era Hermann was widely known as a wine-making community. Today few vineyards remain; some of the old wine cellars are used for growing mushrooms. The hills are used for grain crops, orchards, cattle grazing.

This view is to the west, looking upstream on the Missouri River from Harrison's Hill, about two miles west of Hermann. The photograph was taken from a second-story window of the William Harrison home, once the residence of one of the owners of the old Stone Hill Wine Company. At one time this firm was the second largest winery in the United States, had the largest series of underground cellars in the world.

The bluff at left, about three miles away, is Birkel Hill, with Missouri Pacific Railroad tracks curving around its base. At other side of the hill is the confluence of the Gasconade and Missouri rivers. Cole Creek empties into the river this side of Birkel Hill. Bluffs in the distance are about 18 miles away. On clear nights lights of Jefferson City, about 45 miles upstream, may be seen from Harrison Hill. This hill, which rises 430 feet above the river and is one of the highest points in the area, also affords a view into six different counties—Callaway, Montgomery and Warren on the north bank of the river, Osage, Gasconade and Franklin on the south.

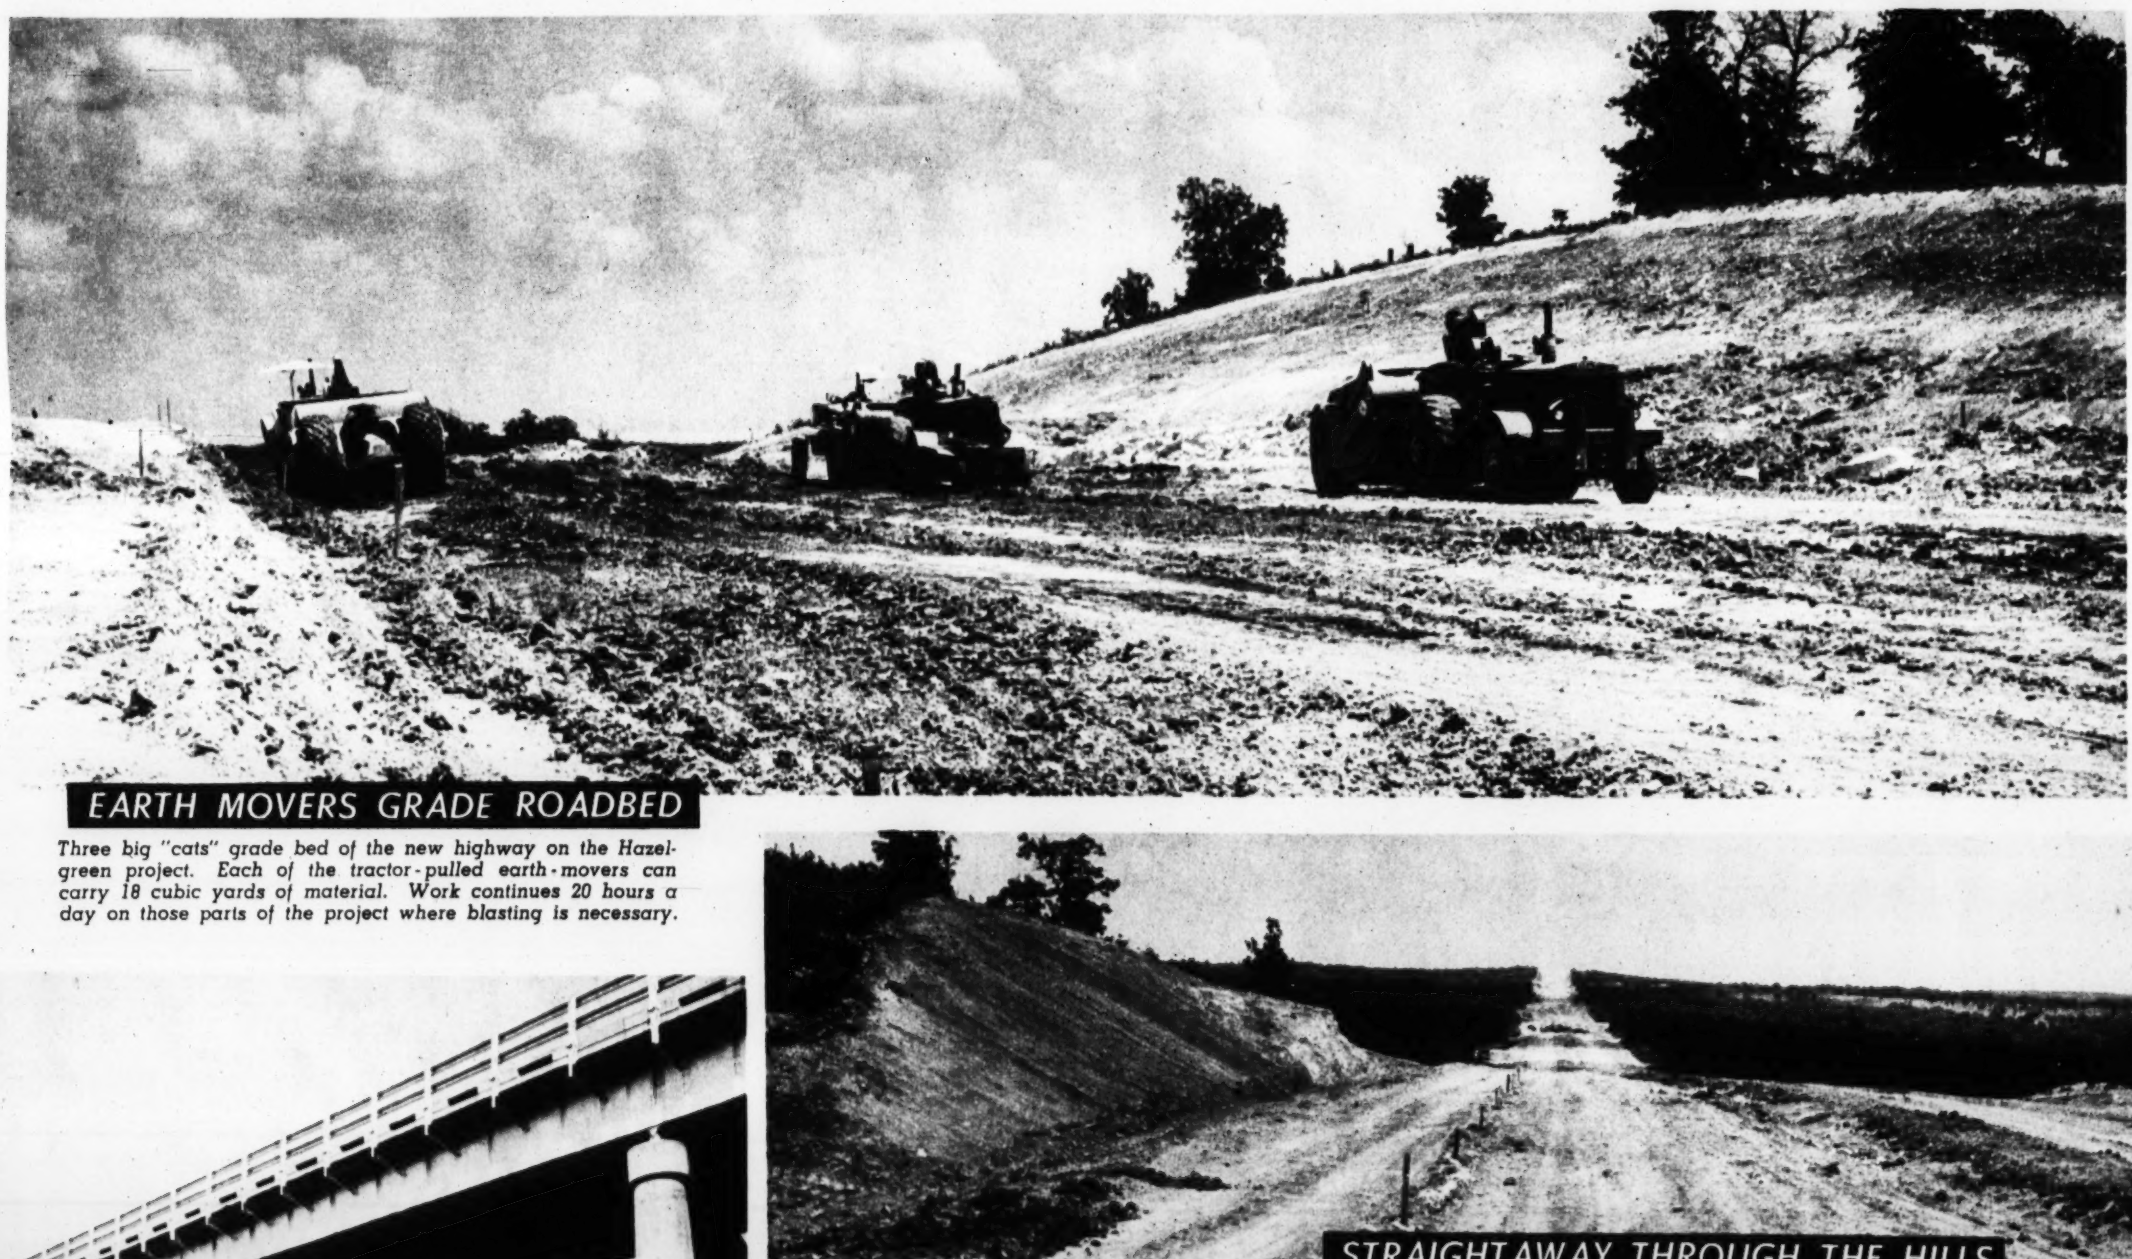
FASTER, SAFER ROUTE 66 TAKES FORM

DYNAMITE CLEARS AN OBSTRUCTION

In a 20,000-ton heave, rock and earth are raised into the air by the blast of 2000 pounds of dynamite on Highway 66 relocation project near Hazelgreen, between Rolla and Lebanon. Here a 10-mile stretch of new dual highway is being constructed to replace the old twisting road. A great deal of blasting is necessary in cutting the new roadway through the Ozark country, where rock is close to the surface.



EARTH MOVERS GRADE ROADBED

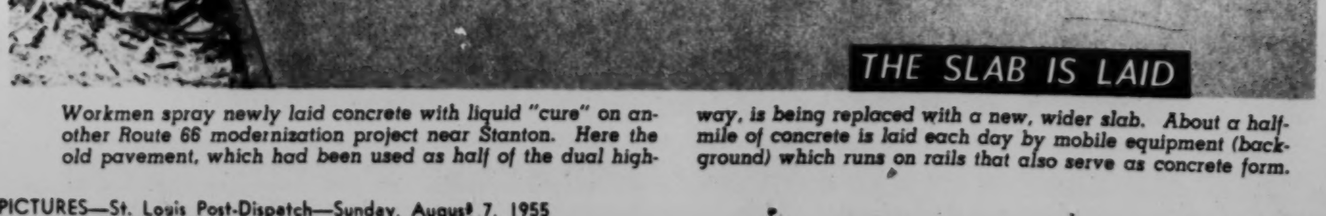
Three big "cats" grade bed of the new highway on the Hazelgreen project. Each of the tractor-pulled earth-movers can carry 18 cubic yards of material. Work continues 20 hours a day on those parts of the project where blasting is necessary.

STRAIGHTAWAY THROUGH THE HILLS

The new roadway runs arrow-straight through the hills near Hazelgreen, in contrast to old highway which winds up, down and around in the tortuous fashion of a wagon trail. Thirty-two curves in the old road were eliminated by one 26-mile section of new construction.

DUAL LANES, SEPARATE BRIDGES

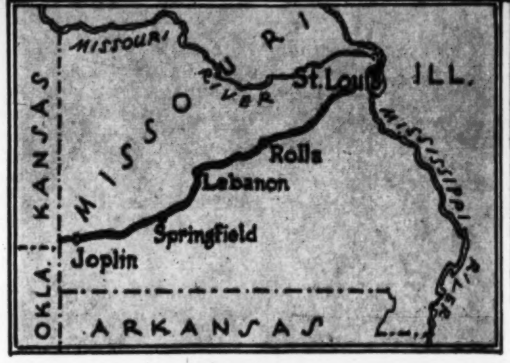
Route 66 crosses the Little Piney River west of Rolla on two bridges, the new span in the foreground carrying west-bound traffic, the old one east-bound. Old bridges are being used for one lane of the dual highway when they are considered adequate for modern traffic needs.



THE SLAB IS LAID

Workmen spray newly laid concrete with liquid "cure" on another Route 66 modernization project near Stanton. Here the old pavement, which had been used as half of the dual highway, is being replaced with a new, wider slab. About a half-mile of concrete is laid each day by mobile equipment (background) which runs on rails that also serve as concrete form.

Hazardous Old Highway Is Being Rebuilt From St. Louis to Oklahoma, With Dual Lanes, Town Bypasses, Few Curves



A big earth mover dumps its heavy load in making a fill for the new highway near Hazelgreen. The old road in that area will be left for local traffic. Map at left shows route of Highway 66 across Missouri. The Illinois segment of 66, from St. Louis to Chicago, also is a dual artery much of the way.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

UNITED STATES ROUTE 66 across Missouri, long detested by motorists because of its steep hills, sharp curves and narrow pavement, is being transformed into a superhighway. Much of the 220-mile distance from St. Louis to Springfield is now traversed by a modern traffic artery with separate double lanes for vehicles moving in opposite directions. More miles are presently undergoing reconstruction, and within a few years—perhaps by 1958—the dual facility will extend to the Oklahoma line, where it will connect with that state's proposed turnpike network.

The new 66 is vastly different from the old road, which was laid down in the days of the Model T. Safety has been designed into every mile of the twin ribbons of concrete which sweep unobstructed through the rolling Ozark countryside. Gone are the steep grades, the turns and twists, the dangerous intersections, the narrow bridges, and the small-town bottlenecks that made 66 a motorist's nightmare. Grade separations eliminate cross traffic, towns are bypassed, access to the highway is limited.

While modernization of Missouri's section of the transcontinental route began in 1946, most of the work—costing some $37,000,000 to date—has been completed since 1952. This year eight projects involving 71 miles of roadway and totaling $12,000,000 are under contract. Among these are new bridges across the Meramec River a few miles southwest of St. Louis which will afford separate double lanes for east- and west-bound traffic. In several places the old slab serving as half of the dual highway is being replaced with new pavement. West of Rolla, workmen are literally blasting a new roadway through the hills.

Future improvements on the eastern end of Route 66 include construction of the Ozark Expressway from downtown St. Louis to Lindbergh boulevard, which will form a new 66 city route, and elimination of the three-lane "suicide alley" in St. Louis and Franklin counties. Thus the dual highway, which now ends at the Highway 50 intersection west of Gray Summit, will continue right to St. Louis' riverfront doorstep.

On the western end of 66, according to the Missouri Highway Commission's timetable, the dual roadway should be pushed to Lebanon in 1956, to Springfield in 1957, and probably to Joplin and the Oklahoma line in 1958, funds permitting. Missouri's low 3-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax, which provides road-building revenue, necessarily limits the state's highway improvement program. For interstate highway work, the Federal Government contributes $6 for every $4 put up by the state. Under the recently defeated federal highway program, federal aid would have been on a 9-to-1 basis.

Few motorists zipping over the new 66 realize they are traveling much the same route that was padded by moccasined Indian feet in bygone centuries, and rutted by wagons and stagecoaches in pre-Civil War days. During its long and eventful history, the road has had many official and unofficial names.

In the Indian era it was called the Kickapoo trace. Later it was called the Springfield road, still later the old wire road, because of the telegraph line that ran beside it. When it became a state highway in 1922, the winding dirt road was designated Missouri Route 14, but soon thereafter main roads were given names and No. 14 became the Ozark Trail Highway. Its present designation as U.S. 66 came in 1929 when it was made a federal highway. In recent years it has become known as Bloody 66 because of the great number of accidents occurring on the heavily traveled road.

First paved portion of the road was the seven-mile stretch from Joplin to the Kansas line, completed in 1920. Paving of its entire 313-mile length across the state was finished in the early 1930s, the 18-foot-wide slab being quite adequate for the vehicles of that day. But that day is long gone. The new 66 through Missouri promises to be one of the country's finest highways—the kind of road that restores pleasure to pleasure trips, makes motoring a joy instead of a chore.

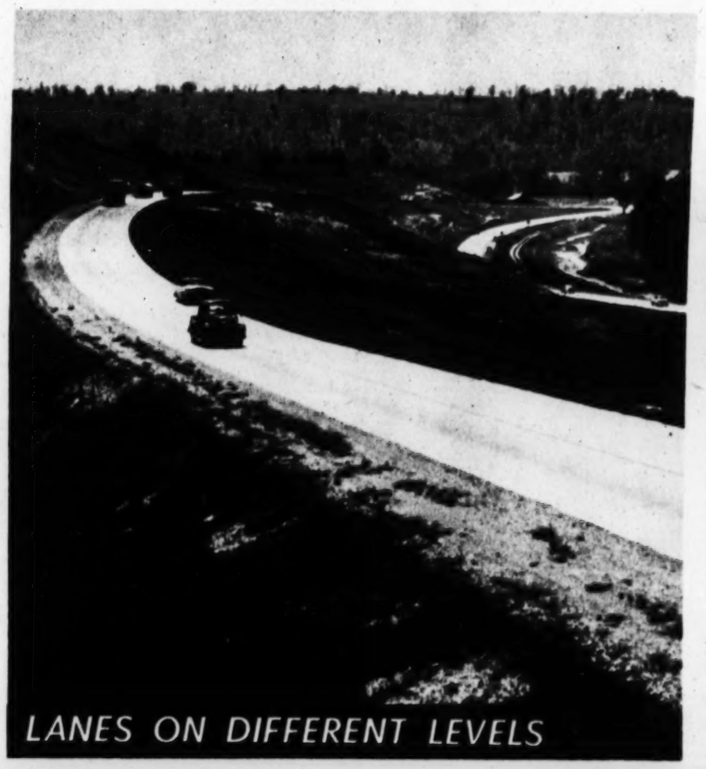
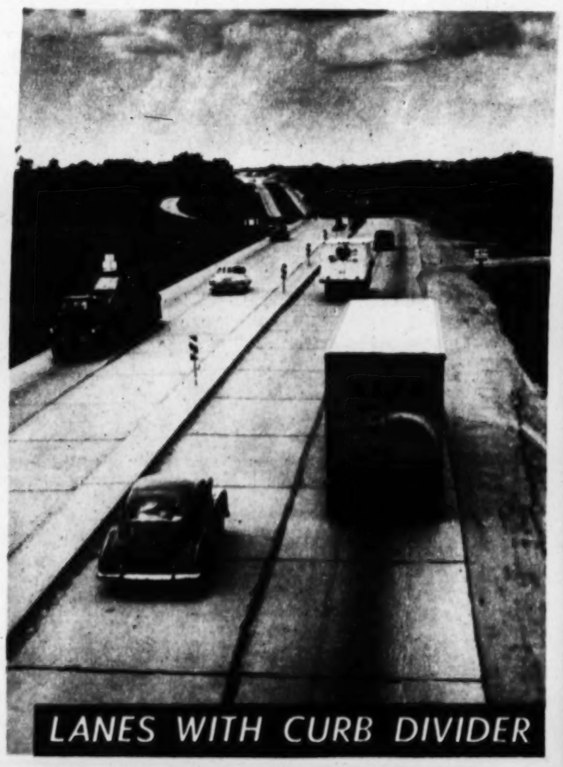
LANES WITH MEDIAN STRIP

Dual highway, with two 12-foot lanes on either side of median strip, long sight distances, gentle grades and curves, limited access and grade separations at major intersections, meets highest standards of modern construction. This photo was made at the Bourbeuse River in Franklin County, eastern terminus of the Route 66 dual facility, 44 miles southwest of St. Louis.



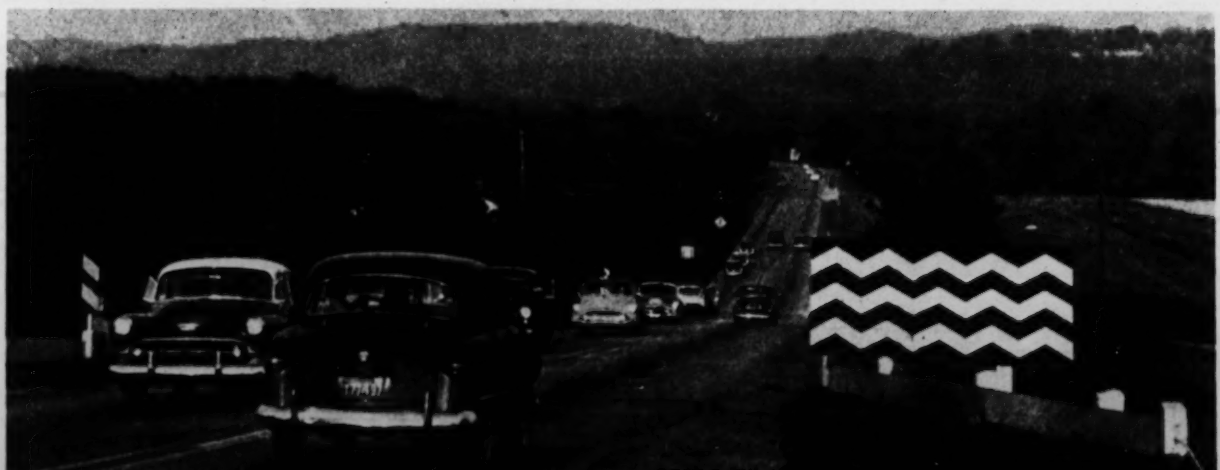
LANES ON DIFFERENT LEVELS

East- and west-bound lanes of the dual 66, west of Rolla, are widely separated and on different levels. On some sections of the superhighway where old pavement is still in use the lanes are a half-mile or more apart. Parts of Route 40 between St. Louis and Kansas City also have been made a dual highway.



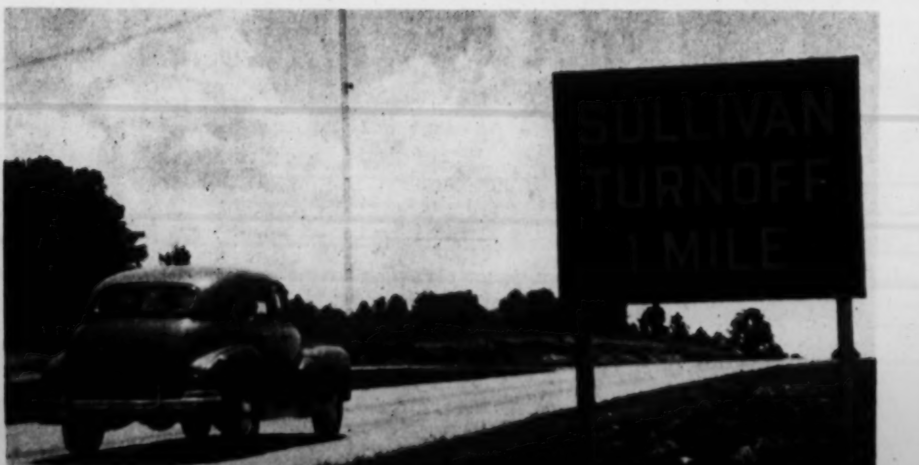
LANES WITH CURB DIVIDER

At St. Clair turnoff, curb separates the lanes. Route 66 is Missouri's most heavily traveled highway, carrying average of 6000 vehicles in 24-hour period; second busiest is Route 40, with 4000-per-day average.



HAZARDOUS OLD BOTTLENECK

Dangerous, congested three-lane section of 66 west of St. Louis suddenly narrows to two lanes on bridges and viaducts, as at this point where it overpasses railroad tracks near Eureka. New bridges and viaducts are now under construction to relieve this hazardous condition.



ADVANCE NOTICE OF TURNOFF

Traffic flows fast and safely on dual highway, uninterrupted by small towns. Turnoffs to bypassed towns are marked with large signs well in advance to give high-speed drivers ample warning. In background is radio-relay tower.

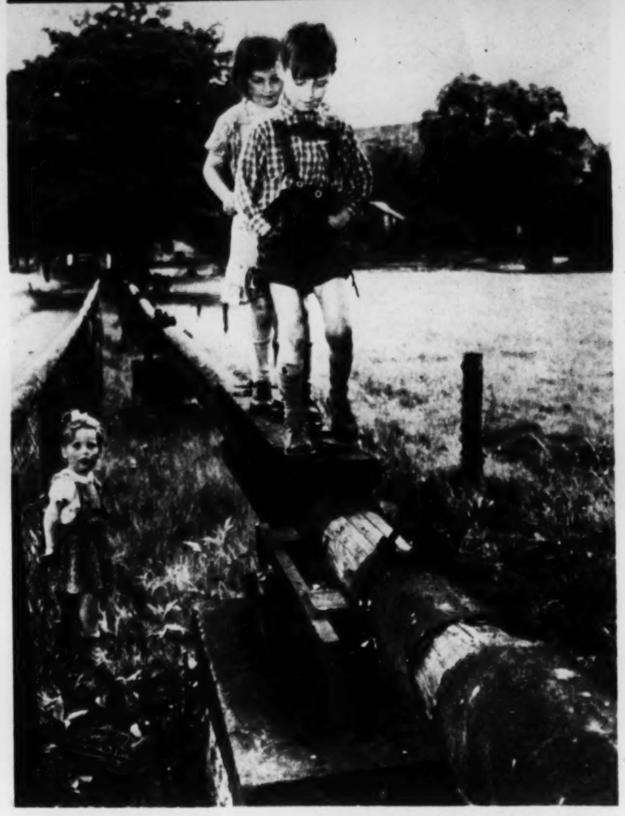
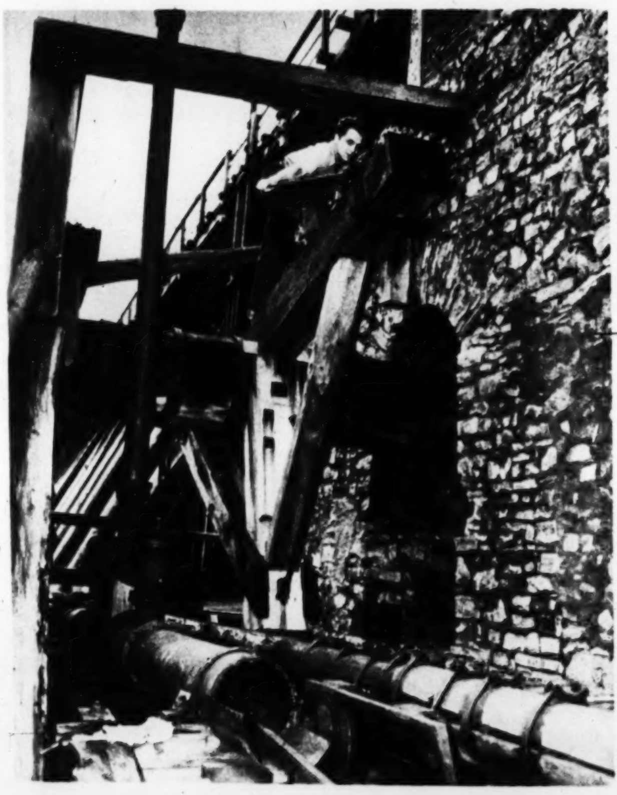
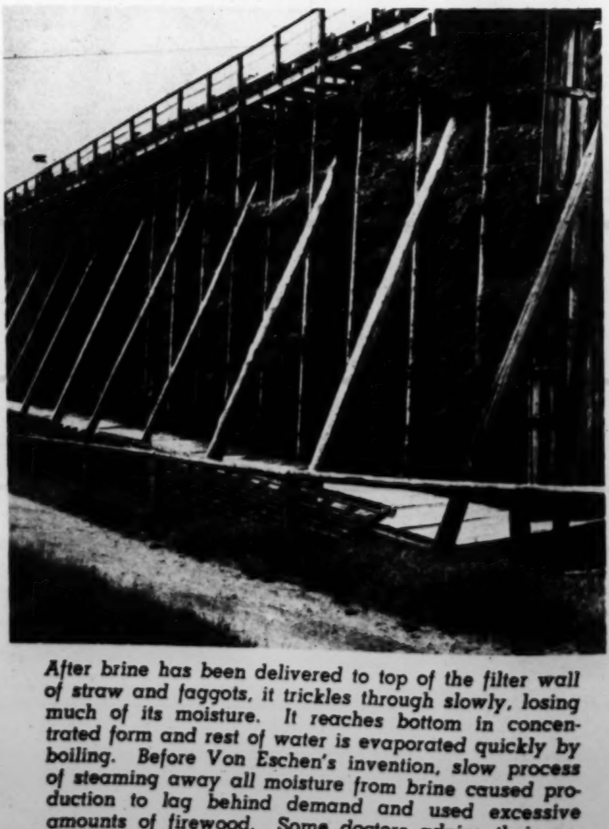
Half-Mile Rod Drives a Pump



These children are riding an ancient wooden drive rod that moves ponderously back and forth to transfer power from a water wheel to a pump at a salt water spring at Bad Nauheim, Germany. Water wheel and pump are a half-mile apart. The shaft, more than 2850 feet long, has been in use since Waitz von Eschen, an engineer during the reign of Frederick the Great, built it in 1742 as part of an ingenious system to speed the production of salt. Rod is supported at intervals on carriages that permit it to move freely.



Worker tightens a nut on heavy wooden pump mechanism, which pulls brine to the top of a wall of straw that acts as a filter. Drive rod, moving back and forth four times a minute, rocks beam on which worker is standing, transfers power to pump shaft in wall opening, causes brine to be pumped at the rate of nearly 200 gallons a minute. Fir tree trunks which form sections of long rod are replaced every 15 years.



After brine has been delivered to top of the filter wall of straw and faggots, it trickles through slowly, losing much of its moisture. It reaches bottom in concentrated form and rest of water is evaporated quickly by boiling. Before Von Eschen's invention, slow process of steaming away all moisture from brine caused production to lag behind demand and used excessive amounts of firewood. Some doctors advise their patients to inhale salt air near wall for relief of bronchitis.

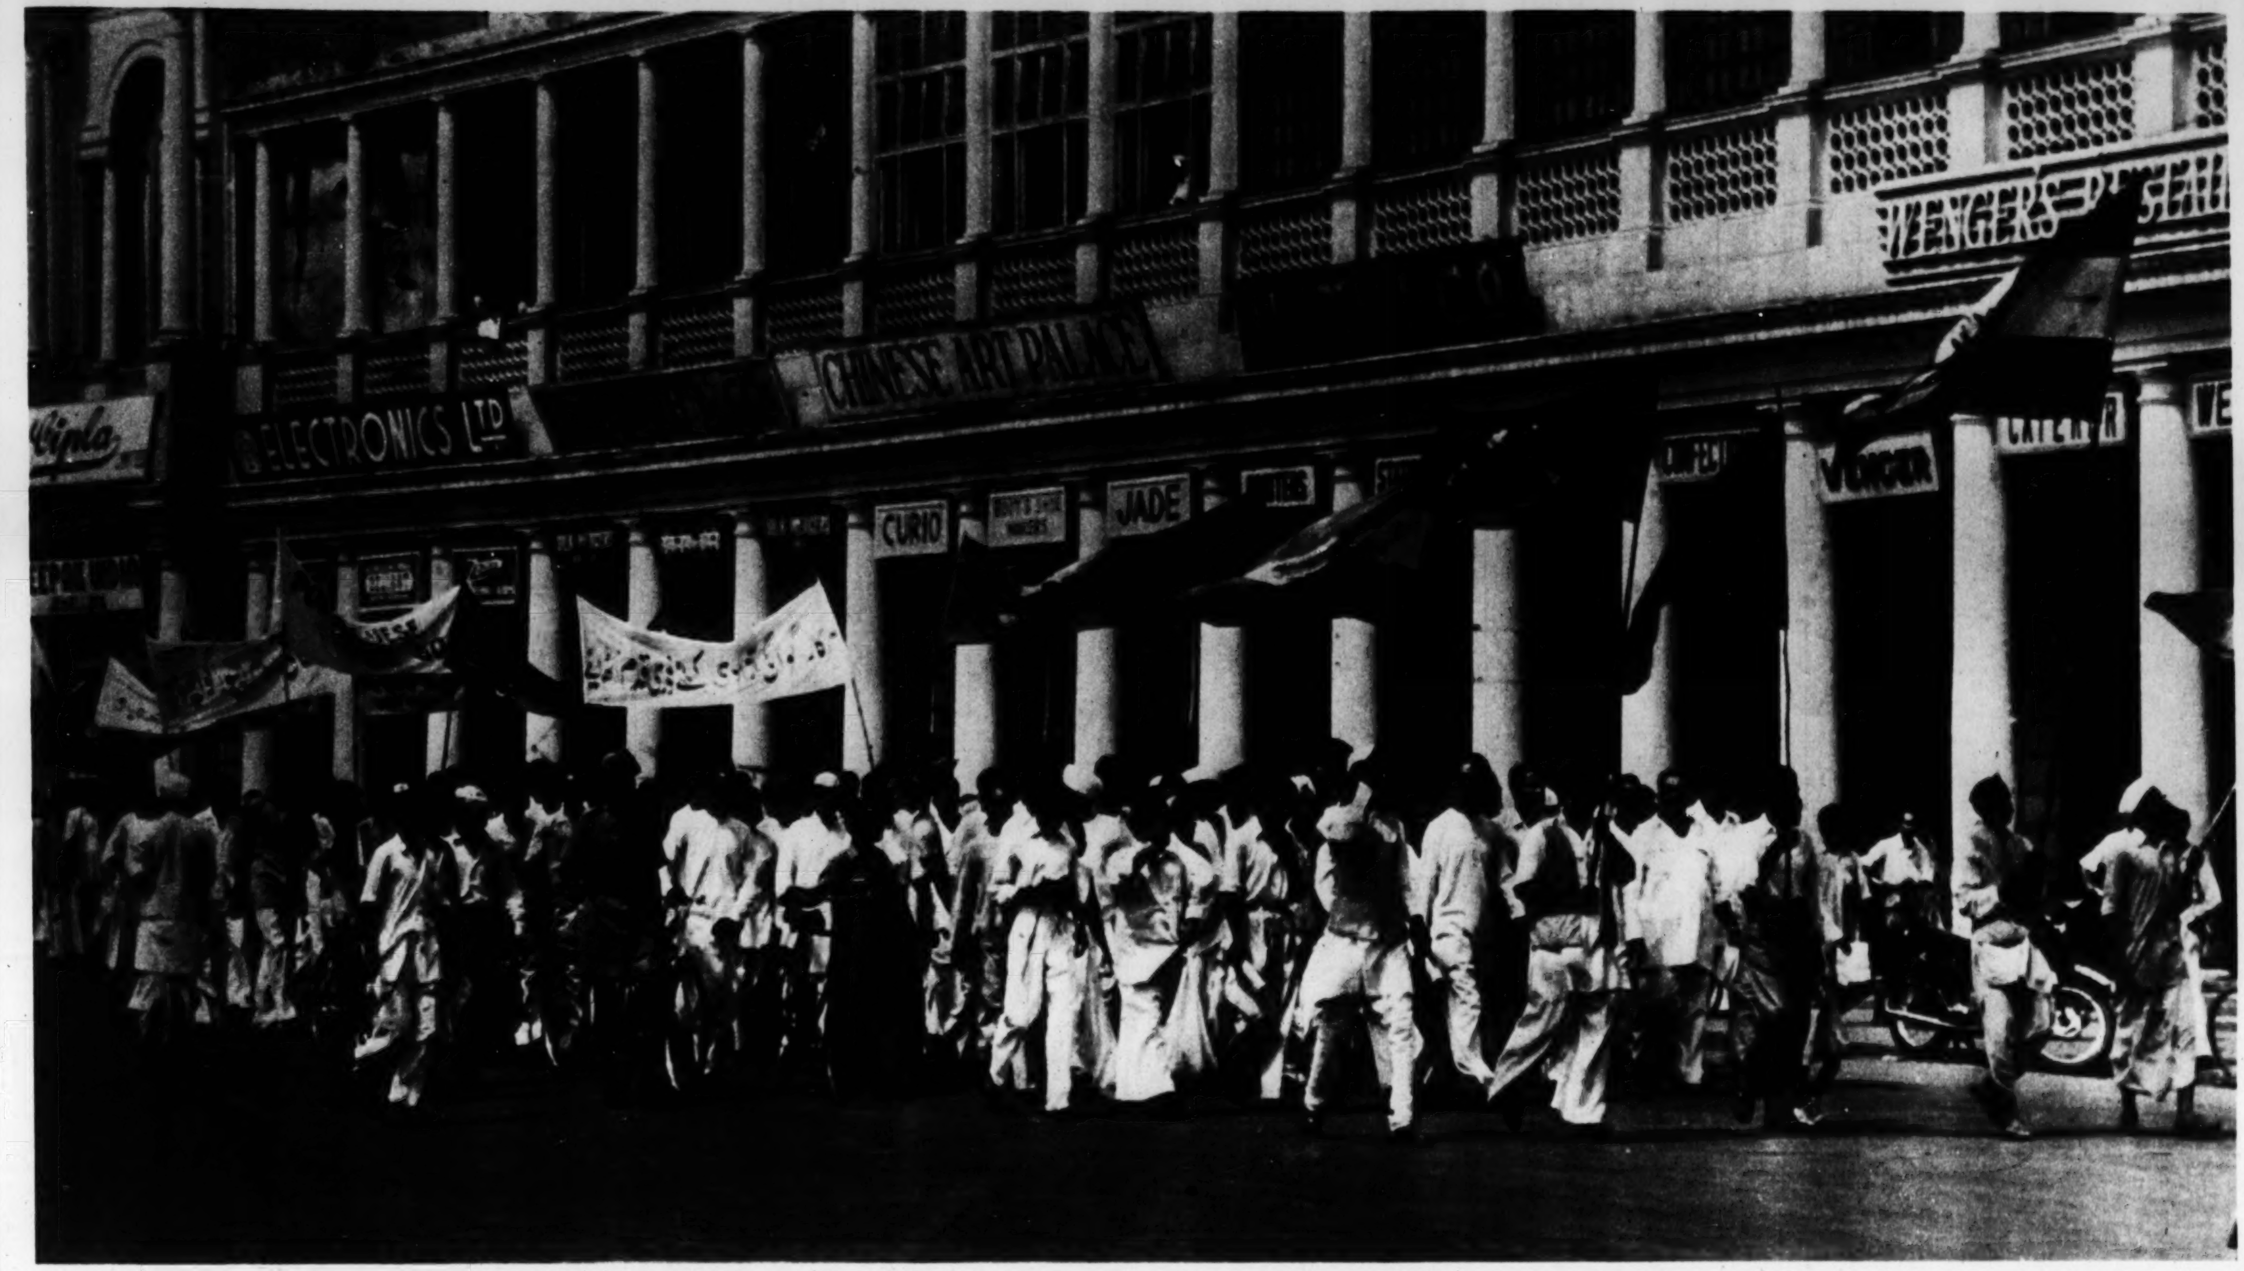
ANTI-COLONIALISM IN INDIA

Demand That Portugal Yield Goa Sparks Anti-Portuguese Demonstration in New Delhi



Bearing banners in Hindustani and English demanding that Portugal give up its tiny Indian colony of Goa, demonstrators march through the streets of New Delhi, India's capital. Protest march was a direct outcome of Prime Minister Nehru's demand that Portugal close its legation in New Delhi by tomorrow. It had its roots, however, in India's longstanding insistence that Portugal cede Goa, on India's southwest coast, so it may be integrated into India. Portugal, which has held the colony since the sixteenth century, has refused to negotiate the dispute, a refusal that led to Nehru's demand. Minority parties in India have been trying to organize a mass "peaceful invasion" of Goa on August 15, which will mark eighth anniversary of India's independence from Britain.

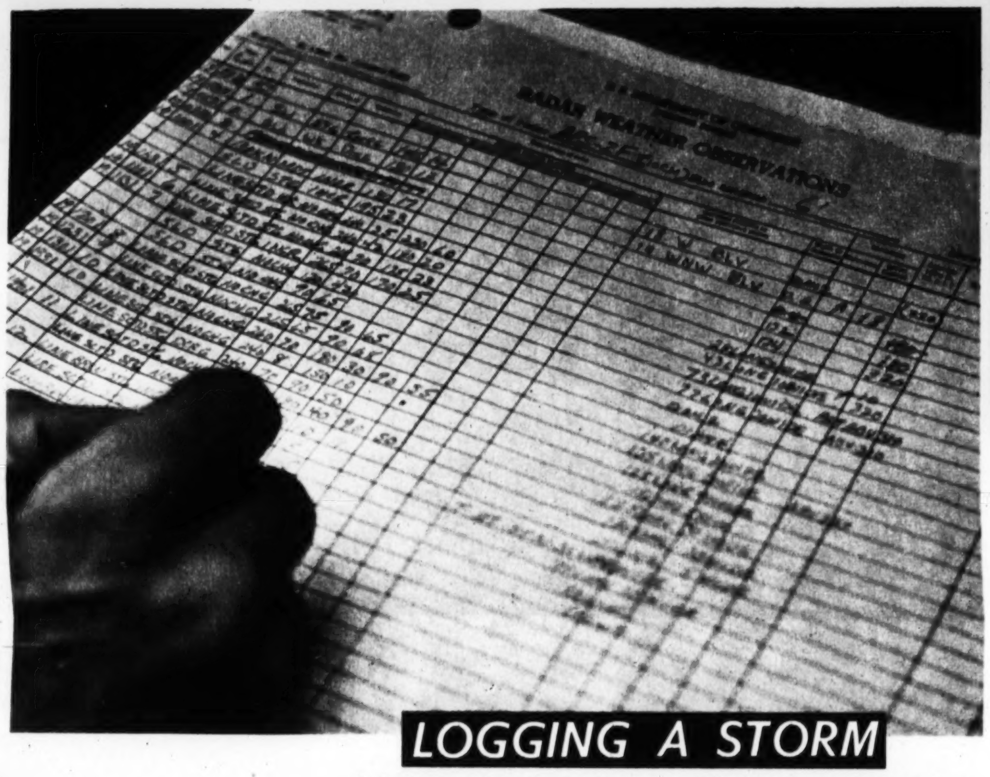
TRACKING STORMS BY RADAR

Installation at St. Louis Airport, First in Missouri, Provides Advance Warning of Severe Disturbances

RAIN MOVES IN

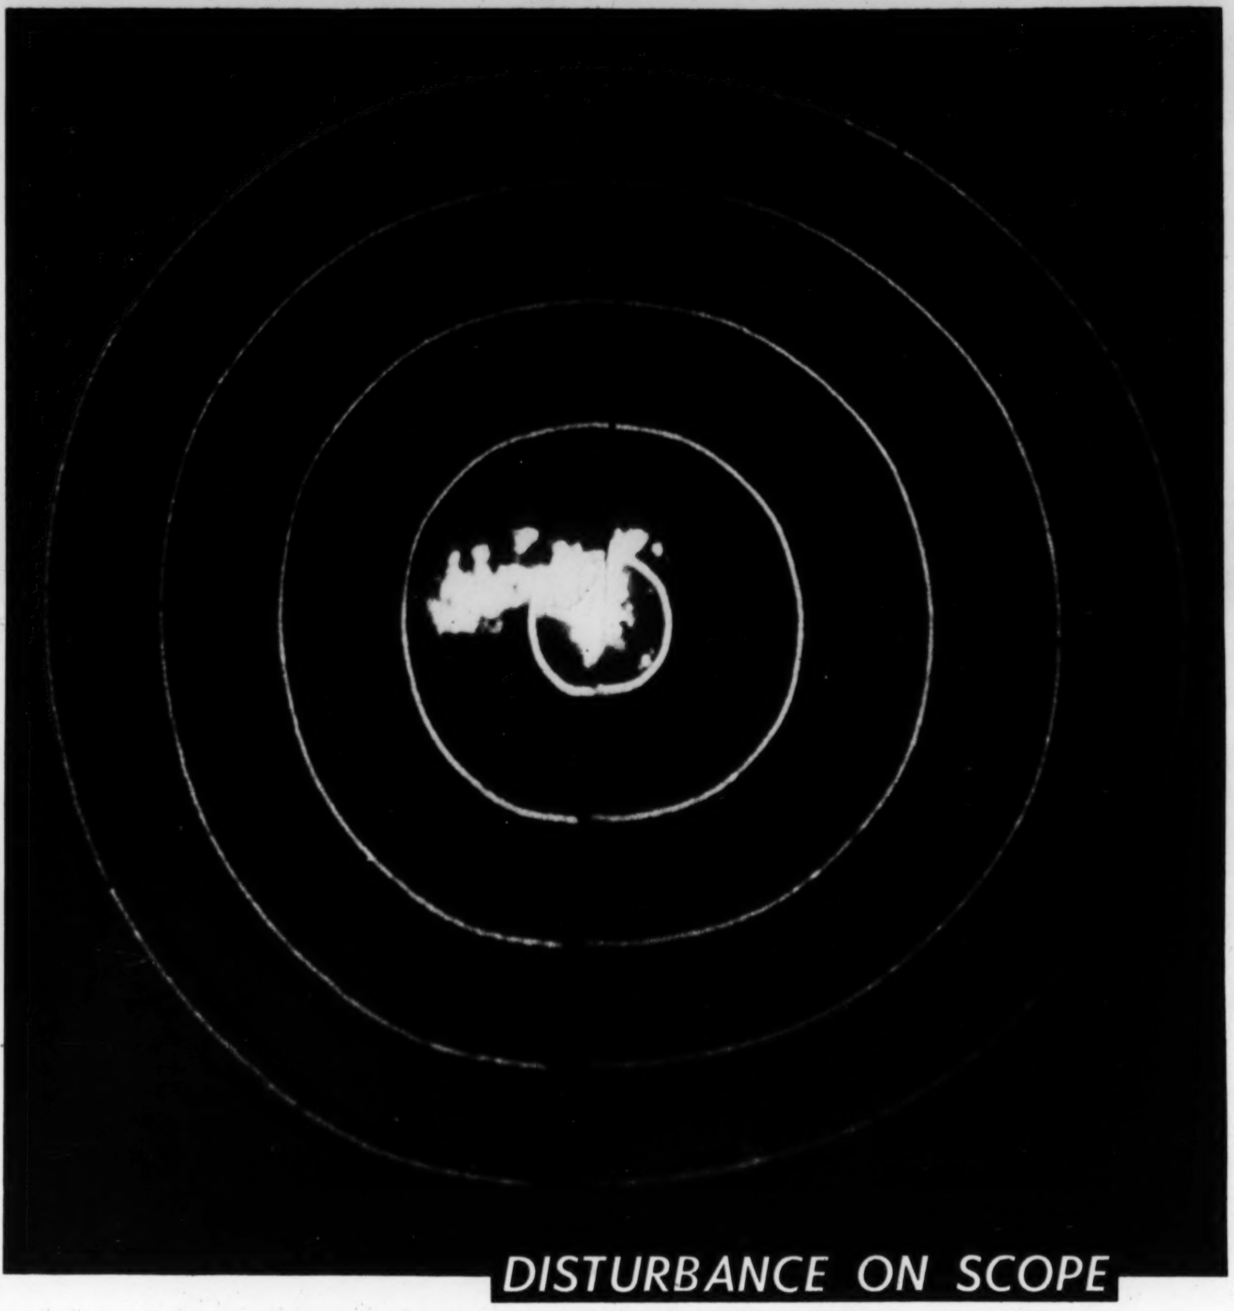
A rain squall approaches Lambert-St. Louis Field. The photograph was made from a window of the Weather Bureau office in the airport administration building, looking across Lindbergh boulevard towards the gray sky in the west.



RADAR WEATHER OBSERVATIONS

LOGGING A STORM

Data from radar observations is reduced to figures, abbreviations and symbols on a report form. The radar station is not manned at all times, is put in service only when rough weather is predicted for the surrounding area.



DISTURBANCE ON SCOPE

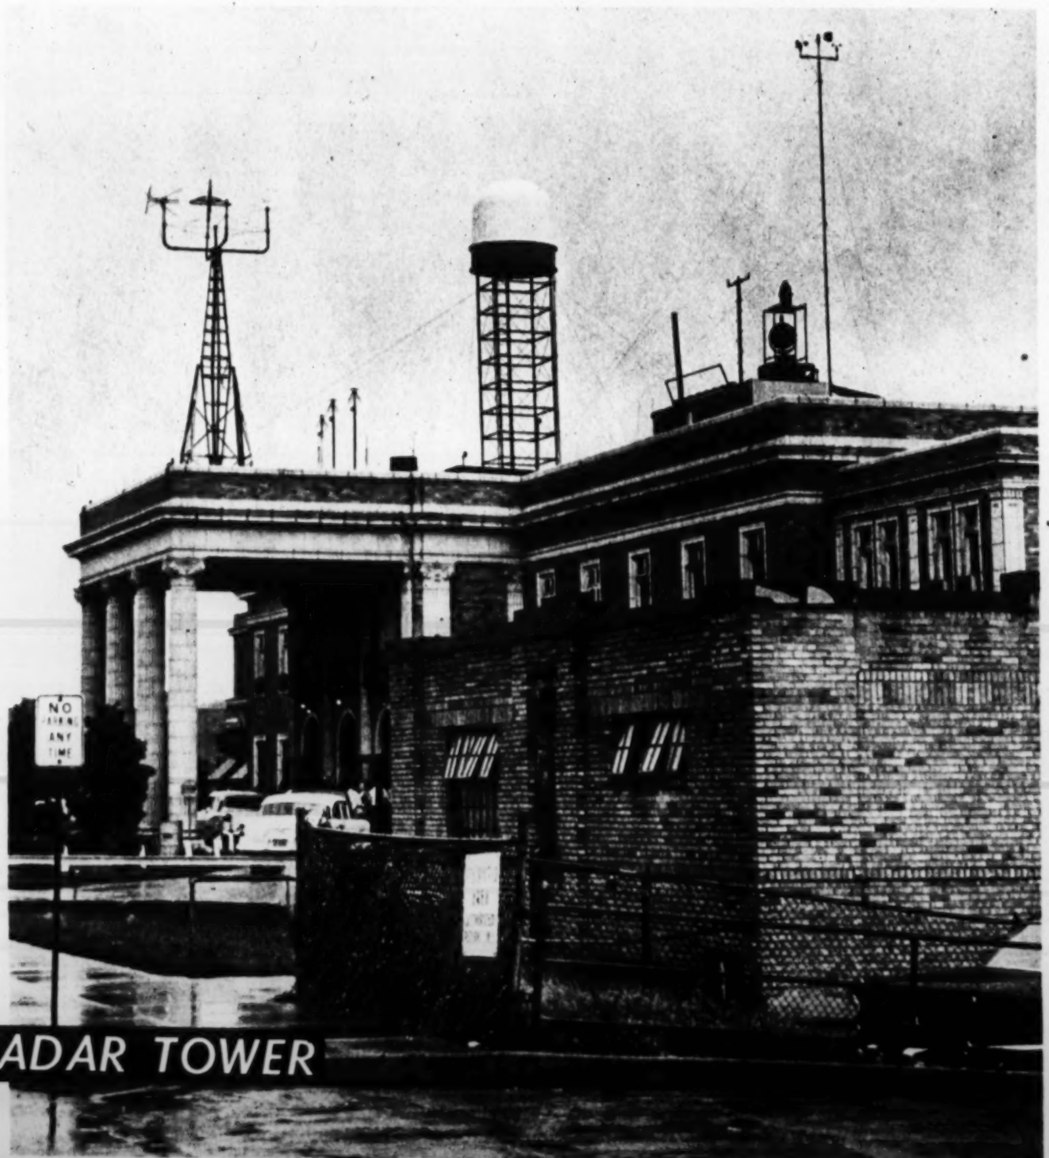
The rainstorm shows as a blob with a tail extending westward on center of radar scope. Distance between each ring here represents 10 miles. Range rings can be altered to represent different distances.

THE FACT that radar pulses can be reflected by a rain front is being utilized by the Weather Bureau to plot the course of severe storms. A radar weather station, recently installed at Lambert-St. Louis Field, gives advance notice of storms up to 200 miles away.

The St. Louis station—the first in Missouri—will become part of a network of stations whose overlapping ranges will blanket the tornado belt of the Midwestern states. A radar weather station is now being constructed in Kansas City, and one is scheduled to be built in Columbia.

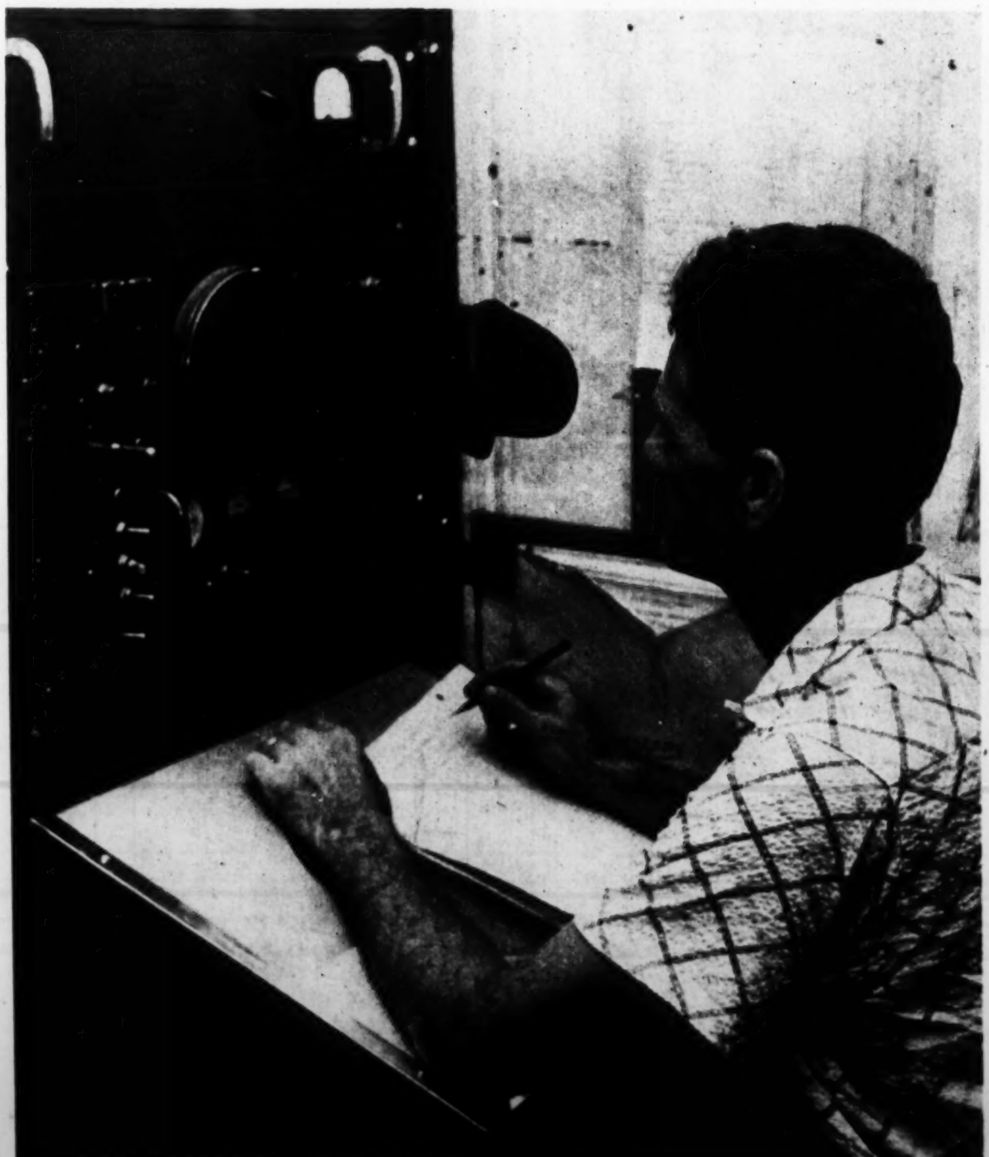
In radar—a word derived from the phrase "radio detection and ranging"—powerful bursts of radio energy, called pulses, are transmitted into space. They send back echoes when they strike something with sufficient density to reflect them. By plotting the speed at which echoes return from a rain front and their direction, found by the use of a narrow beam of pulses from a directional rotary antenna, distance, direction and height of the approaching storm are determined.

Photos by ARTHUR WITMAN of the PICTURES Staff



RADAR TOWER

The radar antenna, housed in plastic dome, makes still another structure on top of the airport administration building. The radar scope is in second-floor office. In normal operation, radar is used to plot thunderstorms, give airport operators advance warning so aircraft can be secured against winds and rain, and to route pilots around storms.



VIEWING SCOPE

Meteorologist Albert Courtois views radar scope on panel in front of him. A hood shields scope from room light, makes the screen appear brighter.

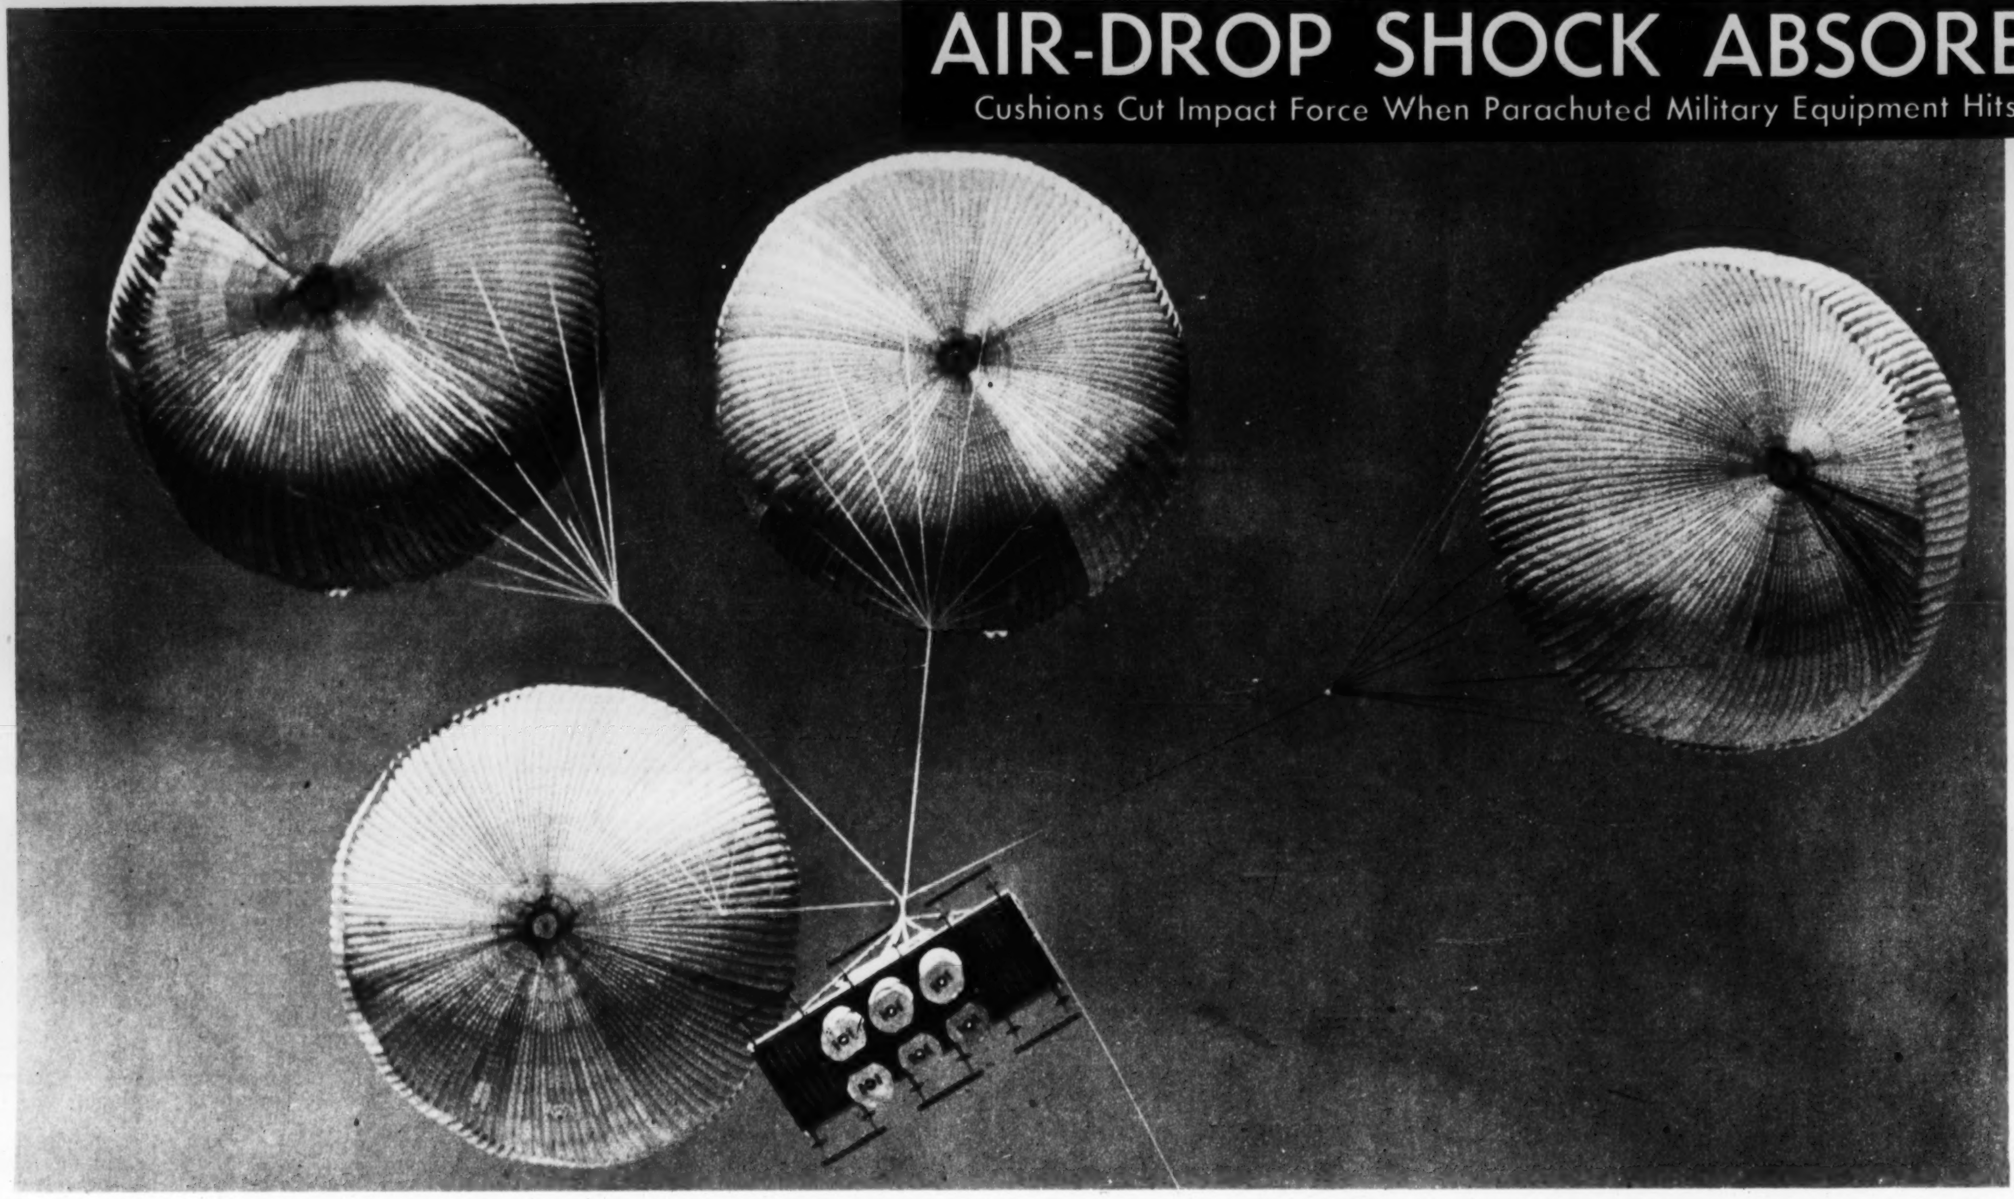
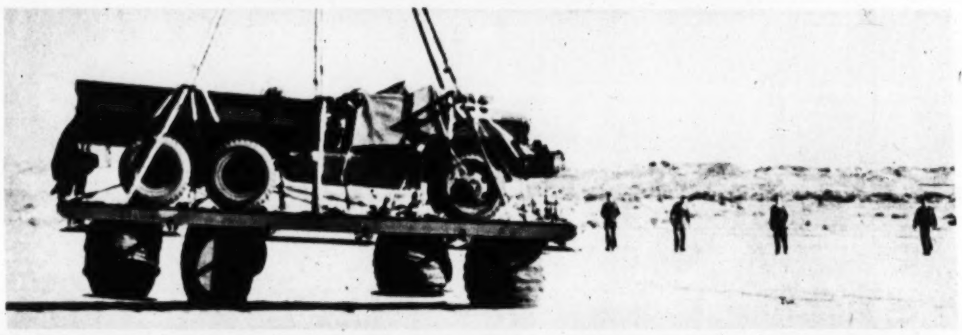
AIR-DROP SHOCK ABSORBERS

Cushions Cut Impact Force When Parachuted Military Equipment Hits Ground





Riding on a magnesium platform equipped, underneath, with shock-absorbing cushions, a military truck makes a parachute drop from a cargo plane at El Centro, California. At right, as the truck hits the ground, compressed air in the cushions breaks the force of the impact before slowly collapsing and setting down the platform. The barrel-like cushions, of lightweight nylon tire cord fabric covered with rubber, are filled by the rush of air as a load falls. They then are kept inflated by automatically closing diaphragms. Air Force tests at El Centro have shown they cut ground impact, considerable even with parachutes, by two-thirds. Cushions were developed by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company for use in delivering military equipment to ground troops by cargo plane.

Cheese Cake With Mixed Fruit Topping

1. Mrs. Meyers beats the cream cheese. She adds cream, sugar, flour and salt, and beats again until well blended.

By MERNA LAZIER

MIXED FRUITS in a thickened sauce made from their juice make a pleasing topping for a light creamy cheese cake, Mrs. Robert F. Meyers of University City has discovered. With this simple addition to her cheese cake, she makes it into a glamorous dessert suitable for any occasion or season.

Mrs. Meyers thoroughly beats all the ingredients. The egg whites are beaten last and immediately folded in, to give lightness to the finished cake. The light, thin crust is made by buttering the pan and dusting pan with as many sweetened crumbs as will adhere to it. This gives a professional touch and helps to keep this dessert nourishing but not heavy. The cake is baked in a 325-degree oven for about an hour or until it is nicely browned and set. It is then allowed to cool in the oven with the heat turned off for another hour.

Ordinary canned mixed fruit may be used for the topping. Juice drained from the fruit is thickened with a mixture of cornstarch and sugar, and flavored with grated lemon rind. It is cooked for about 15 minutes, stirring frequently, until quite thick. Fruit is added and mixture is allowed to cool before it is spooned on top of the cooled cake. This cake will serve about 10 persons and should be kept under refrigeration.

INGREDIENTS: For the cheese cake—two eight-ounce packages Philadelphia cream cheese, one cup thick cream or undiluted evaporated milk, one cup sugar, two tablespoons flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, three eggs (separated), one teaspoon vanilla and three-fourths teaspoon grated lemon rind. For the crust—about one-half cup crushed zwieback (three or four) mixed with two tablespoons sugar and about one tablespoon butter (more if necessary) to grease pan. For the fruit topping—one No. 2 size can fruit salad (use three-fourths cup of juice from this fruit), two tablespoons cornstarch, one-third cup sugar and one-eighth teaspoon grated lemon rind.

FOR PERFECT BAKING AND FRYING
PURE SHORTENING

MOST SENSATIONAL DISCOVERY IN 40 YEARS FOR BETTER BAKING AND FRYING!

FIRST ALL-NEW SHORTENING!

It's RICH! It's YELLOW!

Procter & Gamble's Golden Fluffo

Golden Fluffo is pure shortening — not a table spread

What a pie it makes!

RICHER-LOOKING... BETTER-TASTING... MORE APPETIZING!

Fluffo makes the shortest, flakiest piecrust possible...the most tempting golden-brown pies you can bake!

Why? Because fabulous new Fluffo cuts into flour for tender, golden pastry never possible with plain white shortening. Makes piecrust so rich and delicate it breaks at the slightest touch of your fork!

©1955, The Procter & Gamble Company

OHIO FAIR BAKING CHAMPION,

Mrs. Frank Friesner, says:—

"Fluffo makes such tender pastry that's so easy to flute. My pie is beautiful when it goes into the oven—and gorgeous when it comes out. With white shortening, I'm afraid I'll scorch my pie if I leave it in the oven long enough to get it nice and golden-brown. I don't worry about that with Fluffo. Now, the golden beauty is baked right in the pie. And it tastes just as good as it looks!"

"No white shortening gives me a pie like this," says Mrs. Frank Friesner, blue ribbon winner in Midwest Baking Competition.

Like cooking champions, you'll be excited about golden Fluffo! It gives you flaky, tender, golden-brown piecrust such as you've never been able to make before . . . tastier and richer-looking, by far, than you can get from white shortening!

That's because Fluffo is different! Even its color is different—yellow from pure carotene.

And Fluffo is such fun to work with! Use it in all your recipes that call for shortening—and see what happens! Without changing a single measurement, you'll get the highest, lightest, fluffiest-textured cakes possible. The most appetizing, golden-brown fries . . . and so crisp and digestible, too!

Yet Fluffo costs no more than leading white shortenings! It's available in most areas. Get a can and use it for richer-looking, better-tasting cooking!

RUSSIA WELCOMES AMERICANS

Midwestern Farmers on Exchange Visit Talk Shop, Deliver Seed Corn

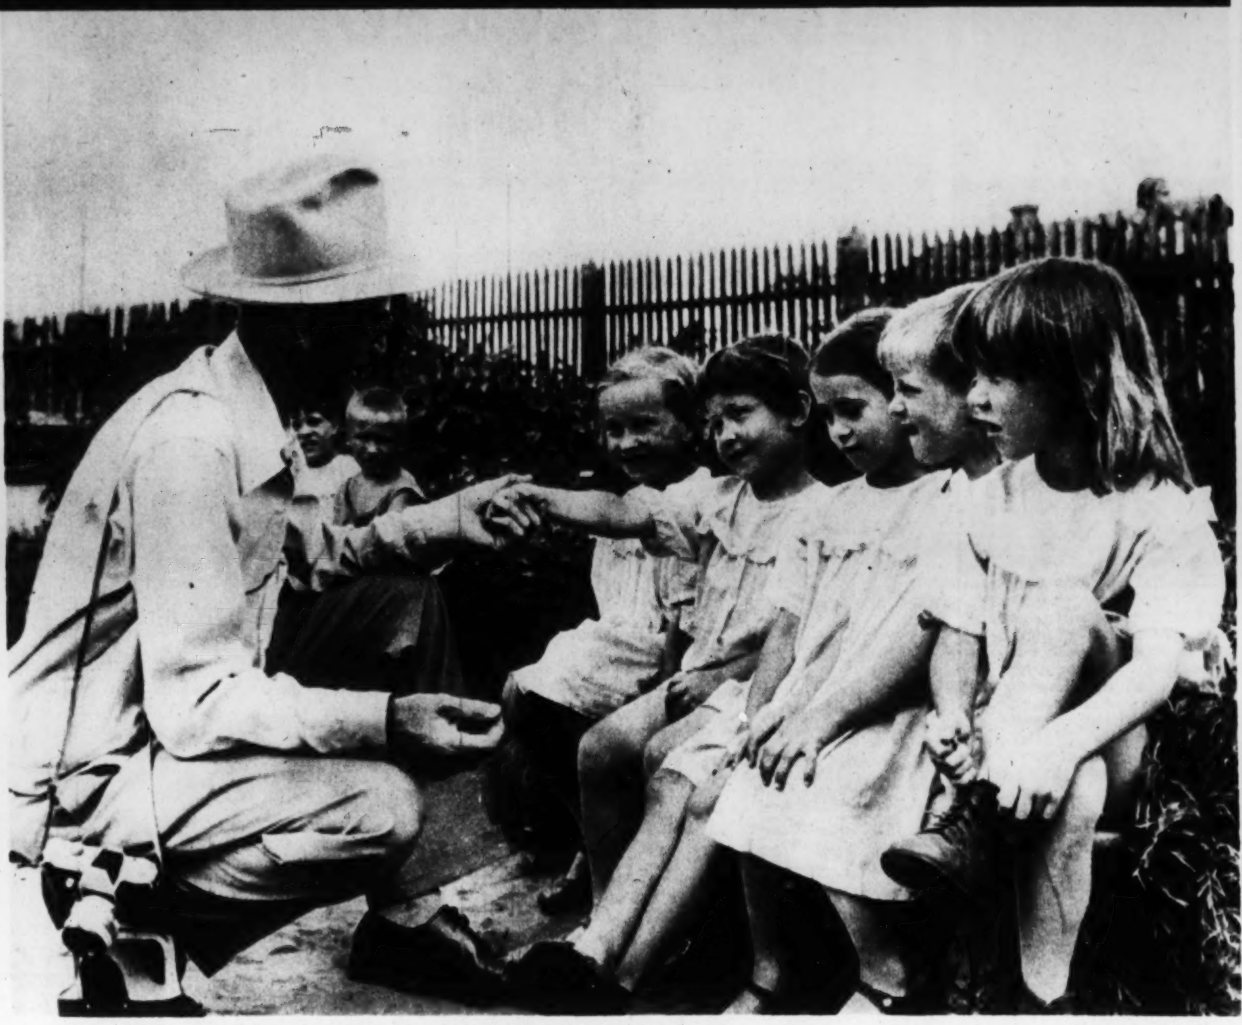
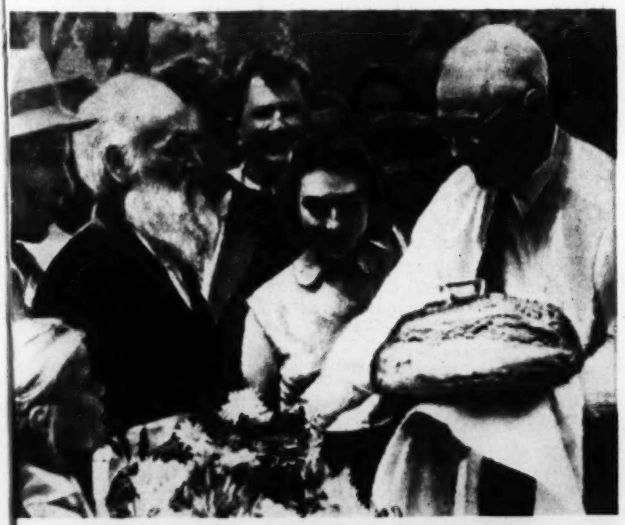
WHILE 12 RUSSIAN FARM EXPERTS have been touring American farmlands, an equal number from this country have been visiting parts of the Soviet Union. The Americans' reception in the Soviet pretty much followed the cordial pattern of treatment their counterparts received in the United States. And they found the banquet circuit in Russia a bit more rugged than expected.

The Americans have had first-hand contact with the numerous components of the farming business—henhouses, hogs, growing crops, farm machinery factories, farm workers. Gifts have been exchanged. In the grain-producing Ukraine, the Americans saw demonstrations of Russian methods of hybridization and fertilization. One of the group, Lauren K. Soth, presented an experimentation station with seed corn from Iowa and the Dakotas. It was Soth, editorial writer for the Des Moines Register and Tribune, who first suggested that Soviet farmers be invited to visit the United States.

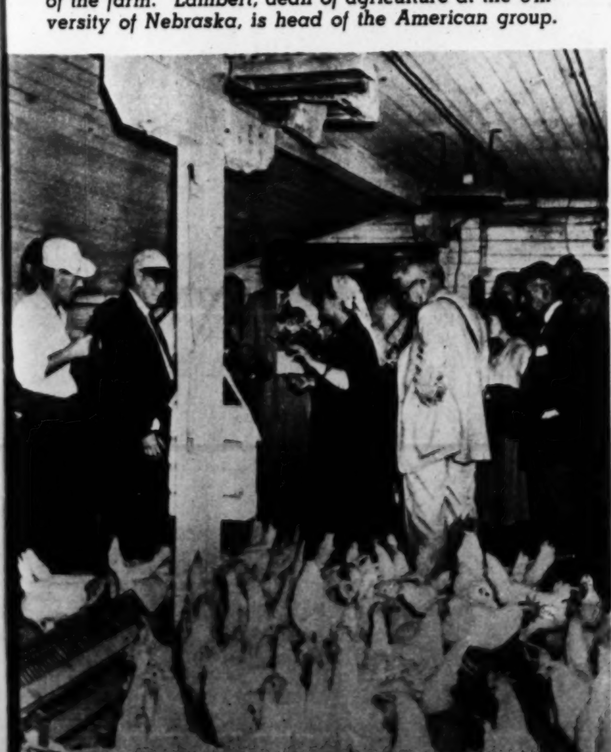
The American visitors reported with surprise that they were treated more like heroes than dirt farmers, finally asked to be excused from any more banquets featuring champagne and vodka.



On a farm outside Moscow, Farmer John M. Jacobs of Phoenix, Arizona, is shyly greeted by a group of little girls beside a garden path. A little girl pauses midway in tieing her shoe to scrutinize Jacobs.



Dr. William Lambert of Lincoln, Nebraska, holds loaf of salted bread given to the American delegation at a collective farm near Odessa. Salted bread is traditional gift of Ukranian welcome for visitors. The bearded man is L. P. Omishchenko, oldest member of the farm. Lambert, dean of agriculture at the University of Nebraska, is head of the American group.



Russians and Americans compare notes in henhouse as chickens move between feeders. American men from left are: John Steddom of Granger, Iowa; William Lambert; W. E. Reed of Greensboro, North Carolina, Ralph Olsen (hand on hip) of Ellsworth, Iowa, and J. M. Kleimer (hands behind back) of Nampa, Idaho. Americans began scheduled month's visit on July 16.

A ROMANCE IS SIDE-TRACKED

Burt Lancaster Plays a Confused Pioneer in Movie "The Kentuckian"

1. Headed west, Big Eli Wakefield (Burt Lancaster), his motherless son, Little Eli (Donald MacDonald) and their dog, Fargo, start to cross the rugged Kentucky wilderness of the 1820s. After Big Eli buys freedom for an indentured servant, Hannah Bohlen (Dianne Foster), the girl joins them. They stop over at the town of Humility, where Big Eli hopes to earn riverboat passage for them to Texas.

2. In Humility, Big Eli meets the village school teacher, Susie, forgets his dream of Texas and his fondness for Hannah. He goes to work in his brother's tobacco business. Hannah gets a job with Stan Bodine, keeper of the town's tavern. Returning from a business trip for his brother, Big Eli has a winning streak while gambling on a riverboat.

3. The river gamblers, in an effort to get back the money Big Eli has won, arrange for the boat to bypass Humility. Big Eli, singlehanded, fights off an attack by the gamblers. He and Little Eli escape when they jump into the river and swim to shore at the town.

4. Big Eli becomes a local hero because of his bold riverboat adventure. His admirers include Zybee Fletcher (John Carradine, left), a traveling medicine man. But Stan Bodine (Walter Matthau, center), a tavern keeper, is angered because Susie and Hannah have both rejected him in favor of Big Eli, goads Big Eli into a fight and tries to best him with a bull whip. Big Eli disarms his adversary, gives him a fist beating.

5. Susie and Big Eli announce their marriage plans. Little Eli, still much attached to Hannah and the Wakefield's dream of Texas, runs away. He takes refuge with Hannah, who shields him from an assassin who had been hired by Bodine to kill Big Eli.

6. Big Eli shows up just in time to disarm the would-be killer. Reunited with his son, he realizes that Hannah is the one both Big and Little Eli love, and that neither is willing to call off plans to go to Texas. He asks Hannah to resume the trip with them.

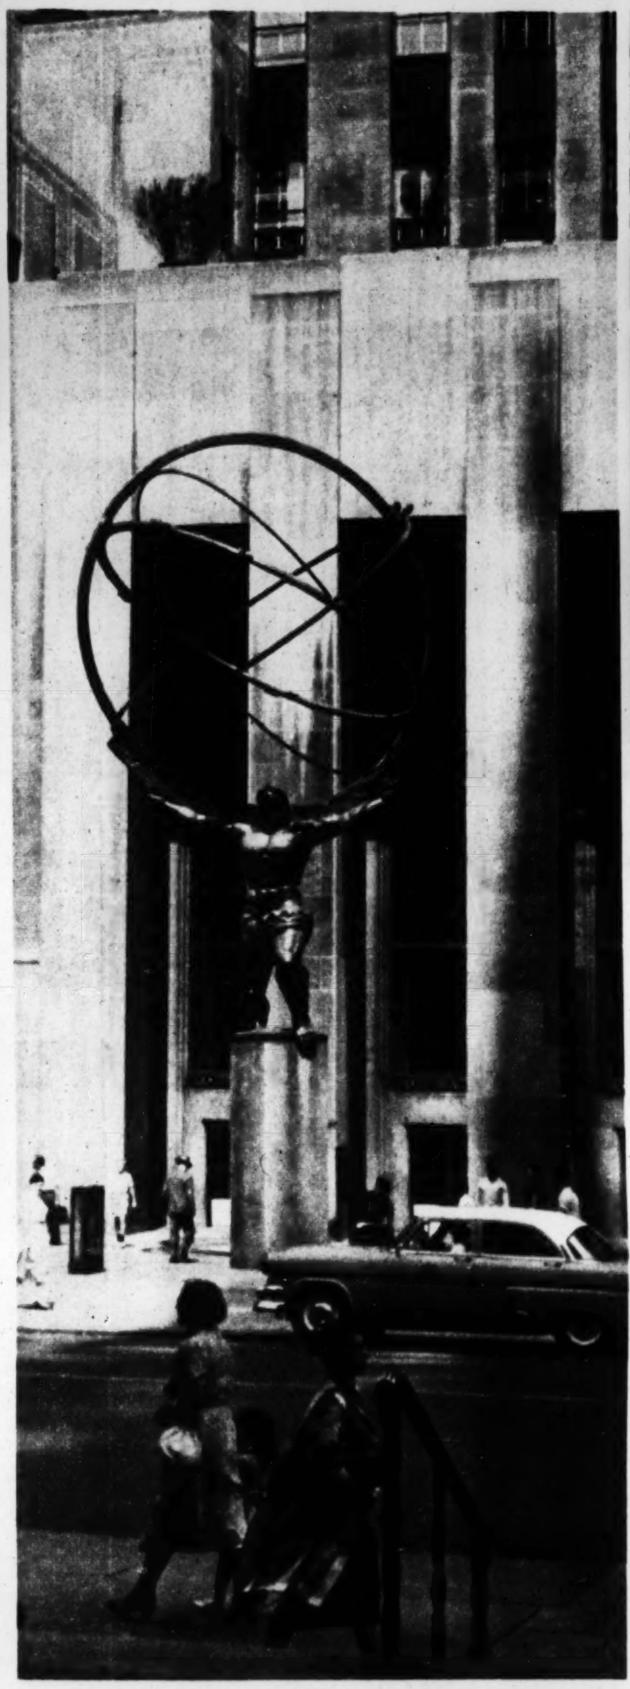
NEW YORK VISITORS FOCUS ON 'ATLAS'

Camera-Bearing Tourists Find 45-Foot Bronze At Rockefeller Center a Challenging Target



Atlas, as he appears from front entrance of St. Patrick's Cathedral across Fifth Avenue. The 45-foot statue, in entrance court of the International Building, is the work of Sculptor Lee Lawrie.

MANY OF THE thousands of sight-seers who stroll through New York's Rockefeller Center every summer day carry cameras. One of their favorite targets is a bronze statue of Atlas balancing on his shoulders an astronomical globe. The sculpture, as high as a four-story building, poses possibilities of composition, camera angles and lighting that tourists seem to find irresistible.

People who take pictures of Atlas are of all ages and from all parts of the world. They bring to the subject a variety of cameras and accessories. Some take careful light meter readings and some shoot from the hip. The tourists take up positions on the Fifth Avenue curbing just below the figure, at the portal of St. Patrick's Cathedral across the street, and wherever else they can unlimber their gear without stopping traffic. It's not uncommon to see a picture-taker lying flat on his back on the sidewalk at the base of the statue for a straight-up view.

What goes on behind the cameras is, in fact, worth special attention in itself. These pictures of people taking pictures find them with the lack of inhibitions that marks the dedicated camera fan, executing back bends, genuflections, stoops and spine-stretching reaches to get the effects they hoped for.

NEW LOOK AT UNION STATION

SINCE 1894 Union Station has been an imposing landmark in St. Louis. Through the years, however, its majestic Romanesque architecture became increasingly sullied by an unworthy setting as its surroundings deteriorated and decayed. The opening of Aloe Plaza removed the blighted obstructions to a clear view from the north. Now the clearing of the Plaza area east of Eighteenth street, from Market to Olive, has brought the building into full and unobstructed vision. The angle of view in this photograph—looking southwest—takes in the full architectural design and structure in one encompassing sweep that has heretofore been blocked by tawdry shops and squalid dwellings.

Union Station was designed by Theodore C. Link, one of the city's leading architects of his day. His design was inspired by the walled city of Carcassonne, in southern France. The station is symbolic of the bastioned city gates of medieval times. Link followed the theme that a railroad station is the modern gate by which persons enter and leave a city.

The station was completed, at a cost of $6,500,000, 14 months after the cornerstone was laid. Its main entrance on Market street, covered by a marquee, is flanked by two pavilions. Rising from the east pavilion is the 230-foot clock tower. The west pavilion extends to the Terminal Hotel (at right in photo) which was not in the original design, but was added the same year the station was completed. Its architecture was intended to conform with the main structure.

BAY-DREDGING gets respectful attention from the Wuests: Dad, John (l.), George and the author.

We 'follow the news'

A California family finds clues to adventure in its newspaper

by SARELLEN M. WUEST

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

About twice a week Dad (my husband Henry) will look up from his morning Union, a colored pencil poised in one hand, and ask, "How would you all like to see a house built of handmade brick over a century ago? It's just been doomed to make way for the new freeway."

Or, "Biggest cargo of newsprint ever to arrive from Denmark is going to be unloaded at Pier 6 today. Who'd like to watch the job done?" Or, "Rookie firemen are scheduled to make practice jumps at the training tower this afternoon. How about driving out there?"

Whatever the suggestion, our 8-year-old adopted sons, John and George, and Ma (that's me) are likely to be teetering on our chairs in anticipation of taking off on another "exploring-our-town" excursion.

What Dad is doing is carrying out our family plan of digging a hundred little adventures a year out of our daily paper. Having his own insurance business, he's in the fortunate position of being able to accompany us on most of these news-item trips, which have added up to a wonderful backlog of fascinating hours spent together and a fuller appreciation of our community and the people who live in it.

Of course, there are a few principles involved. We don't go where there's apt to be a big crowd. We don't pursue sheer entertainment, obvious promotion deals or exploitations. We don't visit any place that's likely to be dangerous, or where the morbid aspects may be out of proportion to the learning possibilities.

A Way to Stay Young

Why have we bothered to arrange such excursions? Well, about 10 years ago a childless 40-year-old couple (my husband and I) was told by local child-placement agencies that they took a dim view of middle-aged applications for newborn infants. They pointed out all the usual factors to show what a detriment "maturity" could be. When we finally obtained our sons through private adoption, sanctioned by State Welfare, we resolved to try to do as well by them as parents 20 years younger would have done. Taking an active interest in what's going on in the world around us was, we felt, one good way of staying youthful.

Since then we have read about — and then gone to see — such diverse things as a grafted fruit tree which sported three shades of pink (as well as white) blossoms, and a bus fleet of "wetbacks" being loaded up for return to Mexico.

We have watched truckloads of discarded refrigerators smashed on a municipal dump so they wouldn't be a hazard to kids playing hide-and-seek, and a fireboat getting a new coat of red paint while on emergency call in San Diego Bay.

We have gone to the beach at the harbor's entrance to spot for ourselves a reported school of whales. And last spring, while inspecting "unclaimed items" at a city auction sale, we had the unexpected pleasure of spotting — and retrieving — a prized express-wagon, with the boys' names on its sides, which had recently disappeared from in front of our house.

Not long ago, a big excavation project gouged out a side hill within a block of our home. Layers of shells no longer found on our coastline (hundreds of feet below us) were laid bare in decks as high as a six-story building. "Did it tell about this in the news, Mom?" asked John, scrubbing the silt off a fan-shaped scallop shell he'd just picked up. "Why," added George, "don't we put it in the paper about how the beach used to be way up on our hill? People would want to know about that."

To our way of thinking, the boys had a point. Reading a paper with an eye alerted for such news items suggests innumerable exciting things to see and do. All that's needed is curiosity and imagination. It's the best way we know to build wonderful days — and memories. ■

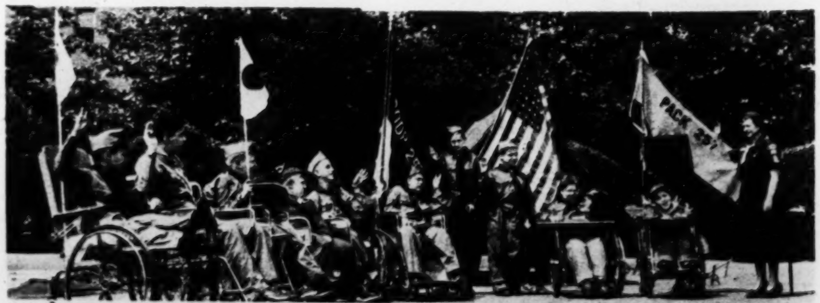
MORSE CODE practice (on home-made senders) intrigues Eugene Baddaty (l.) and Phil Levine.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Sunny summer Sunday afternoons, neighbors of the big Jewish (non-sectarian) Chronic Disease Hospital here see a strangely moving sight. Troop 257 (14 members) and Cub Pack 257 (5 members) — two of the 450 troops and packs for handicapped youngsters belonging to the Boy Scouts of America — "march" from the hospital in wheelchairs or hobbling on braces.

At Camp Sakumow (two tents pitched on the hospital lawn) they salute the flag. Thereafter they roast marshmallows, practice knots and bone up for merit badges like normal Scouts from coast to coast. Toward sundown they "march" back inside the hospital, their heads full of woodland lore they can only hope someday to use. ■



ROLL CALL by Phil Levine's mother finds only two boys able to stand — and often some absent.

It's that DIAL feeling – you never worry about odor!

More than a feeling, it's a fact: with Dial Soap you never worry about perspiration odor. You see, normal perspiration has no odor until skin bacteria go to work on it. And ordinary soaps just can't get rid of bacteria effectively. But Dial Soap does. It removes up to 95% of these odor-causers, because Dial is the one leading soap with AT-7 (Hexachlorophene). There's nothing else as good for keeping odor away. Dial's AT-7 clings to your skin, so it protects you all day – and several days if need be. That's why folks who use Dial every day say they just don't feel as clean with any other soap. Dial stops odor before it starts.

HOW TO MANAGE -AND STRETCH- YOUR DOLLARS

by SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

An expert shows you nine ways to bolster your income and build family security

IN TODAY'S UNCERTAIN world, people are strongly conscious of the need to try to build some kind of personal security. But much of this drive for personal security is unknowing, unplanned and chaotic. Anxious families buy thousands of polio insurance policies which insure them against a single dramatic illness while leaving them unprotected against a host of others. Millions invest their savings at 2 or 3 per cent, while borrowing money for mortgages, cars and others needs at 5, 12 and even 24 per cent.

To speak frankly, many people of moderate means simply do not have the necessary information to cope with the financial and legal problems they encounter in their search for security. Disabling illness and unemployment due to economic recessions are still the two most stubborn threats to personal security that are difficult for an individual or family to control by itself.

But a financially sophisticated family that develops all its resources is better able to protect itself against such external forces. In fact a family that spends and invests productively, and participates in community facilities which can increase its own security, helps keep factories running and men working, and contributes to the well-being of the whole community.

Recently I interviewed a man selected by his union as a "typical" wage earner because he earned exactly the U. S. average wage of about $70 a week, and had a typical family of two children.

Frances, his wife, told me that every Friday — pay day — John deposits $10 in the credit union at the factory. And on the following Wednesday, just as regularly, he has to draw it out to help pay the bills for the rest of the week. That $10 won't stick to his account more than a few days.

For one thing, he got into debt with a series of medical bills. Frances was pretty sick a while back, and only repeated doses of antibiotics pulled her through. The medicine cost $7 for each little box. A "typical" family's finances simply aren't built to stand that kind of assault.

Once in debt, John and Frances continue to pay a toll of interest which drains their funds so they can't get on a cash basis. They are paying for their furniture and refrigerator on the installment plan. They pay for their insurance that way, too: 25 or 50 cents a week or month on a lot of little policies.

To get out of the financial trap many people like Frances and John are in, even when they are steadily employed, you need both principles and practical information on how to handle your money and make it work for you. Based on the experience I have related, as well as many others, here is a set of nine tested principles which can help most families increase their security.

1 KNOW WHERE YOUR MONEY GOES.

The first and basic step in controlling your income so you can build financial security is to know where it is going. That means keeping a record of your spending. It is the first step in effective budgeting.

2 MAKE IT GO WHERE YOU WANT.

Your two tools for making your money achieve the things you want most out of life are a budget and a system of money control. Budgeting really consists of two parts: Budget or Spending Plan (conservative estimate of your income, a realistic estimate of how much you need for fixed expenses and necessities, allocation of the remainder to achieve your goals); Spending Record (proves whether the estimated budget is realistic, reveals whether you have been unwittingly spending more than you want to, and becomes almost an automatic control over money).

No standard budget can fit most families. The age of the children or the kind of work a man does makes a difference in food bills. It costs about 20 per cent more to buy food for a man who does hard physical work than for a white-collar worker. Also, standard budget percentages are sometimes made obsolete by shifts in prices. Food prices have gone up more than many other items in the past decade, and on an average command between 30-35 per cent of many family budgets. Other influencing factors: rent or the cost of your home.

Here is how you can plan your actual budget:

a) Know your expenses. Collect your household bills for the past year and try to figure out your average weekly expenses during that period for different categories — food, housing, utilities, clothing, household operation, medical expenses and so on. For items for which you have no bills, estimate your expenses as closely as you can or keep a preliminary record for a month.

b) Examine these expenses. Compare your weekly costs in each category.

c) Draw up your own tentative budget. On the basis of a conservative estimate of your monthly income, including both wages and interest earnings, you should be able to draw up a working budget. List your fixed expenses first — such as rent, utilities, carfare, cleaning supplies. Besides the usual items, your budget should provide for special family goals, such as vacation or children's education, reserves for replacement of household equipment and car, medical costs.

As to the Spending Record: this should be more detailed than the budget. Items should include personal care, recreation and advancement, personal allowance, transportation, car, savings. Use one simple notebook, with a page for each month for recording expenditures. Keep the record book in a specific, convenient place. Select a regular time for making entries, as after dinner when the family may be together.

3 GET ON A CASH BASIS.

Pay off all debts as soon as possible. A moderate-income family that habitually borrows and buys on time will rarely achieve financial security for these reasons: a) constant seepage of income — paying out anywhere from $50 to $250 a year in credit fees; b) the tendency to pay higher prices at stores that feature time payments; c) the tendency to overbuy.

Always use your own money first. But when you do need outside financing, here are policies for doing it at the least cost:

a) First make sure the item is necessary. If so, get information and comparative prices from other dealers, manufacturers and trade authorities before you sign an installment contract.

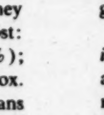
b) Compare the credit charge. You may be able to borrow cash or get installment credit from another store or bank for a smaller fee.

c) Borrow the least you need and pay it back as quickly as you can.

d) Avoid contracts with clauses that may make real trouble for you.

Many borrowers don't realize how much true interest they pay. It can save you money all your life to be aware that when the interest rate is figured on the full amount of your debt, but you repay monthly, the true interest rate is approximately twice the stated rate. That's because the lender calculates your interest cost on the original full amount, but when you repay monthly you owe on the average only half the original sum.

Here are various places you can borrow money or get a cash loan, listed in ascending order of cost: your life-insurance policy (true rate approx. 5%); a mortgage on your house (true rate approx. 4-6%); FHA Title I home-improvement loans (true rate 10%); credit unions (true rate 6-12%); regular banks (true rate 7-12%); industrial banks (true rate approx. 8-14%); stores (true rate approx. 6-24%); finance companies (true rate approx. 12-30%); small loan companies (true rate approx. 18-42%).



4 ACCUMULATE A CAPITAL FOR LIVING.

Once you budget your way out of debt, you can begin to accumulate savings. A capital for living can make money for a family just as a businessman's capital makes money for him.

The point is: make that capital an early and a major goal. Even $1,000 of capital for living accumulated early enough can provide the foundation.

5 INVEST IN YOURSELF FIRST.

For most families, the most profitable way to invest capital for living is in their own needs first. Many families have from $1,000 to $5,000 of capital. But it lies half idle, earning 2 or 3 per cent while the family pays 12 to 36 per cent to finance cars and household goods, 4 to 9 per cent to finance housing and repairs, and so on.

People seem afraid to use their own savings, even when profit is guaranteed and there is no risk, as in self-financing. Be your own banker and you'll make your money earn more.

Left in bonds or savings accounts, $1,000 of "living" capital would amount to only $1,300 in 10 years. But working full time, here are some of the things it can do:

It can save you $125-$150 a year if used as a revolving fund to finance purchases of your own cars and household goods. You have additional opportunities for saving 8 to 25 per cent by prepaying insurance bills, anticipating your needs for clothing and household goods at sales, and buying fuel ahead of the season. Reinvesting those savings by prepaying your mortgage, or in other comparatively secure investment, your growing capital can again earn 4 to 6 per cent. You too can invest in real estate as many investors do — in your own house.

In many cases, in 10 years $1,000 of capital for living can thus grow to $3,000-$4,000 — a good backlog against unemployment and illness. And even though in your later years there are not as many opportunities for large earnings through self-investment, there are enough so that for many people the $3,000 can more than double.

A representative modest budget for a typical retired couple living in a medium-sized city — which would maintain decency and basic care if not many extra comforts — would cost, at early 1955 prices, about $200. In planning your retirement fund, the earlier you start the less you need to save. A man aged 45 starts buying a $37.50 Government bond a month. At 65 he will have a retirement fund of $12,000. Another man waits until 55 but buys a $75 bond a month. At 65 he will have $10,000. Both will have invested the same $9,000 but the early starter accumulates 20 per cent more money.

6 MAKE YOUR MONEY MAKE MORE MONEY.

By investing knowingly and early, even conservative investments will double your money in about 15 years. The foundation of your investment program is savings accounts and savings bonds.

Most thoughtful investment advisors feel that in addition to its budget reserves for health care and depreciation, a family ought to have at least six months' to a year's living expenses in readily available savings, such as banks and par-value savings bonds, before it considers other types of investment.

Here are brief evaluations of different savings accounts and institutions:

Mutual savings banks. Interest averages 2.6 per cent.

Commercial banks. Average interest: about 1.15 per cent.

Credit unions. Many pay 3 per cent on deposits.

Savings and loan associations. Interest rate of 3 per cent is fairly common and some pay 3½ and even 4.

Postal savings. You get 2 per cent interest (in Mississippi, 1 per cent).

Government savings bonds. Series E bonds return 3 per cent if you hold them the full 10 years.

7 PLAN YOUR INSURANCE TO REALLY PROTECT YOU.

Your life insurance needs to be integrated with your investments, for your investments are also part of your family protection. Your insurance program also needs to be based on an estimate of your family's needs for additional income to supplement its potential social security benefits and your own future need for retirement income.

8 USE COMMUNITY FACILITIES THAT CAN HELP PROTECT YOU.

There are scores of government and community rights and services that can help protect a family in time of crisis — from nursing care for infants to retirement payments for elderly people. Among typical services are:

Community Chest or United Fund.

Catholic Charities, Jewish Family Service, Salvation Army Family Service.

National Homemaker Service of the Division of Social Services, Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington 25, D.C.

Social Security Retirement Benefits (Consult your local Social Security office).

U. S. Children's Bureau, Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. Washington 25, D.C.

9 BUILD YOUR EARNING POWER.

Since potential unemployment is the hardest threat to safeguard against, you need to build your resources there too, just as you build savings. Here your safeguards are increased working skills.

Among the best sources of information on employment prospects are the booklets published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Labor Dept., Washington 25, D.C. Also consult the Occupational Handbook and Job Guide for Young Workers.

Keep in mind that work competence is only one phase of job security. Along with developing skill it is a fundamental part of any job to be aware of the importance of getting along with others, and thus create mutual respect and cooperation.

▶ By following these nine tested principles, you can make your dollars go farther — and build a secure future for yourself and your family. ■

DOLLAR DO'S AND DON'TS

DO pay off your debts as soon as possible.

DO beware of "Christmas" accounts, which pay no interest, sometimes even charge "fines."

DO base your budget on net income — what you actually take home after withholdings for taxes and social security.

DO shop for low-cost food alternatives (canned vegetables, margarine, skim milk powder, etc.).

DO save money by collecting supermarket ads near the end of the week, then planning a week's menus in advance on the specials.

DO invest "sweat equity" — your own labor — by maintaining and improving your own property.

DON'T fall into the costly trap of having somebody else budget for you.

DON'T let your money lie idle. Be your own banker and make secure investments.

DON'T obligate yourself for luxuries before necessities are paid for.

NURSERY SCHOOL students get their first safety lesson—the meaning of a red light--from Evansville Police Lt. Chuck Hoover.

Safety 'Test Tube'

Evansville, Indiana is showing how a city can make its streets safe

by SID ROSS

EVANSVILLE, IND. When a parade of 300 white-belted schoolboys wound through the streets here recently, the occasion was almost a civic celebration. For the second straight year, the city had been cited by the National Safety Council for having the nation's best school traffic safety education program among cities of 100,000 to 200,000 population. To Evansville, this was a real victory in a seven-year, community-wide campaign to make its streets safe

Recognition of its safety patrol also indicated that the city might be winning the war as well as the battle. In 1948, a group of 12 safety organizations wanted a spot to try out the recommendations of the President's Highway Safety Conference. They settled on Evansville, which has a reputation as the typical American city (advertising men often use it to test new campaigns, politicians to send up trial balloons), as a "test tube."

That summer the safety campaign began with a bang. The city adopted a 10-point program calling for a whole new approach to traffic and traffic safety — a study of traffic flow and parking needs, rewriting of traffic laws, improving the records system, cracking down on violations and shaking up the traffic court, protecting pedestrians and, above all, making everyone in Evansville safety-conscious.

For a while things went swimmingly. Traffic deaths, at a high of 24 in 1947, fell steadily, even though more and more cars jammed the streets. In 1948 and 1949, Evansville was first in Indiana in traffic safety; in 1950, it was second in the state, sixth in its population group in the nation.

CRUMPLED AUTO is used to teach a grim safety lesson in annual parade honoring Evansville's school safety patrolmen.

Then the good work began to slip. In 1951, traffic deaths climbed to 16; in 1952, to 18; in 1953, to 20. The National Safety Council stung the city with its annual report, which declared that Evansville had shown "very little improvement" and rated it 25th in its group for 1953.

But when the Council's report for 1954 is issued this fall, Evansville expects to be near the top again. The poor showing in 1953 inspired a redoubled effort in 1954, and the crackdown paid off: deaths fell from 20 to 11, accidents from 3,394 to 2,331. (The 1955 dividends are even bigger: only three were killed in this year's first five months, compared to five in a similar period of 1954.)

The 1954 program outdid all the previous six years of work. City Traffic Engineer Paul W. Rice (the man who originated the increasingly popular "Yield Right of Way" sign) blueprinted a series

PATROL PARADE includes motorcycle and mounted escort, antique autos, city officials. After parade, school patrolmen get merit scrolls, then a free outing at local amusement park.

SAFETY CHECK starts with license inspection (above). Other patrolmen will check brakes, lights, wipers, tires.

TRAFFIC ENGINEER Paul Rice inspects new expressway which will reduce congestion, cut accidents in Evansville.

School kids show their elders how to run a safety program of overpasses to eliminate traffic bottlenecks. The city began installation of new, radio-controlled traffic lights. The Retail Merchants Association started a survey of downtown traffic and parking conditions.

City police, sharply criticized in the 1953 report, got tough. They arrested twice as many violators as in 1953, got twice as many convictions. They drafted a new ordinance allowing School Safety Patrolmen to testify in court, like policemen. They instituted radar speed checks. ("It's getting tough to find speeders in Evansville," Lt. John Reutter, head of the Traffic Division, says.) Cars equipped with loudspeakers were stationed at strategic corners to warn pedestrians against jaywalking and crossing against the lights.

The backbone of the police crackdown, however, has been the "courtesy inspection" or "safety check lane" program. Not a new idea, it has proved itself a remarkable accident preventive in Evansville. Last year, police ran checks for a full three months, found 4,198 violations in 9,397 cars checked. The inspections cost the driver nothing, but violations must be corrected within five days.

A "check lane" is set up simply by driving to a previously arranged spot (drivers get no advance warning), marking the lane with yellow cones and flagging down every passing car. The first member of the checking team passes on registrations and license plates. Then the driver is told to "drive up to that next policeman," who suddenly flashes a card reading "STOP." (Sometimes this test is too effective. One woman carrying a vase of flowers in the back seat of her auto jumped the brakes so suddenly that she was doused with water and strewn with blossoms.) After this brake test, inspectors check lights, windshield wipers, exhaust, glass, steering and tires.

Far from evading the check lanes, Lieutenant Reutter finds, many drivers go out of their way to look for them. There has been some protest about the times and places chosen. Once, on "Dollar Day," police flagged down a flock of shopping-bent housewives, who wailed that they were missing out on the bargains. Again, an early-morning check flushed a number of wives who had been driving their husbands to work and were, as Reutter puts it, "wearing just any old thing" — and often not too much of that.

All 1954's concentration of effort was aimed at bringing safety work with adults up to the level of work with — and for — children. The Junior Chamber of Commerce felt that youngsters were protecting themselves pretty well, but still were being endangered by negligent adults. Accordingly, the Jaycees launched a "Watch Out for Kids" campaign, and gave it the full treatment. The Jaycees sell "Watch Out for Kids" rubber stamps for $1 each. Their "safety wagon" tours the city and broadcasts safety talks. Last month, a "Watch Out for Kids" radio-TV show carried the message into thousands of homes; an upcoming contest will award prizes for the most "Watch Out for Kids" clippings collected from the local newspaper.

Evansville remains proudest of the way its children have set the pace in the safety campaign. Known as the birthplace of the schoolboy patrol (in 1921), Evansville gives its school patrolmen a solid grounding in traffic regulations, first aid, civic responsibility. The police safety instructor, Lt. C. B. (Chuck) Hoover, persuaded local businessmen to contribute uniforms — overseas cap, shoulder patch, raincoat and boots for rainy weather, parka for winter. Each of the 38 schools has two platoons of patrolmen. Senior Patrolmen (eighth-graders) stand guard four times a day, four days a week; Juniors take over on the fifth day.

Safety, "Dragnet" Style

Hoover also aims to reach the rest of the student body with the gospel of safety. One gimmick has been a monthly slogan contest for fifth-graders and up, with cash prizes and public acclaim as the reward. (Sample winner: "Looking for a permanent rest? Signal east, then turn west!") And recently the safety patrolmen of Daniel Wertz grade school put on a television show a la Dragnet, written by one of the boys and underplayed by junior Joe Fridays. To a dum-da-dum-dum accompaniment, the hero and his partner tracked down a particularly bad case of "careless jaywalking." The show was such a hit that it later went "on the road" to various school auditoriums.

With the youngsters showing the way, Evansville now feels that it's licking the overall problem of traffic safety. "We sort of slipped the last few years," says Harry Thompson, executive secretary of the Mayor's Traffic Safety Commission. "But now we're clicking again. We've lived up to six points of the model package program. We'll keep working until we're okay on all 10."

Teen-age Questions

Q. If you and a boy like each other very much and another boy asks you out on a date, should you accept or will you hurt your boy friend's feelings? — A. H., Linden, N. J.

A. I cannot approve of steady dating at an early age. If a girl is seen steadily in the company of one boy, others might not attempt to ask her for a date. Thus she would not allow herself the time and experience necessary to form her taste.

Q. I am 16 and have a boy friend whom I see quite often. My parents feel that I should limit my dates to skating, tennis, swimming or the ice-cream parlor. I agree but an occasional movie date would be nice. What do you think? — B. S., Augusta, Ga.

A. Your parents have probably seen teen-aged couples snuggled together in the back of the theater, oblivious to what is happening on the screen. Perhaps you could discuss this matter with them frankly and say that you would not be party to that kind of public behavior. You might suggest that another couple of whom your parents approve go along with you, on the theory that there is "safety in numbers."

Q. I would like to know if it's proper to have a boy in while I am baby-sitting. — P. J., Mercer, Pa.

A. When you are baby-sitting you are on a serious job. You should not be permitted to have a boy visit you at such a time. His presence might divert your attention from your job — and the situation would not be safe for you from the standpoint of possible gossip.

Rare egret makes rounds of Florida homes

CALLING: When Frances appears on one of her regular visits, Mrs. Amsden "entertains" her in the television room.

VIGIL: Frances also frequents the dock, hunting a meal of small fish.

Amsden of Lewis Island for a handout. The snowy bird is partial to roast beef, shrimps.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

The No. 1 citizen of tiny Lewis Island, in Big Bayou here, is a magnificent snow-white egret named Frances.

This rare bird is the special pet of summer dwellers along Sunset Drive, whom Frances visits regularly, morning and evening. Like a dignified matron, she stalks imperiously up to the door, waits to be admitted and then cadges a handout.

Frances and her spouse, Bill, were flushed out of their retreat on the previously untouched part of the island about six months ago by bulldozers. Apparently deprived of their food supply, the birds began panhandling along Sunset Drive.

Photographer Sam Shere, who took these pictures, swears Frances is camera-conscious. One evening she landed on the roof of his cottage and Mrs. Shere coaxed her down with raw hamburger. Next morning Frances showed up for breakfast.

Although Frances is a regular visitor, Bill rarely shows up. The Sunset Drive people figure he prefers to let his wife make the family's social contacts. ■

GOOD MORNING: Ready for breakfast, Frances appears at open window of a Sunset Drive home. Going from house to house, Frances will call at kitchen door if there is no answer at front.

Mazola

Everybody's favorite fried chicken—crisp on the outside, juicy and flavorful inside—when prepared by this new Mazola® method.

"No solid shortening can match Mazola Oil for frying...here's why I want you to try it."

says ARTHUR GODFREY

Foods taste better because you fry right...at the correct high temperature with no smoking... and "KEEP CALORIES DOWN".

ARTHUR GODFREY's right! With Mazola you fry food at a higher temperature than ordinary fats allow. And with no smoking or burning!

Food can't get fat-soaked. The quick-crusting action of Mazola oil gives food a golden brown crust fast—seals flavor and juices in, keeps "extra" calories in the pan.

All your Mazola fried foods taste better... look better, and are truly digestible, too.

This low-calorie Mazola method works for chicken, fish, French fried potatoes—all your favorite fried foods. So take Arthur's advice: Get Mazola Oil today!

For pan-frying and deep-frying always pre-heat Mazola to 375°F. before food is added. To test temperature, use a frying thermometer...or 1-inch square of day-old bread which turns golden brown in 15 seconds when pan-frying, in 30-40 seconds when deep-frying.

Arthur says: "No store-bought dressing can possibly have the fresh flavor, downright goodness of your own homemade dressing... so easy with golden Mazola Oil!"

Have you tried the new, easy Mazola No-Roll Pie Crust? Make, shape, bake right in the pie pan. No rolling. Recipe on label. Makes a wonderfully rich, tender pie crust.

TROPICAL CREAM MOLD

Here's a warm-weather dessert with delightful new flavor

by Beth Merriman, FOOD EDITOR

Have you discovered the flavor-appeal of dairy-made chocolate-flavored milk? Not just as a beverage, but as a recipe ingredient, too? If there is someone in your family who is not fond of milk "as is," you may find that a bottle or carton of chocolate-flavored milk in the refrigerator will prove tempting as a between-meals or bedtime snack. We used it in this delicious dessert, where its flavor blends beautifully with the mellow flavor of bananas. For the main course, how about grilled chopped steak, corn-on-the-cob, green beans and a tossed tomato salad?

TROPICAL CREAM MOLD

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
2½ cups chocolate milk
3 eggs, separated
¼ cup sugar
⅔ cup mashed ripe banana
1 cup whipping cream

Soften gelatin in ¾ cup chocolate milk. Beat egg yolks; combine with remaining chocolate milk; beat well. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Add gelatin; stir until dissolved. Chill until slightly thickened. Meanwhile, beat egg whites stiff; gradually add sugar, beating constantly, until very stiff. Fold egg whites and banana into gelatin mixture. Whip cream; fold in. Turn into 6-cup mold; chill until firm. Unmold; garnish with fresh mint and banana slices, if desired. Makes eight servings.

KITCHEN HINT:
"Chocolate milk" indicates a beverage made with whole milk; "chocolate drink," one made with milk of lower fat content.

BARBARA STANWYCK:

SHE'S INDESTRUCTIBLE

HOLLYWOOD.

A few weeks ago screen star Barbara Stanwyck tripped on a clothes hanger and fell down two flights of service stairs in her Holmby Hills mansion. Shortly her physician announced she might have suffered a possible fracture of the spine or hip. But most members of the film colony refused to accept that.

"It's impossible!" cracked one RKO press agent. "Stanny is scheduled to start Love's Lovely Counterfeit here in three weeks. Don't worry. She'll see to it that she's okay."

As it turned out, the actress suffered only painful bruises in the sacroiliac region and was able to make a fairly rapid recovery. In doing so she continued to perpetuate Hollywood's long-standing legend concerning Barbara Stanwyck: she is indestructible and her beauty is eternal.

At 48, after 25 hectic Hollywood years and 77 motion pictures, Barbara occupies a special niche in the hearts of the moviemakers. They love her for her courage, her Irish flame, her earthy frankness, her good heart, her businesslike promptness and her total lack of female venom.

Says Douglas Sirk, who recently directed her in There's Always Tomorrow: "The kind of cooperation Stanny gives a director is incredible. She's the first one on the set. She's never been late. She knows everyone's lines. It's just hard to believe that after all these years a big star like her can generate such fresh and overwhelming enthusiasm."

Adds director Bill Wellman: "Stanwyck is one in a million. Where else are you going to find an actress who refuses to dye her gray hair? What other actress do you know, young or old, who insists on doing her own stunts?"

Practically all movie queens lie about their age, but not Barbara. "I've never been afraid," she says, "to tell anyone that I was born on July 16, 1907. And I'm not afraid now.

"I've never quite understood why most women want to be young forever. Youth is such a fleeting thing. Instead of trying to hold back the years, it's far better in my book to live each day as it comes, to give as little thought as possible to how old you are, to concentrate on making yourself a better person.

"I feel genuinely sorry for women who try so desperately to hold on to their 20s or 30s. Frankly, I'm glad to be out of mine.

"One of the most important aids for anyone who wants to stay really young is to keep busy. A busy woman just doesn't have time enough to wrap up her entire life in what she sees in a mirror. This mirror business can be murder. You become so determined to look young that you tense up, you start to worry. And worrying about age only adds more wrinkles.

"I love to work. When I'm not working I'm miserable. I've had people tell me I was crazy making more than one or two pictures a year. 'That's no way to enjoy stardom,' they say. But they don't realize that idleness helps make the calendar an enemy. I love picture-making. I love being on the go.

"And somehow I can't seem to get worked up about age or clothes or how I look. Maybe that's the real secret of youth. Serenity. I think serenity does more for a woman than anything else."

Just how serene Barbara Stanwyck is at this point in her eventful life, no one really knows. She has never been one to unburden her soul. An intimate of hers says, "She is serene in that she is calm, tranquil and reconciled to the status quo. But you must not equate serenity with happiness. After all, Missy has no husband and to be husbandless in Hollywood is almost a major tragedy."

Barbara Stanwyck has not always been husbandless. In her adulthood she has known two. Unfortunately both were actors: Frank Fay, a militant drinker out of vaudeville, and Robert Taylor, a too-handsome thespian out of Nebraska.

She was 20 when she first met Frank Fay. And she had had it rough. Born in Brooklyn and christened Ruby Stevens, she was orphaned at 2 when her mother died and, shortly, her father deserted his five children. Ruby was "boarded out" to various families, eventually went to live with an elder sister who worked as a chorus girl.

"In the environment in which I grew up," she recalls, "kids existed on the brink of domestic or financial disaster. We were alert, precocious and savage. I endured this world by developing a bitter hatred of it. I tried to escape by retreating to a dream world of my own."

When Ruby was 12, she quit school and went to work for the telephone company. A few weeks later she was fired for arguing with an irate subscriber. She next landed a job in a publisher's pattern department, only to be let out for giving faulty instructions to a customer. From that point on she decided on a career in show business.

Borrowing her sister's dress and high-heeled shoes, rouging her face and painting her lips, Ruby Stevens at 14 began to make the rounds of the casting offices. For the next few years she shuttled from one chorus line to another, paying the high tuition necessary for admission to Broadway's University of Experience. With two other chorines, Mae Clarke and Wanda Mansfield, she lived in a dreary, cold-water, walk-up room. When money was short, the girls ate on credit at Billy La Hiff's Tavern on 48th Street.

One night producer Willard Mack came into the Tavern for dinner. La Hiff quickly walked up with Ruby Stevens, made introductions. Upshot: Mack gave Ruby an acting part in his play, The Noose.

A Name Is Born

When the play opened in New York, he also gave her a new name. "Ruby Stevens," he told her, "is no name for a star." His eye fell on a wall poster that read "Jane Stanwyck in Barbara Fritchie." That did it.

The Noose ran for eleven months on Broadway, and Barbara Stanwyck became a star. She then was signed by Arthur Hopkins for the role of Bonny Johnson in Burlesque. This play has been repeated on screen and television half a dozen times. It's the story of a drinking vaudevillian whose wife, a chorus girl, stays at his side through every bitter, disillusioning experience.

For Barbara Stanwyck, the play was a preview of her marriage to Frank Fay.

Barbara gave this marriage everything she had. She abandoned Broadway and came to Hollywood with Fay because he had a studio contract. While Fay, one of the wittiest men alive, sparkled at Hollywood parties, Barbara sat on the sidelines, the dutiful wife.

Then, with her husband's blessing, Barbara entered the movie game. Her second picture, Ladies of Leisure, made her a Hollywood name for keeps.

Meanwhile Fay's star began to wane. Frustrated, he became difficult to live with. Barbara suggested a stage show. Fay was billed as the lead. Barbara was also in the show. It was quite bad, but Barbara kept it going by paying the cast out of her $3,000-a-week movie salary.

Nothing helped — not even Dion Anthony, the son the Fays had adopted in 1932. Fay continued to drink and Barbara continued to become more famous. In 1935 she filed for divorce.

For her second husband Barbara chose an actor four years younger than she. This marriage endured for more than a decade. Then Taylor, on location in Rome for Quo Vadis, happened to make the acquaintance of an Italian starlet named Lia de Leo. To the casual observer, this appeared to create a triangle with Taylor and de Leo on one side.

RELAXING on the set of her latest film, There's Always Tomorrow, Barbara treads a few measures with co-star Fred MacMurray.

Actually, their friendship had little to do with the 1952 divorce of Bob and Barbara. Friends attribute this breakup to basic differences. Stanwyck is an indoors girl who reads at least one book every two days; Taylor is an outdoors man who loves fishing and hunting. He has his own plane, was a Naval flight instructor during the war; Stanwyck hates to fly. Taylor has never coveted work, is still embarrassed at being a screen star. Unless she is working, Barbara is unhappy.

Work, constant, challenging work is probably the greatest love in Barbara Stanwyck's life. It is the source of her strength, the balm for her marital mishaps, the fountainhead of her beauty. When asked, for example, when she intends to retire, she comes up with one stock answer: "They'll have to carry me off feet first."

Until they do, Hollywood will continue to rank Barbara Stanwyck as its kindest, frankest, most lovable, most durable movie queen. At 48 she is convinced that the best and most fruitful years of her career lie ahead. ■

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON STANWYCK

- Because her trim (5' 5", 115 lbs.) figure measures 33-25-33, Barbara often is asked her diet secret. She has never dieted in her life. She is, however, a raw-meat eater and never touches carbohydrates. Her idea of a good meal: raw beef and champagne.

- Barbara's films include such hits as Stella Dallas, Double Indemnity and Sorry, Wrong Number; currently she gets $150,000 per picture; she has been nominated four times for an Academy Award—but has never won an Oscar. Her reaction: "They may have to wheel me up, but sooner or later I'll get one!"

- Although she refuses flatly to discuss her charities, Barbara is one of the most open-handed actresses in Hollywood history. Example: Each Christmas she reserves a dozen tables for indigent actors at the famous Brown Derby restaurant, picks up the check for all the food and drinks they can stow away.

- Barbara is a lifelong Republican. On a wall of her home, alongside paintings by Maurice Utrillo and Paul Clemens, hangs an autographed photograph of President Eisenhower.

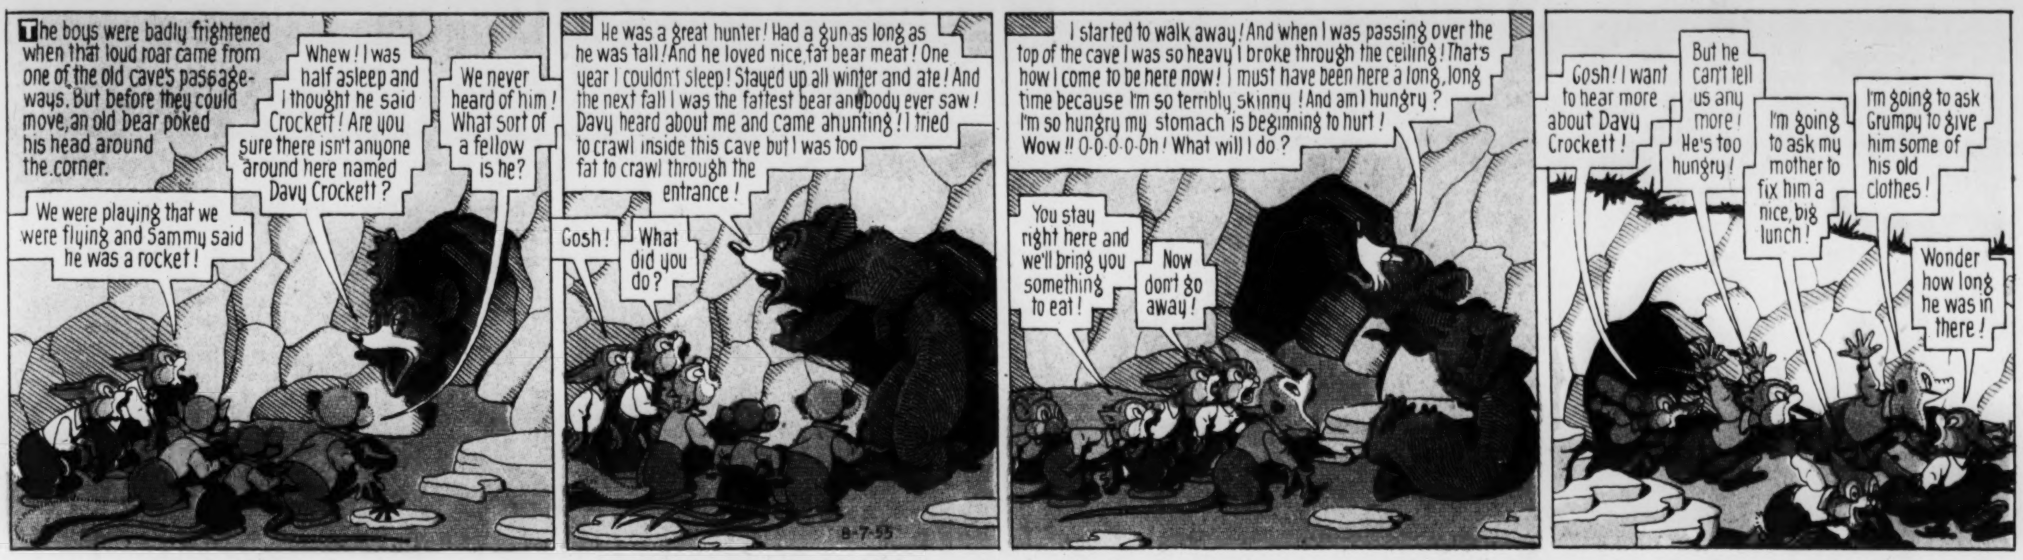
HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

By WALTER QUERMANN



The boys were badly frightened when that loud roar came from one of the old cave's passageways. But before they could move, an old bear poked his head around the corner.
Whew! I was half asleep and I thought he said Crockett! Are you sure there isn't anyone around here named Davy Crockett?
We never heard of him! What sort of a fellow is he?
We were playing that we were flying and Sammy said he was a rocket!
He was a great hunter! Had a gun as long as he was tall! And he loved nice fat bear meat! One year I couldn't sleep! Stayed up all winter and ate! And the next fall I was the fattest bear anybody ever saw! Davy heard about me and came ahunting! I tried to crawl inside this cave but I was too fat to crawl through the entrance!
Gosh!
What did you do?
8-7-55
I started to walk away! And when I was passing over the top of the cave I was so heavy I broke through the ceiling! That's how I come to be here now! I must have been here a long, long time because I'm so terribly skinny! And am I hungry? I'm so hungry my stomach is beginning to hurt! Wow!! O-O-O-O-Oh! What will I do?
You stay right here and we'll bring you something to eat!
Now don't go away!
Gosh! I want to hear more about Davy Crockett!
But he can't tell us any more! He's too hungry!
I'm going to ask my mother to fix him a nice, big lunch!
I'm going to ask Grumpy to give him some of his old clothes!
Wonder how long he was in there!

OF ALL THE DUMB STUNTS TO PULL, JONES! TURNING DOWN THE SAFE-DRIVING AWARD BECAUSE YOU SCRAPED A FENDER COMING HERE! THAT TAKES THE CAKE! YOU'VE NOT ONLY MADE YOURSELF A LAUGHING-STOCK, YOU'VE MADE A FOOL OUT OF ME!
AND THIS IS AN ELECTION YEAR! NOW WOULD YOU MIND TAKING YOURSELF CLEAR OUT OF HERE, MR. JONES—AND STAYING OUT!
WELL, I SUPPOSE HIZZONER REALLY READ THE RIOT ACT TO YOU— AND FRANKLY, I DON'T BLAME HIM!
HE DID SEEM A BIT ON THE UPSET SIDE, HONEY.
CAN I QUOTE YOU, MR. MAYOR? I MEAN ABOUT HOWARD JONES BEING A FOOL? O.K., THANKS!
HEY, KIDS! LOOK AT THIS! POPS, YOU'RE ACTUALLY FAMOUS!
8-7
Who's The Fool?
HOWARD JONES is an ordinary citizen of Devon. Yesterday he was offered the plaque given annually to the driver with the safest record. Howard Jones refused the award. Why? Because he had suffered a minor collision on his way to the ceremony. Our mayor's comment was—He's a fool. Our comment? He's an honest man—and a courageous one! We like Howard Jones. As a matter of fact, we like him enough to think that this city can use a man like him on its payroll. What do you think?
